Hauptmann, Trapped By Lies, Uses Phrase Written by Kidnaper

Claim Money Came From Fur Dealer Shaken in Grilling.

Carpenter Repeats Crime Note Words

Admits He Was Planning Return to Germany This Year.

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 29.—Isador Fisch spoke from the grave today and told a tale that trapped and tangled Bruno Richard Hauptmann into admitting that he had spent the last three years passing from one shabby lie to another.

They raked up from everywhere all there was to know about Fisch. Where and how he lived; how much money he had, when and where he died, and what he and Hauptmann did in the years when they set out to try to earn 20 per cent return on a fur business and beat the stock market with their profits.

Then Attorney General David T. Wilentz laid this tightly-knit narrative in Hauptmann's lap, and asked him to explain a score of contradictions in his testimony. Hauptmann lifted his hands helplessly and muttered:

"I don't know what I said."

Mrs. Hauptmann will follow her husband on the stand, possibly today.

Hauptmann's Letters Help.

Fisch might as well have been a witness himself today, for the story that they built around him pictured him not as a man swaggering through life with $50,000 ransom, but as one beaten by fate, doomed by his poverty to live in a frowsy hall bedroom and finally to die of tuberculosis and in poverty.

Hauptmann himself helped to write that story. For it was letters that he sent to Fisch's relatives in Germany that filled in the gaps.

Fisch was a fur cutter working at some vague place down in the New York wholesale district. Hauptmann was a carpenter. They decided to go into business, because Fisch had accumulated $20,000 in furs and told Hauptmann they could turn a 20 per cent profit. That is all about their relationship that can be stated as fact, because regarding the rest of it, witnesses differ.

Hauptmann said Fisch came to him and handed him $15,000.

"We were going to play stocks, 50-50," the witness added. "We were to be 50-50 in the fur business and 50-50 in the stock market money."

Says Fisch Kept Records.

"Just a minute," broke in Wilentz. "In all your account books there is not a single record of Fisch ever having given you $15,000. There is no record of Fisch ever having put in a dollar more than $2,000."

"There is no record, because he kept those records," Hauptmann retorted.

"Did you ever buy a certificate of stock in Isador Fisch's name?"

"No."

"Can you give me the name of any fur dealers that you dealt with in your fur business?"

"No."

"What happened to the $15,000 you say Fisch gave you?"

"We lost it in the stock market."

Hauptmann wanted to say that the reason he played the stock market so heavily after April, 1932—when the Lindbergh ransom was paid—was because Fisch gave him money to do it with. Wilentz was trying to make him admit that Fisch never gave him $15,000; that Hauptmann was using $50,000 of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's money in the stock deals.

Planned Trip to Germany.

In the midst of this intricate financial testimony Hauptmann allowed a damaging phrase to roll off his lips. He said he was getting his affairs in order the latter part of last year so he would be ready to sail for Germany early in 1935.

"That trip was planned for a year already," he said.

Wilentz leaped at him with this question:

"You remember yesterday you read one of the Lindbergh ransom notes for me here in the courtroom? It said 'because this kidnaping was planned for a year already.' Then you read me another ransom note that said 'this kidnaping was prepared for a year already.' You've heard those two statements, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"Your statement a minute ago was 'that was planned for a year already.' That's your manner of speaking, isn't it?"

"Well, how would you say it?" He shot back at Wilentz.

"I would say 'planned for a year' or 'was under preparation a year.' I wouldn't say 'a year already.'"

Then they went back to Fisch.

Hauptmann said their fur business and their stock market operations continued. Sometimes they made profits, sometimes they lost. Occasionally, Hauptmann said, he took money out of his private bank

Police Flaws Blamed Upon Civil Service

Schulte Assails System for Demoralization of Department.

Plans Bill Providing Promotions on Basis of Merit.

By J. Bernard McDonnell

The civil service system of appointment and promotion of policemen in the National Capital is measurably responsible for demoralization of the District Police Department and resultant crime conditions, Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, said yesterday at the executive hearings before the special House District Crime Committee.

When the hearings have been ended, Mr. Schulte said, he will introduce a measure which would be the basis of appointment and promotion to what he called a "merit system."

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who was on the witness stand, agreed with Mr. Schulte that the present system prevented him fom promoting some very good men who could not pass the civil service examination, although 50 per cent of their rating for promotion is based on experience and efficiency in their jobs.

Merit Promotions Urged.

"But," qualified Maj. Brown, "you would agree that there should be a civil service examination prior to entry?"

"It all depends on what the questions would be, major."

"You realize we have men with a certain degree of education" Maj. Brown said.

"I grant that, but after all, they should be promoted on their merits," Representative Schulte replied.

Maj. Brown paused a moment, started to speak, did not, and looked like a man who was trying to say what he wished to say without creating too much antagonism.

"I would go along with you on that," he finally said, "if we could be free, without interference or influence, to pick the best men for promotion."

Objects to Some Questions.

Representative Schulte made no answer. There was a moment of silence. Representative Theodore B. Werner (Democrat), of South Dakota, set the wheels in motion again by asking who prepared the civil service questions and heard Maj. Brown again object to some of the civil service questions.

"The reason I mentioned the civil service," Representative Schulte said a few minutes earlier, "is that I believe it is the thing that is demoralizing your force. I am going to lay a part of the crime condition in Washington to it."

Maj. Brown, Mr. Schulte said, might not have been police chief if he had had to submit to civil service questions about how long it would take a fish to swim across a room. Some of the questions cited would have stumped him, Maj. Brown admitted.

Lieut. Little, in charge of the vice squad, was cited as an example of the harmful effect of civil service examinations on the police force.

Cites Lieut. Little's Case.

"I will illustrate it with one case," the police chief said. "I have a lieutenant in the department, who has reached the highest official rating, who I believe is doing more to prevent crime and to suppress gambling—and I think the gentlemen of the press will bear me out in this—and that is Lieut. Little. Yet he went before the civil service department and fell down and he is the most discouraged and grieving man I could imagine. Yet if I could pick a captain I would pick Lieut. Little for promotion tomorrow without hesitation."

The proposed major develop-

House Votes To Give RFC 2-Year Life

Bill Rushed to Senate for Concurrence in Amendments.

Mine Owners Get Right to Loans by 'Liberal' Alterations.

A bill to extend the RFC for two years was passed by the House yesterday without a record vote.

The Senate earlier passed a similar measure, but the upper chamber has yet to concur in House amendments, including those by the Banking and Currency Committee to liberalize several loan provisions. Prompt Senate concurrence will be sought as the agency otherwise would have no authority to operate after tomorrow.

One of the principal House amendments would require that loans to industry be so secured as "to reasonably assure repayment." Existing legislation contains stiffer security clauses.

The House bill differed from the Senate proposal in that it provided for:

Loans to closed banks secured by the assets of corporations wholly owned by the banks; loans to finance companies or other credit institutions financing the sale of electrical, plumbing or air-conditioning equipment; loans of not more than $20,000 to owners of small mining properties for development work.

Loan Delays Protested.

House debate was marked by protests from Representatives Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, and O'Connor (Democrat), New York, over delay of the agency in granting loans to industry in the past and its failure to assist private business to a greater extent.

Representative McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, sought unsuccessfully to amend the measure so that all depositors in closed banks would be paid off in full immediately. He said later his proposal would have been approved if rules had permitted him to explain it fully.

"I haven't given up," McLeod said. "I still expect enactment of legislation to abolish the receivership racket and afford the relief so essentially needed by the 10,000,000 depositors of closed banks."

Mine Owners Eligible.

The amendment to permit loans to mine owners for use in developing metal deposits was introduced by Representative Scrughan (Democrat), of Nevada.

"Passage of this amendment," he said, "is a boon to the owner of the small gold or silver property in the West. Private capital is not inclined to invest in such development work and consequently a great deal of ore which has been found is still underground."

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee approved a House bill to authorize issuance of $11,500,000,000 in bonds by the Treasury, including so-called baby securities.

A bill to liberalize and expand the Farm Credit Administration's lending authority was favorably reported by the Senate Banking Committee. The measure probably will be acted on on the floor today.

W. I. Myers, FCA governor, told the committee 82 per cent of installments due under land-bank commissioner loans had been paid. He added nearly two-thirds of the balance was less than three months overdue.

Snow Buries Algiers, Building Crash Kills 1

Algiers, North Africa, Jan. 29 (U.P.). A blizzard sweeping the Sahara Desert buried Algiers under 24 inches of snow today, causing widespread damage and casualties.

Twenty natives were buried when the roof of the French tobacco monopoly warehouse here collapsed. One dead man was removed and four others were gravely injured.

Because of the required two-thirds, pairs had to be arranged on a 2-to-1 basis. Pairs announced were Copeland (Democrat), New York, and Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, for; with Overton (Democrat), Louisiana, against, and Gibson (Republican) Vermont, and Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, for; with McAdoo (Democrat), California, against. 52-36 Ballot Is Shy of the Necessary Two-Thirds.

Robinson Blames Propaganda Drive

'It's Finished,' He Says; New Deal Now Fears for Other Bills.

By Robert C. Albright.

Twelve years of negotiation toward World Court adherence were thrown in the dust heap last night when the United States Senate decisively rejected the Hurst-Root protocol, dealing the Administration its first serious reversal of the session.

The vote was 52 to 36, just seven ballots short of the two-thirds majority needed. Twenty Democrats joined with 14 Republicans in opposition to the resolution, after a last-minute whirlwind of debate in which leadership resorted to every possible stratagem to stave off defeat.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson bluntly charged a national campaign of "unfair, unjust and unreasonable propaganda," was responsible for the result, deluging Senators in the last three days with more than 40,000 telegrams against the protocol.

"It's Over—It's Finished."

"It's over—it's finished," he wearily told newspapermen at the end of the fight.

"This forecloses United States entry into the court for at least an indefinite period. The protocol? I don't know what will become of it. Probably it will go back to the committee."

Leaders of the opposition, notably Senators Hiram Johnson, of California, and William E. Borah, of Idaho (Progressive Republicans), were jubilant. At no time had they expected more than 30 votes against adherence, the bare margin necessary to defeat it.

The immediate outcome was generally regarded as even more significant than the broad international implications. Failure of President Roosevelt to hold Senate Democratic lines in his first major test, was believed to foreshadow a threatening period of rough sledding on other important Administration measures.

Fear for Works Bill.

Outstanding among these is the President's $4,880,000,000 bill for orks and relief, now encountering bipartisan criticism in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

All possible eleventh-hour pressure was brought by the White House on wavering Senators, including one important concession. Calculated to win over some of the doubtful ones was an amendment offered by Senator Elbert D. Thomas, of Utah, specifying that no matters be submitted to the court except by general or special treaties between parties in dispute.

"Won't Be Fooled."

"Who's going to be fooled by this sort of stuff?" shouted Johnson. "Its purpose is to rescue the protocol from defeat now threatening, and bring back to the fold a recalcitrant vote."

Senator George W. Norris (Republican), Nebraska, joined Johnson in the attack, and offered another amendment proposing submission of matters to the court only by "special" treaties, requiring two-thirds Senate ratification. This Norris amendment was rejected, 48 to 39, as a similar proposal was defeated Monday.

One by one a dozen other reservations, not carrying approval of the Administration, were similarly crushed in the six-hour march to a ballot.

When it became apparent a final vote was at hand, Senator Robinson himself took the floor in a scathing arraignment of the "propa-

Allen Will Ask Milk Imports To Cut Costs

Commissioner Moving to Offset Efforts to Lift Relief Price.

A fight over an attempt to increase the price of milk used for relief purposes was started yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen who will ask a revision of the District milk act to enable the Commissioners to import cheaper milk from distant States for distribution to indigent families.

His action came a few minutes after he had learned of the announcement of a new price schedule by producers which would have the effect of boosting the price of relief milk.

Price Lift Foreseen.

In the new distributors price schedule, Commissioner Allen is understood to foresee the basis for price boost to the general consumer, although this is denied by B. B. Derrick, secretary of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association.

As soon as Commissioner Allen heard of the increase he ordered Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal to draft an amendment to the milk act, which would empower the Commissioners to authorize the importation of milk from distant States.

Under the present law, the only milk which may be received here without sanction of the District Health Department is that which is used for manufacturing ice cream. Allen, it is understood, emphasized to Seal that there is to be no letdown in the vigilance of the Health Department. If necessary, he is understood to have instructed Seal, he will send Health officers to make inspections of dairy farms in other

Auto Industry Seeks Renewal Of Code Today

White House Parley Will Decide Issue; Labor Fights Extension.

By Felix Bruner.

Heads of nearly all leading automobile manufacturing concerns will arrive in Washington today to ask for renewal of the automobile code, which expires Friday. The manufacturers are expected to confer with President Roosevelt, who must make the final decision affecting the future of the industry.

Meanwhile, officers of the American Federation of Labor were meeting with 105 presidents of unions comprising the Federation, to outline a legislative program and incidentally to discuss the automobile code. The Federation has expressed itself as unalterably opposed to renewal of the code and the NRA Labor Advisory Board was sticking to its statement that it would rather see no code at all than renewal of the present agreement.

To Demand 30-Hour Week.

With this and lesser labor problems remaining unsolved, the NRA will start today a series of hearings at which all labor provisions in codes will be discussed. It is estimated that these provisions affect 22,000,000 workers. The hearings, which follow those on price fixing provisions, will be thrown open to discussion of all labor problems with the exception of section 7(a) of the recovery act.

The discussion will be opened by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Labor representatives are expected to inject into the discussion their demand for a 30-hour week without pay reduction. Most codes now provide for a 40-hour week.

The Recovery Board already has

U.S. May Raise Highway Cash By 'Gas' Sales

Rear Admiral Christian J. Peoples, chief of Treasury procurement, and prominently identified with the proposed $4,880,000,000 set-up for works and relief, suggested yesterday that the Government might sell gasoline to liquidate highway appropriations, it was learned last night.

Peoples made this suggestion at a hearing yesterday before the Senate Appropriations Committee, when Democrats and Republicans alike peppered him with questions on proposed financing and specific projects in the President's unprecedented measure, it was charged.

Senators declared Peoples said the Government "could" resort to this method of liquidating the projected $400,000,000 of road construction appropriations, but did not assert that it "would."

"Plain Socialization."

"That's plain socialization," retorted Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa, Republican member of the committee, who relentlessly cross-examined Peoples on implications of the bill. "The States would want a little something to say about that."

While the Iowan sought to pin Peoples down on Republican proposals for "earmarking" the fund, Democratic Senators, including Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, committee chairman, bombarded the Administration spokesmen with questions on the works bill.

Despite testimony that all existing relief funds will be exhausted by February 10, members of the committee indicated that at least another week of Senate hearings is

Steps to Check Job Quiz Taken By Roosevelt

Probe Plans Slow Up After Patronage Complainants Go to White House.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

White House pressure was brought to bear yesterday against leaders of a House movement to force an investigation of New Deal patronage.

President Roosevelt, it was authoritatively reported, made known he would promptly consider all congressional protests about spoils distribution if those concerned would submit to him in writing specific instances of failure of department and bureau heads to give Democrats preference over Republicans in filling non-civil service jobs.

Meanwhile, there was confusion in informed quarters over whether the twice-postponed caucus of House Democrats, now scheduled for February 7, ever would be held. It became increasingly obvious that if the caucus does materialize it will be a much tamer affair than it would have been had it been held last week as originally contemplated.

Leaders Summoned.

The President's desire to appease disgruntled members of his own party was made known at a White House conference attended by Speaker Byrns, Chairman Sabath, of the House Steering Committee; Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee; Representative Taylor, Colorado, acting majority leader, and Representative McFarlane, Texas, who championed the petition for the caucus.

All of the President's callers were reluctant to talk about patronage matters when they returned to the Hill. It was learned, however, that

Poderjay, Admitting Bigamy, Says Agnes Tufverson Lives

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Suave Ivan Poderjay—brought to the United States in irons—frankly admitted late today, authorities asserted, that he had bigamously married the missing Agnes Tufverson, but declared that she is still alive.

After exchanging wisecracks with interviewers as he arrived aboard the liner President Polk, the self-styled Yugoslavian "captain" was taken to Jersey City and subsequently to New York police headquarters.

"When the boat arrived as we started questioning Poderjay, he immediately made a statement of his own free will," said Assistant District Attorney Harold W. Hastings. "He was perfectly willing to make a statement and talked freely. He admitted the bigamy."

Miss Tufverson, a New York and Detroit attorney, and Ponderjay were married at the Little Church Around the Corner on December 20, 1933. A few days later she vanished. He sailed for Europe alone on what was to have been their honeymoon. His bride has not been seen since.

Authorities did not announce Poderjay's basis for his assertion that Miss Tufverson is still alive, but Hastings reported the prisoner said his bigamous marriage was performed at the suggestion of his missing wife.

Pressed for an explanation of Miss Tufverson's whereabouts and what happened to her property and personal belongings, Poderjay insisted the last time he saw her was when she boarded a train for Montreal a few days after their marriage. He denied he had received $25,000 from her.

Capital Joins Nation in Paying Birthday Tribute to Roosevelt

High U. S. Officials, Diplomatic Corps to Attend Ball at Shoreham; Proceeds to Aid Infantile Paralysis Victims.

Honoring President Roosevelt on his fifty-third birthday, hundreds of thousands of persons in cities and communities throughout the Nation will participate tonight in a series of special, gay birthday balls.

Proceeds from all the affairs will be devoted to relieving sufferers from infantile paralysis. Seventy per cent of the money realized by each dance will go to local victims of the disease in the various communities, and 30 per cent will go to the National Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research.

Washington's principal birthday tribute to Mr. Roosevelt will be the birthday ball at the Shoreham Hotel. Led by Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger, making her first public appearance since her marriage, the affair will be attended by members of the Cabinet and Diplomatic Corps, and hundreds of persons prominent in the Capital's social life.

Nationally prominent entertainers have donated their services to the ball. Foremost among them is Eddie Cantor, who is expected to arrive in Washington today. Three well-known orchestras—Meyer Davis', Sidney's Mayflower Orchestra and Maxim Loew's Shoreham Orchestra—have agreed to furnish the music. Featured among the entertainers are Rubinoff, Phil Baker and the Gypsy Chorus from a Russian night club.

At a special family dinner tonight the President will celebrate his birthday with members of his family. The cake will have but 21 candles, in accordance with the Roosevelt family custom.

The menu for the birthday dinner will be clam cocktail, clear soup with whipped cream, turkey with chestnut dressing, cranberry jelly, string beans, scalloped corn, mashed potatoes, grape fruit, avocado salad, ice cream, birthday fruit cake and coffee. A 182-pound cake was received yesterday for the President by Marvin McIntyre from

$14,710,000 Wholesale Trade Reflects 13.5% Gain in 1934

Wholesalers proper, who did 40.4 per cent of total wholesale business in 1933, increased their dollar sales 13.5 per cent in 1934 over 1933, it was announced today in a statement of C. T. Murchison, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Dollar sales by this group, which does not include manufacturers' sales branches, bulk tank stations, chain store warehouses, assemblers, country buyers and agents and brokers who handle merchandise on a wholesale basis, were $14,710,000,000 in 1934, compared to $12,950,000,000 in 1933.

Based upon reliable statistics, the statement said that each kind of business increased its sales in 1934 over 1933. The decline in the dollar sales of wholesalers proper from the high point of 1929 has been definitely checked, although the sales of farm products, grocery and food products recovered a year earlier.

"Using 1929 actual figures as 100," the statement declared, "total sales dropped to 46 by 1932 and to 44 by 1933. Although the 1934 figure is only 50 per cent of that of 1929, it indicates a better year for wholesalers proper than either 1932 or 1933."

Distributors of automotive parts showed the largest increase, 26 per cent. Electrical goods came second with a 20 per cent gain.

Hotel Official Held on Charge He Hid Karpis

Miamian Faces Jury Quiz on Claim He Aided Kidnap Suspect.

"Joe" Adams, hotel operator and dog track manager, was arrested in Miami, Fla., yesterday by Department of Justice agents, charged with harboring Alvin Karpis, Bremer kidnaping suspect, who recently shot his way out of a police trap at Atlantic City, N. J.

The Department of Justice, which announced the arrest here, said that Karpis was reported to have stayed at his hotel in Miami.

He will be held in custody until next Monday, agents said, and at that time evidence against him will be presented to the grand jury. Later he will be taken to St. Paul, Minn., it is expected. It was in that city that Edward G. Bremer was kidnaped and held for a $200,000 ransom, which was paid.

Karpis and Harry Campbell, who are being sought intensively by Justice agents following the Atlantic City affray, are believed to have been in Florida shortly before Fred Barker and his mother were shot to death in a skirmish with 15 Federal agents near Oklawaha, in that State.

Reports from the South to the department today, according to the Associate Press, were that no portion of the Bremer ransom had been recovered as a result of the capture of Adams.

Adams claimed he rented the winter home of his business associate, Carson Bradford, at Oklawaha, to a man and woman, later identified as Fred Barker and his mother. Adams said he handled the rent transaction for Bradford last November.

Department of Justice agents already have taken into custody a man booked as Henry "Duke" Randall, employe at the dog track operated by Adams. He is charged with harboring and concealing the fugitive.

Rural Electrical Problems Invited

Consumers Are Asked to State Demands.

Richmond, Jan. 29 (AP).—Rural residents who have wanted, but have been unable to obtain, electric power, were invited today by the Virginia Corporation Commission to let it know about their problems.

The information received in response to this request, which came from H. Lester Hooker, chairman of the commission, will be used by Allen Saville, consulting engineer, who has been appointed to make a survey of the possibilities of rural electrification.

This study, in cooperation with one undertaken by the State planning commission, is intended to serve a double purpose. It will be turned over to Public Works Administration officials and sent to Washington for use in connection with President Roosevelt's plas for relief work through rural electrification, and it also will be used in a persuasive way by the State Corporation Commission to persuade power companies to enter new territory.

Between You and Me

The Worm Turns; the World Court Circus; Jesse Becomes Scribe; a Firecracker Case.

By Raymond Clapper

By Raymond Clapper.

THE Senate recovered a brief hour of its former glory yesterday at the climax of the World Court fight. Congress has been in eclipse much of the time since the New Deal enthroned executive power on new heights, but yesterday was different, in the Senate at least. The worm turned.

The Administration suddenly had become alarmed. Defeat appeared imminent, as it was. Several hostile Senators were called to the White House and conciliatory gestures were extended. A few days ago Mr. Roosevelt led the movement which killed the Norris reservation. It would have kept the United States from carrying any issue to the World Court without a two-thirds vote of the Senate. The President thought that was an encroachment on executive power.

But in yesterday's anxiety the Administration accepted a reservation which would prevent the United States from resorting to the court without first negotiating a treaty with the other party. That would require a two-thirds vote.

That seemed to have the same effect as the Norris reservation which had been frowned upon only a few days ago. But finally it was admitted that this later proposal was different in that it would permit a general treaty to be ratified which would allow all controversies arising between the two nations in the future to be submitted to the Court without further ado by the Senate.

What made Senator Hiram Johnson boil was that once he had offered a similar reservation and it was voted down. Now the Administration was using his plan as bait to win votes. Mr. Roosevelt won the trick but despite that he failed to make his bid and went set.

* * * *

Everyone had an important time. Senators were out in starched collars. Galleries were packed. Women were sitting on the steps in the aisles. Gallery walls were lined with standers. A woman with a ten-year-old red-headed boy entered the diplomatic gallery and sat down directly over the clock. The little fellow was so excited that he forgot to remove his hat. A doorkeeper rushed down in great consternation and removed it. The lad, too young to have a Murad handy, tossed his hat up a couple of times and then quieted down. Associate Justice Owen Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, stood for a while just inside the Senate door. Finally Senator Bulkley of Ohio motioned him to sit down in a senatorial chair. Senator Huey Long went into action and Justice Roberts watched with absorbed interest as the young curly-haired Kingfish flailed the air with his arms and said he for one was against going into a court where foreigners with names he couldn't even spell, much less pronounce, would tell the United States where to get off.

Senator Elbert Thomas, of Utah, retorted that Huey didn't spell his name the way most people would pronounce it. Justice Roberts seemed fascinated by the Louisiana political phenomenon and with an expression of amused interest his eye followed Long, who was striding about the chamber. Gallery listeners broke into laughter at Long's sallies, despite the Senate rule of silence. Long is giving them the best show since Tom Heflin left the Senate, but one which is causing others a good deal more worry. When Long speaks, most of the Senators sit with dead-pan expressions.

While the House had the RFC extension bill up yesterday, Chairman Jesse Jones of the RFC occupied a seat in the House press gallery. Government officials are not admitted to the press gallery, but Jones happens to be publisher of the Houston (Tex.) Chronicle and as such is entitled to entrance. Like others in the press gallery, Jones took notes. They won't be published, but they may come in handy for reference purposes when members of the House go to the RFC looking for favors.

Bedy Lizza and Ernest de Blasio were given permission to go ahead with their fireworks factory at Dunbar, Pa. Bedy and Ernest some time ago ran into difficulties when, after starting their plant—total investment $4,000—they learned that the code of the pyrotechnics manufacturing industry forebade any new fireworks factories without specific approval of NRA. So they hired a lawyer and came to Washington.

Thereafter, their enterprise was approved by the Consumers Advisory Board, the Industrial Advisory Board, the Research and Planning Division and the Legal Division of NRA. They ran into temporary trouble, however, when the Labor Advisory Board disapproved their petition on the ground that their enterprise "would in no way contribute to the capital goods market."

In spite of this handicap, however, W. A. Harriman, NRA administrator, yesterday signed an order authorizing the pair to go on back to Dunbar and make firecrackers. The file on the case comprises some 50 typewritten pages and represents many hours of work by lawyers, advisers, economists and other experts.

Secretary Ickes could have saved himself much trouble on Capitol Hill by following the example of Postmaster General Farley. As chief dispenser of patronage, he was mobbed daily. His assistants were having trouble deciding which visitors ought to be put through to General Farley and which ones should be stalled off. Farley hired William J. Bray, a quick young man who had been in charge of the Democratic cloakroom in the House. He knew everybody in Congress and what they rated.

Senator Sheppard, of Texas, a mild and regular Democrat, was kept waiting to see Ickes for three hours, at least it seemed that long. Many other Senators and Representatives have similar grievances. It is one of the crosses that an executive in the Government must bear. When a Senator or Representative asks for an appointment he must get it, though his errand may be something so trivial that an office boy could handle it just as well. Those who deny Senators and Representatives this privilege find eventually that chickens come home to roost. That, mainly, is the basis of the trouble Ickes is having now.

* * * *

Speaking before the American Civic Association the other night, Secretary Ickes explained why it was necessary for him to be tough.

On one occasion, he said, he was asked to allot money for a "self-liquidating cemetery." Investigation disclosed that the project would be self-liquidating only if every person in the town died.

Another proposal put before PWA was for a self-liquidating maternity hospital. PWA experts figured out that the hospital could be made self-liquidating if every woman in the community had one baby a year for 32 years.

State Treasurer Sworn Into Office

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Hooper S. Miles, of Salisbury, president of the County Trust Company of Wicomico County, recently elected to the post of State Treasurer by the General Assembly, today was sworn in by Gov. Harry W. Nice. He succeeds John M. Dennis, of Baltimore, who served 16 years. Mr. Miles, who is 40, is probably the youngest man ever named to the office.

Present at the administration of oath were P. Elliott Burroughs, fellow townsman and close friend of Mr. Miles, and member of the Wicomico delegation in the House; Charles Speicher, chief clerk in the treasurer's office, and several of the clerical force of the executive offices.

Possibility of changing the method of selecting the State treasurer looms as a result of a bill recently introduced into the Legislature. The measure would change the constitution to make the office elective by popular vote, rather than by the assembly. It also would make the post of clerk of the court of appeals, appointive by the judges of the tribunal, instead of elective.

Milk Rehearing Set By Court of Appeals

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—A surprise was sprung today when the Supreme Court of Appeals announced that it would grant a rehearing of the case in which, at its November term, it declared the State milk commission act unconstitutional.

The court, through Chief Justice Campbell, announced that a rehearing was granted. Whether this rehearing will be for the purpose of a possible reversal of the tribunal's former position or simply to give the court an opportunity to define more explicitly its position is something which will be developed at the March term, when the case will be reargued and again submitted.

Allen Will Ask Imports of Milk

States to insure purity of the milk supply.

The producers association informed distributors that beginning February 1, all milk will be sold by the association for 26½ cents a gallon. This applies to all classes of milk, either that sold in bottle form or that used for cream-making or the manufacture of dairy by-products. In the past, the distributors were paying 26 cents plus premiums, for milk used in bottle form, and 19 cents for milk used for other purposes, Seal said.

The new arrangement will eliminate premiums and the farmer will be paid 26½ cents for his product used in bottle form and 19 cents for that used for other purposes. The premiums will be paid by the association from the excess received from the distributors over that paid the producers by the associatilon.

Under arrangements recently made, the distributors were paying 16 cents a gallon for milk sold to the District at 32 cents a gallon and used for relief needs. The new plan would increase the distributors' price for relief milk to 26½ cents and there would be a consequent increase in the price to the District, Seal said.

The effect of a modification of the milk act, those close to the industry said, would be to break the control which the association exercises over the local market. Over 90 per cent of the total milk supply comes from the association.

declared for retention of a minimum wage structure and for maximum hour limitations. It has indicated that it is seeking greater simplicity and uniformity in codes.

These problems are closely connected with the automobile code controversy in which the federation is asking for shorter hours and more pay than the code now provides and for elimination of the "merit clause" in the code. The present code provides for an average of 40 hours but permits the 48-hour week during periods of peak production.

Coal Industry Asks Renewal.

A similar situation exists in the bituminous coal industry, the National Coal Association having asked that its code be extended for two years. Miners are asking for separate legislation covering their industry, removing the industry from NRA supervision. At the same time, the coal industry was facing another problem with expiration April 1 of all wage-an-hour contracts.

While the American Federation of Labor was facing controversies with employers it was being vexed by a "family quarrel" of considerable proportions. Difficulties with its own building trades department finally have been taken into court. At a special convention last month, J. W. Williams was elected president of the department. M. J. Donough, who was then president, refused to recognize the election, and 12 unions supported him.

The court petition, filed in the District Supreme Court, asks McDonough and his fellow officers be enjoined from acting and that they surrender their records and about $50,000 in funds to the new officers.

"The A. F. of L. has been fighting the injunction for years. Now they are using it against their own members," McDonough said.

Japan Charters Foreign Vessels To Haul Iron

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Japan, eager to obtain as much scrap metal from the United States as possible, has resorted to chartering ships of other nations in addition to employing her own in transporting the metal to her shores.

From a reliable source today, it was learned that the Mikado's government has chartered a number of foreign flag ships to transport scrap metal and among them are the Finnish steamer St. Stephens, 2,889 net tons; Norwegian steamers Ingerte, 1,768 tons; Tungsha, 3,391 tons; Norne, 6,500 tons; British steamer Blairdevon, 2,006 tons, and an unnamed vessel, probably Norwegian, 7,000 tons. These ships can load two and a half times their net tonnage in cargo.

Japan, during 1934, imported from Hampton Roads ports alone 67,000 tons of scrap iron, steel, etc., at a cost of the metal alone of $556,789. The cost of transporting it to her shores was about $4.75 per ton. The largest single cargo, about 11,000 tons, was put on the Norwegian steamer Two-a-Day.

While highway authorities of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia worked intensely with the latest in snow plows last week to clear the arteries of travel, a farmer living near Leesburg, Va., seems to have solved the road-cleaning problem in his own unique—but successful—way.

A certain farmer in that section of the Old Dominion which boasts of its fine horses found that his road, about a mile long, connecting with the State highway was an impasse of snowdrifts. His family wanted to go to town, but the family car just couldn't make it through the snowdrifts.

So the farmer gathered together his native ingenuity. He had the hired man load a small light wagon with hay. Then he started the man and the wagon down the drifted highway, after turning a score of heavy, fat cattle out of the barnyard to take a "look at the hay."

When the wagon started down the road, the cattle followed seeking the hay, and the tramp-tramp of the 20 bovines through the heavy drifts tramped down the snow so well that along behind them came the farmer and his family in the car, the machine moving over the hard, packed snow with little difficulty.

Over at Hagerstown, Md., the police department is taking no chances of having violators of the new traffice ordinance offer the alibi that they didn't know they were violating any of its provisions through ignorance.

So before it is to be enforced, Capt. of Police Clarence E. Emmert is having booklets printed containing the 6,000-word law, which among other things makes jaywalking, hitch-hiking, etc., unlawful.

The unusual number of 231 persons comprised the issue of Mrs. Elvira K. Powell, 86, of Warrior Fork, W. Va., whose funeral and burial took place recently. She was the mother of 16, grandmother of 82, great-grandmother of 115 and great-great-grandmother of 18.

Yesterday's quiz was in executive session, but Senators leaving the committee room graphically described what took place.

Glass Withholds Attack.

Glass, the chairman, was careful to refrain from outspoken criticism of the bill. Asked if he had conferred with the President on the measure, he answered, tartly:

"No, the President doesn't think it necessary to discuss the bill with the chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee."

Glass disclosed that Senators had pressed Peoples on the desirability of delegating power of administering the huge fund to the President himself, and whether he might in turn delegate this authority.

The Virginian would not say that "opposition" to the bill developed at the inquiry, but did say "many questions were asked which indicated there was considerable division of opinion."

He revealed that no amendments were proposed, and Peoples did not say "who wrote the bill." The witness was clear in stating the President personally wants power to administer the fund, and is opposed to specific "earmarkings," Glass said.

It was Senator Dickinson, who now is framing several amendments to allocate the tremendous sum, making definite appropriations for "useful projects," who closely queried the witness on the President's opposition to "earmarking" the bill.

"Clear As Mud."

After the session, Dickinson said: "Peoples' testimony was a mass of glittering generalities. He apparently doesn't know what the President wants to do with the money. Every attempt I made to tie him down to how particular funds might be spent was met with a vague explanation that didn't explain anything. It is obvious to me that what they seek to do is get this authority, spend the money as they wish, and tell us about it afterward."

"They have a big program, of course, but wholly indefinite," said Senator Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma. "The whole thing's as clear as mud to me."

Glass was asked if he were satisfied with the Administration's explanations.

"That's a question I don't intend to answer," he replied.

When the measure was before the House, Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee was called to the White House, and only last Saturday, Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, one of the Senate committee's ranking Democrats, was consulted by the President. Glass apparently has not been called. He told the Senate the other day he would not "take orders" on any measure.

Roosevelt Slows Job Probe Plans

Mr. Roosevelt promised to give attention to the complaints after discussing at length charges of McFarlane and others that applicants for Federal berths were "penalized" if they were Democrats.

"Cooperation" Pledged.

McFarlane declined to discuss White House intervention, but predicted the caucus would be held without another postponement. He refused to confirm reports that the latest delay, announced Monday night, was agreed to with the understanding that President Roosevelt would take a hand in the situation. Otherwise the meeting would have been held last night.

While seeking signatures on the caucus petition a fortnight ago the Texan was more outspoken in his criticism of the treatment received by House members who attempted to get Federal jobs for constituents. He contended most of the key posts in the emergency agencies were held by Republicans.

McFarlane accused Secretary Ickes, Secretary Wallace, Harry L. Hopkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, and others of ignoring patronage requests of Democratic Congressmen and of "high-handed" conduct.

The fight reached the House floor when Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, sought to cut off the salaries of all Home Owners Loan Corporation executives and employes after the organization failed to employ appraisers he recommended.

Later, Representative Mitchell (Democrat), Tennessee, said he would ask the suggested caucus to authorize an investigation into alleged petty graft among Capitol employes "running into the thousands of dollars."

Sabath disclosed the President was asked to keep the steering committee informed of his legislative plans as far in advance as possible. He added Mr. Roosevelt and the House members exchanged pledges of cooperation.

Desert Love Triangle Killer Gets 5 Years

Sousse, Tunisia, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—A young French lieutenant, central figure in a desert love triangle, was sentenced to five years imprisonment by a civil court today on confession that he murdered his colonel.

Lieut. Perre Cabanes told the court he shot Col. Jean Caillon during a quarrel in the desert, after falling in love with the colonel's wife, Mme Caillon testified against Cabanes, but the defense claim that the colonel was the provocative party, got Cabanes off with the five-year sentence.

Senate Seeking Navy Contract 'Fixer's' Name

(Associated Press.)

The Senate Munitions Committee last night summoned two men to identify a "fixer" who had been described as able to pass out millions of dollars worth of naval contracts "for a consideration."

The two men to appear today are Alex B. Gravem, Washington attorney, and Lawrence R. Wilder, in 1933 chairman of the board of Gulf Industries, a shipbuilding company, who formerly had been president of the New York Shipbuilding Co.

They were named by a witness, William Calvin, secretary-treasurer of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor, at the hearing yesterday as participants in a conference on a summer night in a Washington hotel in 1933.

There, the witness said, Gravem told of a "fixer" who would take $250,000 as a "consideration" for delivery of from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 of shipbuilding contracts to Wilder, who had been disappointed in efforts to get contracts on regular bids.

Calvin said he was called to the meeting "as a sort of witness."

Meanwhile, the House Military Affairs Committee heard demands from a spokesman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars for a plan that would take the profits out of war. Testifying on the McSwain bill, aimed at curbing war profits, George K. Brobeck, national legislative representative of the Veterans' Organization, declared the "only way to stop spilling blood is to stop the profits of those who inspire war."

"There is not a returned doughboy in the land," he declared, "that would not enjoy seeing Mr. Andrew Mellon or others of his ilk walking home in a Washington rainstorm with one of those sieve-like raincoats issued to men in France."

The committee was told by W. C. Hushing, national legislative representative of the Federation of Labor, that "judicious expenditure" of money by a foe of America might bring about injury to the Panama Canal, where he said there was discontent among Negroes from British and French possessions employed on the big waterway.

Collusion Charges Supported.

The testimony of Calvin was poured rapidly into the Senate Committee records by the witness, who had been called to support committee charges of collusion among shipbuilders in bidding on naval contracts.

"Mr. Gravem stated that Mr. Wilder would have to do business through his friend, whom he referred to as 'the fixer,' in order to get any naval building contracts," Calvin said.

The offer was rejected by Wilder, he said.

Reached by telephone after the committee session, Gravem said he had met Wilder and the others, but denied submitting any offer of the "fixer's" services for a consideration.

Alcohol Poison Takes 32 Lives

'Creeping Death' Spreads in Upstate N. Y.; Score in Hospital.

Gloversville, N. Y., Jan. 29 (AP).—Fear bordering on panic spread through squalid sections of the city tonight as deaths from alcohol poisoning increased to 15, making a total of 32 in this central New York region.

At Utica, important textile manufacturing center, there have been 16 deaths since last Thursday. Rome, copper making city, had one victim.

A few hours after two men and a woman died this afternoon, more than a score of men and women were admitted to Nathan Littauer Hospital for treatment. Some were marked with the first symptoms of the terrible "creeping death."

An isolation ward was established in the hospital. Physicians and nurses worked without relief to halt the ravages of the poison, while chemists in the laboratory analyzed stomach juices to determine with what particular type of lethal alcohol they had to deal.

Federal, State, county and city authorities sought the sources of the poison. John Archdeacon was arraigned at Utica on a charge of selling liquor without a license. He pleaded not guilty.

The Treasury Department's alcohol tax unit last night evidenced intention of stepping into the investigation of the poison-liquor deaths in New York State, according to the Associated Press.

An official of the unit was reported to have wired officials in some of the Mohawk Valley towns concerned for details on the case.

Officials expressed the belief that bootleggers had offered denatured alcohol, but had failed to remove all the denaturant before making the sales which resulted in the fatalities.

Woman Government Aid Kills Self With Pistol

A self-inflicted revolver wound early yesterday brought death to Irene E. Dunne, 28, an employe of the Geological Survey division of the interior Department.

Despondent because he could find no work, George I. Pulley, 24, of the 300 block of Eleventh street southwest, swallowed poison in a lunchroom at Ninth and E strets northwest yesterday. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in a critical condition.

Testify on 'War Profits' Before House Inquiry

"Laying down the law" to the House Military Affairs Committee on war profits, these witnesses testified yesterday on their attitude toward war. Left to right are Frederick A. Libby, executive secretary of the National Association for the Prevention of War; Miss Jeanette Rankin, first woman member of Congress, who voted against the United States entering the World War, and W. C. Hushing, of the American Federation of Labor.

New Dealists Are Set to Act Quickly on Gol

Prepared to Meet Emergen but Hopeful of Court Victory.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Although still firm in the belief the Supreme Court will uphold the Government's contentions in the gold clause cases, Administration officials have formulated possible courses of action if the high tribunal should hand down an adverse decision, it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

Nothing has been decided on definitely, nor can any final decision be made until the opinion of the Supreme Court becomes known, it was pointed out. But an effort has been made by the legal and financial officers of the Government to find a solution for every possible contingency.

It is generally expected the decision will be forthcoming when the tribunal ends a two-week recess next Monday. The decision will affect $100,000,000,000 in bonds as well as the general economic and fiscal structure of the Nation.

Consult With Roosevelt.

Ever since arguments ended Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, and their staffs of assistants have been considering what should be done in the event of an adverse decision. The views of everyone within the Government with anything to suggest have been solicited. Every possible course of action has been explored and weighed.

Mr. Cummings and Secretary Morgenthau have frequently consulted with President Roosevelt regarding their duties. From the mass of detail before them, these men have some idea of what they will do in case of an adverse decision by the court, although they have not put their plans on paper.

Possible courses of action in the event of a wholly or partially adverse decision to the Government, now under consideration, include the following:

Immediate submission by Congress of a constitutional amendment empowering Congress to abrogate the gold clause in contracts; to direct the seizure of all gold and to authorize the President to devalue to gold dollar.

Imposition of a special tax that would absorb the increment which any holder of gold contracts would receive, if the court ruled that each $1 of such indebtedness must be paid with $1.69, the proceeds of such tax to be redistributed to the debtors.

May Revalue Dollar.

Restoration of the dollar to its old gold value, thus abandoning the entire experiment in cheapening the dollar by appreciating the value of gold.

Passive resistance by the Government to any ruling of the court that, while gold clauses in private contracts may be abrogated, the Government must pay principal and interest on its gold bonds in the equivalent of the old gold standard —$1.69 for each $1 owed.

It is believed Congress would vote on a constitutional amendment within a few days and that with 44 State Legislatures now in session, the amendment could be ratified within a week or two.

The proposal to restore the dollar to its former gold value has the backing of many conservatives in the Administration, but the inflation bloc on Capitol Hill would be certain to oppose militantly such a course.

A precedent for taxing the entire amount of the increment to bondholders was established last June when Congress voted a 50 per cent tax on profits from silver speculation. The constitutionality of a tax for the benefit of a class of citizens, however, would be doubtful.

But the hope remains high that none of these actions will be necessary—that the court will uphold the Government in every aspect of the gold clause situation.

Jury Acquits Donahoe Of Slaying His Brother

Covington, Va., Jan. 29. (AP).—A jury in Alleghany County circuit court today acquitted Arch Donahoe on a charge of murdering his brother, James E. Donahoe, near Alleghany Station last October.

Square Dealers Demand Long Abdicate 'Throne' in Louisiana

State's Officials Told to Repudiate Huey, Return Government to People; Senator Due Back Friday for 'Plot' Hearing.

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 29 (AP).—The scattered ranks of opposition to Huey Long's dictatorship today demanded that he abdicate his "throne" and called upon elected officials and representatives to "renounce" his leadership.

As the anti-Long Square Deal Association's ultimatum was issued Long's Guardsmen were patrolling the Statehouse grounds by the hundreds, enforcing martial law order in the parish.

Speculation was rife over the convening of a special session of the Legislature at an early date, but sources close to the administration denied it.

Gov. O. K. Allen, Long's lieutenant, said he "knew nothing about" it. Long, in Washington, was silent, but he was expected back in Louisiana Friday to direct the resumption of a court hearing of his own charges that his enemies were plotting to assassinate him.

This section was stirred to feverish activity Saturday, when Long charged at the initial hearing that four sheriffs, a district attorney and other officials had plotted to waylay him on the highway and kill him.

That afternoon enraged citizens armed and gathered on the airport field, but a detachment of militiamen captured or dispersed them after a tense 30 minutes in which a pitched battle impended.

The citizens' army was led by Ernest Bourgeois, youthful leader of the militant Square Deal Association, but he escaped capture and was believed to have fled to the parishes north of here to map new campaign plans.

Judge J. D. Womack, recently appointed by Gov. Allen as one of the district judges here, today issued an order directing Sheriff Robert L. Pettit to locate and take possession of books and records of the police jury, governing body of the parish.

Judge Womack's order was issued after Alice Lee Grosjean, State supervisor of public accounts, said auditors she sent to check the parish's books found some of them missing.

The Square Deal statement described Long as a "mad individual" who had set himself up as dictator "without constitutional authority and without even office giving him constitutional prerogatives within the State."

It demanded that elected officials and representatives "proceed at once to restore constitutional liberties through proper legislation."

"We demand that Huey P. Long, Jr., restrain himself from further interference with the government of the State and that he keep the sacred institutions of our people, including its State offices, its courts and its legislative department, free from the pollution of his touch."

Mothers Sought In State Inquiry Into Baby Farm

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Assistant Attorney General A. T. Washburne, of Michigan, tonight sought out mothers who had patronized the Beulah Maternity Home and Farm as a half-dozen agencies attempted to dissolve some of the mystery surrounding its operation.

Washburne, who came to Chicago after a search of the "baby farm" conducted by Edward L. Brooks, at Beulah, Mich., had uncovered a cemetery where two infants were informally buried, was furnished a list of patients by Miss Edna Zimmerman of the Illinois Department of Public Welfare.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles Daugherty ordered all records of the institutions impounded shortly after they had been found in the huge home Brooks had operated here for several years.

The records contained the case histories of the hundreds of mothers, many of them unwed, who had been treated at the North Clark Street Hospital. Prominent citizens once supported the 40-year-old institution.

Walker Wynekoop, son of Dr. Alice Wynekoop, who was imprisoned for the slaying of her daughter-in-law, was among the curious who gathered in front of the home. Brooks has been quoted as saying that Dr. Wynekoop had sent him several young women patients.

Roosevelt Plans Florida Cruise

President Sets Southern Trip for Late March.

If the situation in Congress permits, President Roosevelt plans to make another cruise off the Florida coast during the latter part of March, it became known yesterday.

He will attend the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents Association on March 23, and shortly thereafter hopes to leave Washington for the South.

Plans are tentative, but it is assumed that Mr. Roosevelt would make the trip with the "Nourmahal gang," his old yachting companions who cruised with him in the same waters at the same time last year.

The Nourmahal is owned by Vincent Astor.

Southern Flood Toll Now 29; Waters Recede

Marks, Miss., Jan. 29 (AP).—The death today of Ed Smith, a 45-year-old tenant farmer whose arms and legs were frozen in the Coldwater River flood of the North Mississippi Delta, raised the death list to 29 in the flood area which stretched out into Tennessee and Arkansas.

Waters in the upper Coldwater Basin were receding as hundreds of refugees started back to their homes.

Burglar Trap Kills Its Barber-Inventor

Kansas City, Jan. 29 (AP).—A burglar trap killed its inventor today.

Jesse C. Venard, barber shop proprietor, was shot in the abdomen and fatally wounded. He apparently forgot the trap had been set and opened the door of a cabinet in his shop, discharging a pistol concealed there.

Cold Expected To Renew Grip On City Today

20-Degree Minimum Forecast After Temporary Respite in Capital.

Fair and colder weather, with the mercury sinking to a minimum of about 20, was predicted for Washington today by the Weather Bureau last night.

The District found definite relief from the cold wave yesterday when the temperature reached a maximum of 35 degrees at 3 p. m., melting much of last week's snow, and making streets and sidewalks slushy. Yesterday's minimum was 22, recorded at 6 a. m.

From Maryland came a report that a request had been sent to the Coast Guard cutter Apache to aid Tangier oysterman icebound in Urbanna Creek, a tributary of the Rappahannock River.

The Apache reported to its base in Baltimore that it was anchored off Crisfield Light, trying to break through the ice on Chesapeake Bay to open Crisfield Harbor.

High temperatures were reported throughout Maryland, Baltimore's lowest being 21 degrees, 19 higher than the day before.

In Virginia, where a series of sub-zero temperatures was reported Monday, the mercury climbed to normal, with most readings being 20 or above.

Bar Will Pay Honor To Deceased Members

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Exercises honoring the memory of three deceased members of the Allegany County Bar Association will be held on Monday, February 11, in circuit court here.

Judge Albert A. Doub was notified yesterday by a committee of the bar association that resolutions will be presented then in commemoration of Austin A. Wilson, A. Taylor Smith and Thomas J. Anderson.

Auto Code Violation Charged in U. S. Suit

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 29 (Spl.). The Government has filed a bill in equity in Federal court at Lewisburg, Pa., against J. S., R. A. and A. W. Snowberger, trading as Snowberger & Sons, with automobile agencies in Hagerstown, Md., and Waynesboro, charging violation of the automobile code.

The dealers were alleged to have made allowances on used cars in excess of code figures and disregarded working hours for employes.

Fahey Defends Insolvent Bank Deals of HOLC

Says Mortgage Buying Was Regulated Closely; Cites Aid to Depositors.

Preparatory to asking Congress to make available additional funds for his agency, John H. Fahey, chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, yesterday made a detailed defense of HOLC operations in taking over home mortgages from insolvent banks and other financial institutions.

These so-called "wholesale operations," involving $360,100,305 in loans up to January 18, have been criticized on the ground that they were designed primarily to relieve stockholders, depositors and creditors of insolvent financial institutions rather than distressed home owners and that, in fact, many home owners not in distress obtained such loans.

Mr. Fahey pointed out that up to January 18 the HOLC had closed approximately 760,000 relief loans, totaling $2,300,000,000. Loans on 126,483 homes on which mortgages were held by insolvent institutions totaled $360,100,305 or about 15 per cent of the aggregate loans, he said. These loans were taken over from receivers of 5,680 national and State banks, building and loan associations, mortgage companies and other financial institutions that were in legal custody, in which nearly $670,000,000 of home mortgages were held.

The HOLC chairman said a check of these loans revealed that approximately 99 per cent of the home owners whose loans were held by closed financial institutions and exchanged for HOLC bonds were "themselves in financial distress—in default as to interest or principal and unable to refinance their loans elsewhere."

Mr. Fahey pointed out that $180,000,000 in applications from institutions in legal custody were rejected as ineligible—an amount one-half as large as the volume of such loans made. He added that the HOLC board instructed its agents to adhere rigidly to eligibility rules in passing on this type of loan.

He contended that as a result of these operations the HOLC not only saved homes for their owners, but made possible a disbursement to depositors in many closed banks. He cited the case of such loans to two large closed banks where the loans made by HOLC totaled $22,000,000, which made possible a cash dividend to some 300,000 depositors, in addition to helping 8,360 home owners whose mortgages were held by the two banks and were refinanced by the Federal agency.

Of the sums disbursed for taking up loans from closed institutions, he added, 20.7 per cent was through national banks; 54.5 through State banks; 20.3 through building and loan associations and 4.5 per cent through mortgage companies and similar financial institutions.

Fall in Train Breaks Mrs. Al Smith's Arm

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the former Governor of New York and presidential candidate in 1928, went to a hospital here today suffering from a fractured right arm.

Mrs. Smith fell yesterday in the aisle of a train as she and her husband were en route here. The accident occurred near Richmond, Va., where she was treated by a physician. She was permitted to continue the journey.

Aid Sent to Freighter Aground Near Halifax

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 29 (AP).—A lifeboat crew from the Herring Cove Lifesaving Station was ordered out tonight to the aid of the British freighter Silveryew, aground on Meagher's Rock just outside Halifax Harbor.

Two Halifax tugs left at the same time to reach the 6,373-ton motor vessel, stranded late today on a ledge in a driving snowstorm as she was approaching with a cargo from the Far East for Halifax, Boston and New York.

Hauptmann Lived Life of Ease After Ransom Was Paid

Suspect Admits Series of Trips After Kidnapin

Bought Canoe for Hunting Excursion; Paid $400 for Radio.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 29 (AP).—Traps and pitfalls beset Bruno Richard Hauptmann today when he was called back to the witness chair to undergo further cross-examination at the hands of Attorney General David T. Wilentz.

Court convened at 10:03.

Hauptmann, trailed by his guards, stepped quickly up to the stand and stared at the attorney general awaiting the first question.

Q. On April 2, 1932, when it was testified that $50,000 was paid, you said you resigned from your job?—A. Yes.

Q. And you testified you quit because you found you were being paid $80 instead of $100 a month?—A. Yes.

"It was about $2.66, wasn't it?" Wilentz estimated.

Hauptmann nodded.

Q. You were paid twice monthly, bimonthly?—A. Yes.

Q. And you said you went to work on March 15 or 16?—A. Yes.

Q. So if you had worked a half month you'd have $40 if it was $80 a month?—A. Yes.

Q. Were you paid by check or cash?—A. I guess it was by check.

The figuring went on with Hauptmann mentioning the difficulty of Sundays and holidays.

Pay Check Is Produced.

Q. The wages were by the month? A. Yes.

Q. Why did you not quit at the end of March?—A. I always quit at the end of the week.

Wilentz showed Hauptmann a pay check which he said was his.

Q. You got that money from this employer?—A. Yes, that's the pay check for March.

"It would have been $40 if you worked one-half a month," the attorney went on.

Q. The check is not for $40, is it? A. No.

Q. If you worked one day less than one-half a month, they should have taken off $2.66. But they took off $3.33. That was too much?—A. Yes.

Q. Now you worked two more days in April?—A. Yes.

Q. And you got paid $3.33 a day? A. Yes.

He identified the pay check for those two days and it was accepted in evidence.

Q. Now you cashed that check at the National Lumber & Mill Work Co.?—A. Yes.

That was the lumber yard where the kidnap ladder wood was traced by State experts.

Q. You were employed there at one time?—A. Yes.

Wilentz suddenly introduced the name of the Morrow estate maid who committed suicide as she was to be questioned after the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Denies Knowing Maid.

Q. Did you know Violet Sharpe? A. No.

Q. Did you know anyone who knew Violet Sharpe?—A. No.

Q. You had never even heard of Violet Sharpe? — A. There were stories in the newspapers.

Q. I mean prior to March 1, 1932? A. No.

Q. You never knew anyone connected with the Lindburgh household prior to the kidnaping?—A. No.

Wilentz was attacking the defense efforts to throw suspicion on Violet Sharpe and other Morrow and Lindbergh domestics.

Q. In May, 1932, you bought a radio?—A. Yes.

Q. How much did it cost?—A. $400.

Q. You bought field glasses?—A. Yes.

Q. How much did you pay?—A. $126.

Q. In July, 1932?—A. Yes.

Q. Before you bought the radio you had a victrola in the front room?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you put money in the victrola?—A. Possibly I keep the rent in it.

Q. I mean lots of money, packages of money?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you put the Fisch money in it?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you have $6,500 from Fisch?—A. Yes.

Q. At any rate, early in 1932 you had no money in the victrola?—A. No.

Prisoner's Wife

MRS. HAUPTMANN.

"No Money in Victrola."

Q. Isn't it a fact you opened the victrola in the presence of Fritz Hahn and there were two packages of money on top?—A. No, absolutely not.

Q. You say now that when Mr. Hahn was in your home in April or May, 1932, you didn't open the victrola and he saw the bundles of money?—A. No.

Q. Didn't you tell him he could not go in the bedroom?—A. I can't say that I said it.

Q. Didn't Mr. Hahn ask you about the money?—A. No.

Q. He didn't?—A. I really can't say he was ever in our house.

Wilentz then drew from the witness he had taken the Hahns to Rye Beach and stopped at the Hauptmann house.

Q. Mr. Hahn is a good friend of yours?—A. Yes.

Q. He doesn't owe you any money?—A. No.

Q. Do you remember saying to Mrs. Hahn you were giving your wife about $1,000 to go to Europe.—A. No.

Q. Will you say Mrs. Hahn was ever in your house?—A. I can't remember.

Q. Will you say she wasn't there? —A. Maybe when I was out——

Q. When you were there?—A. I don't remember.

Wilentz pressed the witness to say categorically whether or not he had ever invited the Hahns to his house, but Hauptmann said he could not recall.

Denies Signaling Wife.

Wilentz asked if Hahn exclaimed about the expensive radio.

"You are making a story," Hauptmann said.

"We'll see about that," Wilentz replied.

Q. Didn't you signal your wife to jump up when a witness was on the stand?—A. That's ridiculous.

Q. Weren't you told to change your story about the wood yesterday?—A. No.

Wilentz swung to another line of attack, that of his alibi for the kidnap night.

Q. Who told you to change your story and tell about the dog?—A. Nobody. I found out about it myself.

Q. Never mentioned it, did you? A. No.

Q. Never said anything about walking the streets with a dog?—A. I remember it afterwards that I think of it.

Q. Why didn't you think of it then?—A. I guess I know but I don't think it was important.

Q. It wasn't important. The only important thing in that extradition proceeding was whether you were in the Bronx the night of the kidnaping as you testified or in Hopewell as New Jersey claimed?—A. Yes.

Q. So it was important, wasn't it? —A. Yes.

The questions turned to the market transactions.

Q. You sold short, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you buy put and call. In other words it's a hedge?—A. Insurance.

Wilentz went into the technical details of put and calls, winding up, "You learned all the tricks of the trade in Wall street, didn't you?"

He got no answer from the witness.

Hauptmann, smiling, corrected Wilentz that he did not lose, but won "a few dollars" on put and call.

Q. The only money you put in was from Fisch from furs and from your bank account?—A. And a mortgage.

"Mistake on Silver."

Q. You deposited hundreds of dollars in silver change?—A. I'd like to explain to the jury.

The large amount of silver, the State contends, came from the change Hauptmann obtained by passing ransom money.

Q. Where did you get all that silver?—A. It was a mistake. Sometimes on the slip, the deposit slip, when I write it down, I get the bills down below the line where it reads silver.

Q. You mean that some of the deposit slips show silver, but what we call silver were really bills? That right?—A. Yes.

Wilentz produced the deposit slips.

Q. Take a look at this. It shows coins $186.—A. That is wrong. It means bills. You can't expect to carry $200 in silver in my pocket.

Q. But isn't that your handwriting on that slip?—A. Yes. But I never carried that much silver.

Wilentz showed him another slip.

Q. You put the bills in the right place then?—A. No, that's all right.

Another deposit slip was shown him and again Hauptmann said it was all right, the bills and coins being in the correct place.

Q. What's this $8 in bills, $12 in coins and $80 check?—A. That's all right.

Q. Now here $62 in bills $12 in coins?—A. Yes.

Q. Here is $12 in coins.—A. That means bills.

Q. Between bills and checks?—A. That is bills.

Q. Another — Coins $84.—A. That's a mistake. I didn't pay so much attention to the figures how I wrote them.

One after one Wilentz showed him deposit slips in his handwriting showing large deposits of silver. Haptmann seemed to be getting confused and his explanations became more jumbled.

"It should be bills. It should be bills," he repeated monotonously as he looked at the deposit amounts he had marked beside the word "silver" on a deposit slip.

Wilentz hammered questions about a counterfeit quarter among the deposits and Reilly protested. The justice advised Hauptmann he would have "opportunity to answer."

Profit from Fur Business.

Q. Here is $200 in bills deposited in September, 1932. You weren't working. Where did you get the money?—A. From the fur business.

Wilentz and the defendant continued the identification of the deposits, the attorney general citing many coin deposits which Hauptmann said were mistakes.

They turned to another.

Q. It couldn't be coins?—A. No.

Q. But it is in your handwriting? A. Yes.

Q. And here's the bank clerk's number, 166?—A. Yes.

Q. He checked it?—A. Yes, all he cares is the amount is right, not the kind of money.

Wilentz showed Hauptmann a $12 coin deposit.

Q. You didn't deposit $12 in coin in all the years before 1932?—A. What's that?

The question was repeated.

A. I don't remember.

Wilentz showered more deposit slips on the defendant. They showed both bills and silver coins under the proper listings.

There were two deposits of silver, one $12 and the other $10, both made shortly after the ransom payment.

Q. Where did you get that silver? —A. Some of the money out of my trunk in the house.

Q. When you had the $4,300?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann explained his wife had complained at the small bank balance in their account and he had dipped into his money trunk and took out some money.

"You can go over all dem slips any you will find no more than $12 in silver," Hauptmann volunteered.

Q. $12 and $10 and $10 is $32, though, in nickels?—A. I didn't have a nickel shop.

$750 Gold Deposit.

Q. Did you deposit $750 in gold in the Central Savings Bank?—A. Let me explain. I went to the strong box (safety deposit box) and took it out and deposited it.

Q. You took the $750 in gold bills to some place, exchanged for other bills and deposited in the Central Savings Bank?—A. No.

Q. That was March, 1933, when President Roosevelt called in gold? —A. Yes.

Q. That's your book, isn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. A book in which you kept account of your stocks, your dealings with Fisch?—A. Yes, all of it.

Q. You kept the book for yourself, for your own information?—A. Yes.

Q. You didn't keep it to fool anyone?—A. No.

Q. You weren't trying to hide anything from anyone?—A. No.

Q. So it's a true and accurate record?—A. Yes; but not all is in it.

Q. It's a true and accurate statement of all that's in it?—A. It's not correct.

Q. Everything in it is correct, but you left something out?—A. Yes; let me explain, please.

Q. If your book says $12,000, it was $9,500?—A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. If you wrote to the Fisch family in 1934 and said you put up $12,000 worth of stocks, was that a lie?—A. No.

Q. But you had put up only $9,500 stocks?—A. Yes.

Q. You did put up $12,000 in securities?—A. Yes, that's correct.

Q. When you wrote to Isador's family after his death did you say anything about the stock you bought for him?—A. No. I did not.

Entered Partnership.

The defendant launched an explanation of the stock dealings of Fisch. He said the little furrier did not make enough. Hauptmann suggested that he buy Fisch's interest for 20 per cent of value and the partner would participate 50-50 on profit and loss.

"Fisch said O. K." Hauptmann concluded.

Q. When did you and he start this accoount where you were to put up $17,500 and he was to put up $17,500?—A. October, the end of October, 1933.

Q. You never had any stock dealings before October, 1933?—A. That was the 50-50 account.

Q. How about the account in which he had 20 per cent interest?—A. That really never got started.

Q. So Fisch was never in the market prior to October, 1933?—A. Oh, yes. He was in it in 1932.

Wilentz changed the subject and asked if the witness had bought a canoe and taken hunting trips after the kidnaping.

The witness admitted he took one trip.

Q. And you weren't working?—A. No.

Wilentz reviewed the trips of the Hauptmanns to California and Florida and the purchase of the $400 radio since 1932.

Q. And your wife quit work too?—A. Yes, in June, 1932.

Q. And you made only $200 since as a carpenter?—A. Yes.

Q. Your wife was disgusted at your quitting the job and you went and put money in the bank?—A. She wasn't hollering at me.

Wilentz led Hauptmann to his arrest and the circulation of ransom bills immediately preceding.

Q. Why, because you needed the money?—A. Oh no, I didn't need the money.

Q. Why did you put it in circulation?—A. I thought I wouldn't take the check from my stock account so I put this money into circulation and used it.

Q. So you took the money because you didn't want to take it out of your stock account and you had living expenses?—A. Yes.

Q. When you and your wife went to buy her shoes you took one of the bills?—A. That's correct.

Tells of Using Ransom Bills.

Q. Before, when you needed living expense money, you took it out of your stock account?—A. That's right.

"Altogether I put in circulation, I figure, from 12 to 15 bills," he concluded.

Q. For your living expenses?—A. Yes.

Q. Prior to that time you would have taken the money from your banking or brokerage accounts?—A. Yes.

Q. So then whenever you needed money you dipped into that money and took out a bill at a time?—A. Yes, but I took four or five at a time.

Q. But you didn't take it out just to cash it, to get it changed to other money?—A. No, for living (expenses).

Q. You didn't take the bills out and cash them just to get rid of them?—A. No.

Q. Why did you deposit $200 during August and September, 1934, when you needed money for expenses?—A. This bank was closed and I opened in another bank in Eighty-sixth street.

Hauptmann went on explaining that he opened an account in a Mount Vernon bank in September, 1934, to build up "little by little" a fund to go to Germany. His wife, he said, did not know about the account.

Q. A special account?—A. Yes, I wanted to start a special account for our voyage to Germany.

Q. You weren't worried about having enough money for that trip?—A. Not worried, that's right. But if you take a trip—if you build up little by little, you don't feel it so much.

Q. But you had thousands of dollars in September, 1934, thousands? A. In my stock account.

Q. You didn't need money in September; you had thousands?—A. It was easier to build up little by little than take out $1,000 all at once.

"Planned to Repay Fischs."

Q. You only used a little of the money (ransom)?—A. I was going to return the rest to Mrs. Fisch.

Q. You took about $300 of gold certificates and were going to give back the rest to the Fisch family? A. I got it from Fisch.

Q. So you intended to return the rest of the gold to the Fischs?—A. Yes.

Q. Then why did you spend the 12 or 15 bills you took?—A. Fisch owed me.

Hauptmann then explained he divided the money into two packages, one of $2,000, and the other of $12,000 "to be on the safe side."

He said Fisch owed him that $2,000 and he wanted to be sure of getting that money. He was afraid Fisch's brother would refuse to give it to him.

Q. What were you afraid of? What was the trouble?—A. Because there wasn't any written between Fisch and me.

Q. What trouble were you afraid of?—A. Fisch's brother.

Q. What trouble were you afraid of?—A. He wouldn't believe me.

Q. You would tell him you had his money?—A. Yes, but I didn't have any slips or records. Fisch owed me $2,000.

Q. You were going to separate the $2,000 and give them the rest? —A. No. But if I gave him all the money he might talk about it.

Q. They questioned you to tell what Fisch left in this country?—A. Yes.

Q. And you answered a couple of old trunks with nothing in them? —A. Yes.

Q. Why did you hide the money in the trunk?—A. Somebody might come in. I had to hide it somewhere.

Q. Why didn't you tell Fisch's brother?—A. I was going to write and I got arrested.

Hauptmann said he wrote one letter and was waiting, before writing again, for an answer from the first.

Q. Yesterday you said you didn't write because Fisch's brother was coming over?—A. That was my answer.

Q. Now you say you didn't write because you didn't get a reply?—A. You are wrong again.

Planned Trip to Germany.

Q. As a matter of fact you knew

Bruno's Stories on 'Money in Trunk' Contradictory

Several Stories Are Told About HoardingClaim

at that time you were planning to return to Germany?—A. Oh, that was plan over a year already.

Hauptmann said he planned to write Fisch's brother, explaining he was bringing back all of his effects.

A trip was planned for 1939 because, Hauptmann said, his mother would be 70 years old.

Q. You sent her about $50 a year, though?—A. I can't remember.

Q. Now, you had $4,300 in a trunk in 1931?—A. Yes.

Q. And you always kept money in that trunk?—A. Yes.

Q. You always took off some money to hide away?—A. Yes.

Q. You always had money in the trunk?—A. Yes. I spent everything. All the money was invested.

Q. So you didn't always have money in the trunk?—A. No.

Q. How much money was in that trunk in February, 1933?—A. Gold certificates.

Q. How much?—A. I can't remember. It was all gold certificates.

Q. Can't you state about how much you had?—A. $750 about in gold certificates.

Q. What else?—A. That's all there was.

Q. How much did you have in there December, 1932?—A. The same.

Q. How much in June, 1932, if you can remember.—A. A little bit more than $1,000. I explain it dis way——

Q. Just a minute. Do you want to correct your answer?—A. That's correct. End of May I took out $1,500 and in June I put it back.

After a brief recess Wilentz walked over to the stand holding a sheaf of ransom letters in his hand as he resumed questioning the witness.

Q. Now, June 1, you said you had a little over $1,000 in (the trunk)? A. Yes.

Q. You had more in May and took some out to buy the mortgages?—A. About the end of the year.

Q. In May, 1932, you took out $1,500?—A. I put it in furs.

Q. So you had a little over $2,500 in the trunk?—A. I can't say exactly the amount.

Grilled on Money in Trunk.

Q. Anyhow you took $1,500 out of the trunk at the end of May, and what did you do with that?—A. I put it in furs.

Q. That left you on the 1st of June with $1000 or $1,500 in the trunk?—A. Yes, that's about right.

Q. How much money did you have in the trunk April 2, 1932?—A. $4,300.

Q. So you took out between $2,000 and $3,000 between April and June, 1932?—A. I don't remember exactly.

Q. The $1,500 you took out for the furs, you deposited that where?—A. I gave it Fisch.

Q. You don't know if it was ever deposited?—A. It was for furs.

Q. You've heard those two expressions and your statement about the trip to Germany "Oh that is planned for a year already." Is that your method of speech?—A. I don't know any other way. How would you say it?

Q. When you were arrested did you say you didn't turn in the gold certificates because you were afraid "they would hook you up?"—A. I don't remember. There were so many questions. Besides, it wasn't my money.

Q. You were in this country illegally, that's why?—A. Yes.

Q. That's why you changed your account to your wife's account?—A. That's another reason.

Q. Didn't you tell the authorities you didn't know where there was a Federal Reserve bank?—A. I can't remember my answer. There was so many questions. I can't think that fast.

Q. And all the time you were saying that, you had been into a Federal Reserve Bank already to deposit gold?—A. I didn't remember first.

Q. When you were asked about the Federal Reserve Bank, after your arrest, you said you didn't know where there was a Federal Reserve Bank?—A. Yes.

Q. And now you tell us you did know where the Federal Reserve Bank was?—A. Yes, later I remembered it.

Q. Didn't the authorities say to you "why didn't you take this to a Federal Reserve Bank" and you said you didn't know where there was one?—A. I can't remember dis.

Hauptmann said he had $650 in gold in a safety deposit box and $120 at home.

Q. Well you knew the $120 in gold coins you had in your home, you knew that money was just as bad and illegal?—A. No, I read from Mr. Roosevelt something that it would be all right to keep $100 in gold.

Q. So you kept $120?—A. Yes.

Wilentz had the witness redescribe how he counted the ransom money and separated $2,000 from the main package of the money.

Q. Where was that $2,000?—A. I put in on the shelf with a board across.

Q. You put a certain number of packages with paper over them. They had $1,000 in each?—A. Newspaper.

Tells of Hiding Money.

Q. You got to $12,000, then to $13,000, then to $14,000. What did you do with the odd money?—A. I wrapped it.

Q. So the last two packages were less than $1,000. Where did you put them?—A. On the shelf.

Q. What did you put in the wood? A. Part of the first $1,000.

Q. Did you count the money you put in the board?—A. I count it, yes.

Q. How much did you count? A. I can't remember. Seven or eight hundred dollars.

Q. Once you put the beam up to the wall you didn't disturb it again? A. No.

Q. In July, 1931, how much did you have then in that trunk, $4,300?—A. July?

Q. Yes, the time you took the trip to California.—A. I don't know.

Q. Now what did you do with the money you had in that trunk when you went to California?—A. I put it in a small satchel and left it with my uncle in Brooklyn.

Hauptmann said his uncle "didn't know there was money in it." The furniture was put in storage and "a few things left with the uncle." Almost $4,000 was in the satchel.

Q. You needed money for that trip?—A. I took it out of the bank.

Wilentz in his questions brought out that Hauptmann did not resort to the garage hiding place used for ransom money.

Hauptmann said he didn't leave his account book in the trunk because "it isn't money."

Q. Well your wife didn't know about the Mount Vernon Bank account?—A. I don't know or remember if she did.

Q. So you could have opened an account in some New York bank under your own name or some other name and she'd never know about it?—A. Yes.

The witness said he used a tin box in 1933 for valuables at home.

Q. When the police came to your house there was not a dollar of money in that trunk?—A. No. Because it was gone.

Q. So you didn't always keep large sums of money in that trunk?—A. No.

Q. You remember Mr. Frank testified your brokerage account was about $16,000?—A. About right.

Says Expert Erred.

Q. And his testimony was there was $9,000 in bank deposits?—A. That's his way. There wasn't that much.

"Because it's this way. You have $2,000 in a bank—I take out $1,000 and put it to work. I buy stocks or furs. Later I put the money back. It is the same money in the same channels," he said, speaking straight at the jury.

This is the "repeat money" Hauptmann's counsel urges as an explanation of the deposits the State claims came from the ransom.

"If you follow my books, from the time Mr. Fisch left, you will find no new money was coming in," Hauptmann explained.

Q. How much did Fisch lose in the stock accounts?—A. About $15,000. In November, 1933, he was about even.

Q. How much did you put in?—A. Very little. There was 50 shares——

Q. How much cash?—A. $2,000 or $1,500.

Q. You took some part of the ransom money for your living expenses?—A. I never had any ransom money.

Q. How about the bills you were spending in August and September, 1934?—A. I didn't know it was ransom money.

Q. But you did spend it, did you?—A. Yes, I know now.

Q. Then you did take some money out of your accounts for your living before November, 1933?—A. Well—

Q. Will you stand on your books?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you stand on the fur accounts?—A. No.

Q. Will you stand on the statement $2,000 was all you got from Fisch?—A. No.

Q. So you won't stand on your books?—A. To a certain extent.

Q. So that to a certain extent in the testimony at the Bronx, and now again to a certain extent on your book,—you'll only stand on it to a certain extent?—A. My own book don't show everything. I told you already, didn't I?

Q. You showed me the book?—A. That $2,000, I told you, was special.

Says Fisch Kept Own Books.

Q. Will you find me any item in that book of yours which shows Fisch put in $15,000?—A. It's not special marked.

Q. Will you show me one line in that book which shows Fisch put in any more than that $2.000 he did put in?—A. Fisch, he kept some books.

Q. But not in here?—A. No.

Q. So you've got this book showing the stock accounts?—A. This is only the $2,000.

Q. Does it include the Fisch account?—A. It includes the Fisch account but in my name.

Q. But you haven't an account of a single other dollar from Fisch?—A. No.

Q. It's your book, I didn't write it?—A. I wrote it.

Q. When did you do most of your fur business?—A. I'm not familiar with furs.

Q. Not familiar?—A. No Fisch he took care of these.

Q. Fisch put in most of the money, you put in $1,500 or $2,000? A. Yes.

Wilentz brought out that Hauptmann spent money on financial papers and once spent $30 for a Wall Street forecast.

Q. Who did you charge that to? A. It was half and half.

Q. Show me where there is some evidence where you got profit money out of furs?

Hauptmann studied his ledger book, while Wilentz directed that copies of the accounts be supplied to the defense.

A. Yes, there are.

Cites Fur Profits.

Wilentz supplied Hauptmann with a pencil, asking him to write down the fur profits.

The defendant wrote three and then asked to see the book again.

"There is a couple more," the defendant said.

Hauptmann gave the total as $1,735.50.

"That's one month," he added.

Wilentz objected and Reilly asked that the remark be recorded.

Justice Trenchard called the noon recess, ruling the answer could be given after lunch.

Noon recess was taken at 12:30 p. m.

Wilentz returned to the fur questioning when court resumed.

Q. What month were those profits made in?—A. June or July.

Hauptmann consulted his ledger. "That is everything we made."

Q. That's July 15, 1933?—A. Yes.

Q. Then it's more than one month?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you get any of that profit? A. No. We cleaned the books in August.

Q. You kept that book as a record of your accounts in stocks and furs?—A. In furs only a little bit.

Q. But stocks completely?—A. Yes.

Q. And the $1,737.50 is the only profits you list in that book as profits from the fur business?—A. Fisch kept the accounts. There were more profits.

Q. The only profit you show in the book was $1,737.50?—A. Yes.

Q. $15,000 went from you to the broker?—A. Yes.

Q. Is there one line in your record Fisch gave you one cent outside of $2,000?—A. There is not.

Hauptmann said he didn't understand the fur business and didn't know any fur dealers with whom dealings were conducted.

Wilentz turned the questioning to the cemeteries figuring in the crime.

Q. Did you work for the National Lumber Co., whose yards were near Woodlawn Cemetery?—A. Yes.

Not Familiar With Cemetery.

Q. So you were familiar with the cemetery?—A. Not at all.

"No, I never passed Woodlawn Cemetery on my way to work," Hauptmann said slowly.

Q. Did you work at a lumber company near one of the cemeteries?—A. Yes, Woodlawn. You could see it about a mile away.

Q. Did you work at Marble Hill avenue in 1928?—A. I worked so many places. It's hard to remember.

Q. You worked at 204th street and Bainbridge avenue, didn't you?—A. Yes.

The defendant said it depended whether he had his car, how he got home from these places where he worked.

Q. What did you say about St. Raymond's?—A. I know there was a cemetery there, but I didn't know the name.

Q. But you know there was a cemetery there?—A. I passed it once.

Wilentz asked if Hauptmann had worked on a Haviland avenue job, and the witness said he had. When Wilentz asked if that was near St. Raymond's Cemetery, Hauptmann declared the job was "far distance" from the graveyard.

Q. Did you pass St. Raymond's

Cemetery when you visited Mr. Brent?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann said he had been in Yonkers once, but did not pass Woodlawn Cemetery when he went there.

Q. You never passed by Woodlawn Cemetery, drove by?—A. Why sure, I passed by, drove by.

Q. Did you ever drive past the cemetery along Jerome avenue?—A. No.

Q. How about East 233rd street?—A. Yes, maybe I drove along there.

Friend Lived Near Jafsie.

Wilentz shifted to St. Raymond's Cemetery. Hauptmann asserted he never went to that cemetery.

"I never had any business down there," he said.

Q. How far away from Dr. Condon did Mr. Mueller live?—A. I don't know where Dr. Condon lives.

Q. Where did Mueller live?—A. Marion avenue.

Q. And Dr. Condon lived on Decatur avenue, and that's only a block away?—A. Yes.

Q. You knew all of the Bronx?—A. I probably knew all of the Bronx.

Q. You knew Gun Hill road?—A. Yes.

Q. You did not know that Deactur avenue was one block from Hahns' house?—A. I didn't know until later.

Q. You never were in St. Raymond's Cemetery or outside it?—A. I passed by.

Q. How about Woodlawn, will you say you never passed by that?—A. Sure I passed it. It's not far from my home.

Wilentz then picked up the board from the Hauptmann closet which bore the telephone number and address of Dr. Condon. He showed it to Hauptmann.

Q. Can you now give this court and jury a better explanation why the telephone number and address appeared on that panel?—A. I gave you the answer yesterday already.

He referred to his answer that he thought he made the notations because of his interest in the case, but could not remember.

Q. Is that your best answer? A. Yes.

Identifies Letters.

Wilentz asked Hauptmann to identify letters he wrote to the Fisch family in Germany.

"Yes, my handwriting," Hauptmann said.

Wilentz had the prisoner identify each page of the long letter.

"That's the letter. There was a copy laid in my desk," he said.

Q. You don't know if these were sent to Fisch's family but they are your handwriting?—A. Yes.

Wilentz pointed to red pencil marks under Hauptmann's writing, which the defendant said he had not placed there.

Hauptmann identified the four-page letter again as a copy "about the same" of the letter mailed to the Fisch family.

Hauptmann studied a second letter, given him by Wilentz.

Q. Is that your handwriting?—A. Yes.

Q. That was a letter you sent to Germany?—A. Yes.

Hauptmann was excused from the stand temporarily while an interpreter was called to give a translation of the first letter. He was Dr. George Priest, of Princeton University.

The professor started to read the letter. It began, "Dear Mr. Fisch," and told how shocked Hauptmann felt at "the death of your dear brother and my best friend."

"I made the acquaintance of Isador in 1932," the translator read.

The letter told of pleasant hours together with friends in the Bronx and at Hunters Island. Business matters were discussed between the two men, the letter said, with Hauptmann lending Fisch money to buy furs. Hauptmann wrote that he had been a machinist in Germany, but found employment as a carpenter in America. The two men, the letter said, planned to go into business together.

Tells of Business Deals.

"In my business there are great fluctuations. Sometimes I can lose almost everything. However, if I speculate successfully, I stand to win a substantial fortune."

The letter told of early business associations, and continued:

"We decided on November, 1933, to go into business with $35,000, each a half."

The value of stocks held by Hauptmann in November, 1933, the letter said, was $12,000. Then the missive recited the value of furs of various kinds owned by Fisch at $21,000.

Hauptmann wrote he paid Fisch $5,500 and still owed some on his half of the fur ownership.

On November 14, 1933, Hauptmann said he drew $2,000 from his stock accounts and gave it to Fisch to defray the expenses for a trip abroad.

The letter recounted that Fisch owed a Mrs. Hille $3,750, which debt Hauptmann confirmed.

Fisch had an interest in a bakery, the letter continued, but the defendant learned it had been in bankruptcy for two years. Fisch, it said, told Hauptmann it was in good order and his interest was $10,000.

Hauptmann, the letter said, had adjusted the mutual accounts with exception of the skins Fisch had in storage and the opening of his safety deposit box.

The writer said the family must authorize the opening of the box and suggested that Pincus Fisch come to America. Hauptmann's message advised against engaging a lawyer for then "nothing would be left for his dear family."

The letter urged Hauptmann's appointment as Fisch's executor and closed with protestations of his regard for the Fisch family.

Describes Illness.

The letter told the beginning of Fisch's illness with a cold "which never left him" and the suggestion that he spend winters in Florida.

It told further of two trunks Fisch left with Hauptmann.

The reading concluded and Reilly asked that one sentence be read. This advised Pincus to give Hauptmann his confidence and permit him to "regulate" Isador's affairs.

The first letter was dated May 4, 1932.

The attorney general directed the witness to read the second letter, dated July 8, 1934.

Hauptmann, in the letter, said power of attorney given Henry Uhlig to adjust Isador's affairs was useless. Uhlig, he wrote, admitted that he was unable to get information on Fisch's affairs.

The letter indicated there was no bakery in which Fisch had had an interest.

The professor was excused and Hauptmann returned to the stand.

Q. Your friend, Mr. Fisch, lived in one room?—A. Yes.

Q. He was a boarder somewhere? A. Yes.

Q. What kind of a room?—A. A small room.

Q. How did he live?—A. Alone.

Q. First he lived with the Henckels?—A. Same building.

Interested in Estate.

Q. Did he ever have more than one room?—A. I don't know.

Q. Whenever you saw him he had one room?—A. Yes.

Q. He owned no automobile when you knew him?—A. No.

Q. He drove no car, as far as you know?—A. I don't know.

Q. As far as you knew?—A. Yes.

Q. You wrote his brother because you were interested in his estate?—A. Yes.

Q. You lent him money—$5,500 and $2,000 to go home?—A. Yes.

"The transactions was dis way," Hauptmann volunteered an explanation. He said some of the $5,500 was in stock losses and the rest in the fur business.

Q. When you wrote Fisch's relatives that you took the money from the bank account it wasn't true?—A. It was a quick way of explaining.

Q. When you wrote that you took that money from your private bank account, was that the truth?—A. No.

Q. You didn't get $5,500 out of your private bank account?—A. No, because I didn't have it.

Q. Is it true you put $12,000 worth of stocks up for this partnership?—A. I put $9,500 in securities.

Q. You wrote that you put $12,000 in stocks and all the time it was $9,000?—A. $9,500.

Q. Not a word in the letter about Fisch putting up any cash in this partnership?—A. But, certainly.

Q. How much?—A. $21,900.

Q. But that was in furs?—A. Yes.

Q. Not cash?—A. No.

Q. You please answer this question, he put up furs for $21,900?—A. Yes.

"Fisch Put Up No Money."

Q. So Fisch put up no money?—A. Not that transaction in November.

Q. You wrote you were a machinist in Germany. Were you a carpenter and machinist?—A. Machinist.

Q. Did you write any line in that letter anything of any business with Fisch in 1932?—A. No, it wasn't necessary.

Q. But in the spring of 1933 you did some business with Isador?—A. I was responsible.

Q. You undertook a small transaction in the spring of 1933 and in this way you got to talk more about business?—A. In 1933 we gradually came closer and closer together to make one deal.

By November, 1933, the two men, Hauptmann testified, agreed to enter partnership.

Q. That was in the spring of 1933, that $2,900 transaction?—A. Yes.

Q. And you made a small profit, $103?—A. Yes.

Q. His money?—A. Yes.

Q. When was the first time Fisch ever gave you any money?—A. August or September, 1932.

Q. You don't explain everything in this letter? — A. If I explain everything in the letter, I write a book.

Q. Didn't you put every transaction of 1933 in this ledger?—A. In my name, 1932 and 1933.

Q. Then this book is a correct account of your transactions with Fisch?—A. Yes.

Q. And it shows how much money he gave you?—A. Yes.

Q. Then if it shows he gave you only $2,000 it must be correct?—A. No.

Q. You show me in this book where Fisch put in more than $2,000?—A. The amount is in the book. His name is not in. The money Fisch gave me he kept the record of.

Q. Did you share every time the gain and loss in stocks and furs with Fisch?—A. Not every time I shared the gain and the loss.

Wilentz read the letter setting forth that the partnership was on a half-and-half basis.

Witness Accuses Wilentz.

Wilentz pressed the witness ruthlessly. Hauptmann, eyes blazing, leaned forward in the witness chair, shaking his finger vigorously in Wilentz's face and accusing him of "mixing it up" when he spoke of the Fisch-Hauptmann financial dealings.

The attorney general stared back at him and started to speak, but Hauptmann interrupted him several times.

He was determined to declare clearly that the 50-50 profit sharing agreement between himself and Fisher dated from November, 1933, and did not relate to Hauptmann's previous stock profits.

Hauptmann ended it with the request:

"Let me see the letter." A delay followed while he read the letter.

Wilentz prompted the witness, indicating the paragraph he wanted. Hauptmann, at his suggestion, began his own translation of his letter at the place indicated.

"We split it, the gain or the loss," Hauptmann read, from the paragraph Wilentz showed him.

Q. So you did work in a half-and-half basis?—A. That was after November 1, 1933.

Wilentz pointed to the alleged mutual business arrangement, before November 1, 1933, and Hauptmann said:

"I don't tell everything."

Q. Did you put anything in the letter he gave you $15,000?—A. It wasn't necessary.

Q. Did you put anything in the letter how he lost the $15,000?—A. It wasn't necessary.

Wilentz then drew from Hauptmann the story of how Fisch came to him before he sailed for Germany and said he had no money and needed $2,000 for the trip.

Hauptmann said Fisch suggested he sell some furs to raise the money, but added he advised against that. He took $2,000 from his brokerage account and gave it to Fisch.

Q. Your money?—A. Yes.

Wanted to Be Administrator.

Q. You wanted to be appointed Fisch's administrator?—A. Yes.

Q. You know Fisch's other business went bad?—A. I find out many things after.

Q. He told you about the warehouses where the furs were but you didn't put it down?—A. He told me but he didn't put it down.

Q. You thought you would be good enough to take the lawyer's place?—A. Oh, no, he would have to take a lawyer in Germany and one in the United States and there would be nothing left.

Q. Didn't you think it was necessary to tell the dead man's family about his business.—A. That business was over.

Q. You didn't tell him he lost money in 1932?—A. That business was over.

Q. You concealed all this from them?—A. There is nothing to conceal.

Q. You kept it away from them? —A. There was nothing to conceal.

Q. You forgot about the money box?—A. I found out about the box in 1933.

Q. I'm asking you if you had forgotten about the money box in the closet and didn't write him?—A. No.

Q. You thought he was coming over?—A. Yes.

Q. You've concealed the truth about everything in this case?—A. No, sir.

Q. You were hiding the extra hours from your wife?—A. There was no hiding.

Q. You wouldn't keep it from your wife?—A. Yes.

Wilentz grabbed the little account book.

Q. How about the item, $16 at home. Was that the truth?—A. Yes.

Q. It was the truth?—A. Yes, except the money in the trunk.

Q. You've concealed everything in this case. You lied to District Attorney Foley, to the police about the board, about everything?—A. No.

Q. You had $3,500 extra money when you put $1,600 in the book. You kept the memorandum book to hide it from your wife?—A. No.

Wilentz began hammering away at all the times Hauptmann admitted lying or changed his story since his arrest.

Hauptmann explained haltingly he had been confused, and had told the truth "only to certain extent."

Q. You thought you might have written Dr. Condon's name and address, but changed your mind when it appeared on the closet panel?—A. I don't know. I never knew Dr. Condon.

Hauptmaan explained that his his "first impression" after arrest was that he was working at the Majestic Apartments March 1, 1932, but he might have been at the employment agency.

Concludes Examination.

Q. And you took them up there as an alibi for the kidnaping?—A. No.

Q. That was the day before the kidnaping?—A. Yes.

Q. You told District Attorney Foley you had not been convicted in Europe?—A. Yes.

Q. And that wasn't the truth?—A. Yes—but.

Q. Now when you were on the witness stand in the Bronx you were asked concerning your pay checks?—A. Yes.

Q. And you heard the timekeeper of the Majestic Apartments testify here?—A. Yes.

Q. You heard the timekeeper say you were not working April 2, 1932? —A. Yes, that's what he said.

Q. Of course, April 1 is one day and April 2 is another. You only got paid for the one day?—A. Yes.

Reilly asked for the pay records of the construction company, showing Hauptmann was paid $6.66 for the two days.

"Now I offer in evidence the pay roll records of the Majestic Apartments which shows the defendant worked and was paid for April 1 and April 2," Reilly said.

"We have no objection," said Wilentz.

Reilly took the timekeeper's book, which lists Hauptmann as absent April 2, and the pay roll sheets showing he was paid for that day, and gave them to the jury for examination.

Q. After your arrest do you remember speaking to a man named O'Ryan?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember telling Commissioner O'Ryan that there was $14,000 in your garage?—A. Yes.

"Found Fisch Had Lied."

Reilly inquired of Hauptmann whether Fisch, at the outset of their business association, told him he had a $10,000 interest in the Knickerbocker Pie Baking Co.

Q. And when you investigated you found that it had folded up?—A. Yes.

Q. You found Fisch had lied to you?—A. Yes.

Wilentz immediately moved both question and answer be stricken.

Wilentz objected to Reilly's references to Fisch allegedly lying to Hauptmann. The Attorney General declared Fisch was not on trial for murder.

The justice sustained the objection to "lying," but permitted Hauptmann to tell of discovery of things after Fisch's death he never told him.

Q. You did not consider it a crime, did you, to keep some of your financial transactions secret from your wife?—A. No.

Q. Because Fisch lived in one room you don't know whether or not he kept an apartment elsewhere?—A. No.

Q. Did you have any letters from Fisch in your house when you were arrested?—A. Yes, and I wish that they would be produced here in the court.

Reilly turned to Wilentz, who said he would produce everything.

Prosecutor, Defense Attorney, and Defendant

Hauptmann Faces Hoarding Charge If He's Acquitted

The Treasury is prepared to institute proceedings against Bruno Richard Hauptmann for gold hoarding if he is acquitted of the kidnaping and murder charge in New Jersey.

Officials said yesterday, the Associated Press reports, that under the amended Federal reserve act, a hoarder of gold could be fined twice the amount of the gold so held, and the gold confiscated. In addition, it was said, Hauptmann would be liable for a criminal penalty of $10,000 and ten years' imprisonment.

No Exercise or Diet, But Fat Slipped Away

It was so easy—I did not go on a diet. I took no exercise. I did not weaken my body with drastic purgatives. Yet fat slipped away. Each day I felt myself growing lighter, more slender. Now my figure is lovely, graceful. And I never felt better in my life.

That, in brief, is what thousands who have reduced the Marmola way might well tell you. Four times a day they take a little tablet containing the right quantity of a world-famous corrective for abnormal obesity. —A corrective prescribed by physicians everywhere and acknowledged to be the most effective known.

Since 1907, more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased. Could any better recommendation be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. Soon you will experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent!

Geneva Jolted By the Senate's CourtRejection

Officials of the League Had Believed U. S. Approval Was Assured.

Geneva, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—League of Nations officials were shocked tonight by the United States Senate's rejection of adherence to the World Court.

They had believed approval assured, and refused steadfastly to comment for several days past on the possibility of the Senate's voting adherence, fearing any comment would be misinterpreted in Washington, influencing the ballot.

Some thought complications following United States' entry into the international labor organization of the league may have influenced the Senate's decision.

The labor organization's governing body today received its committee's report naming the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, India, Russia, Italy and Japan as the eight leading industrial nations and hence entitled to permanent seats on the governing body.

However, Canada thus loses her seat held since 1922, and at once threatened to protest to the league council. The Canadians emphasized they were glad the United States was offered the permanent seat, but they objected to political maneuvering designed to safeguard the seats of Italy and India, whom Canada previously had outranked.

Other delegates sought to placate the Canadians, fearing an appeal to the council would embarrass the Roosevelt Administration, in as much as Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins has told Congress the labor organization is not essentially connected with the league.

Chief Resents Arrest of Son

Calls It 'Spite Work' After 'Tar and Feather' Case at Elkins.

Elkins, W. Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Police Chief F. E. Phillips today branded as "ridiculous" and as a "piece of spite work" the arrest of his 17-year-old son, William, on a charge of taking part in the tarring and feathering of Sylvia Tingler, 19, and Peter Rimo, 57, after they were dragged from the city jail here the night of January 21, by a band of masked men.

Young Phillips was taken before Magistrate R. B. Caplinger, by Sergt. E. E. Stout, of the State Police, who made the arrest, and was held in $500 bond for grand jury action.

The youth's father said he could account for all the boy's actions on the night of the mob violence, denying vigorously that he was a participant. Mayor Lacy Irons said the Tingler girl had "made numerous threats against Chief of Police Phillips." Iron branded the arrest as spite work.

State police are continuing the investigation of the mob action and say further arrests on warrants obtained would soon be made.

Tax Fraud Charge Assailed in Court

Former Revenue Employes Call Indictment Invalid.

Contending the indictment which accused them of conspiracy to defraud the United States was "vague, indefinite, and did not charge sufficient facts to constitute a crime," John W. Hardgrove and Henning Nelson, former employes of the Internal Revenue Bureau, yesterday asked the District Supreme Court to declare the presentments invalid.

The two were indicted along with Richard Callahan and Frank B. McElhill, after Thomas N. McCarter, New Jersey public utilities magnate, had complained to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., that he had been approached by persons who attempted to interest him in an alleged scheme to get back a disputed tax payment.

The attorneys charged that the regulation making the files confidential did not carry with it a penalty for violation of the rule. This, they said, removed it from the realm of criminality.

Red Clay Spread On Coasting Hill At Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.). There was no coasting on Cornell street hill last night.

The snow had been just right, but earlier in the day the city fathers, for safety's sake, had deemed it wise to cover the hill with a thin coat of red clay and sand. They said there had been rowdyism and drinking among the coasters.

For five nights Frederick's youngsters and their elders had taken advantage of the hill's excellent surface, free from automobile traffic, because it had been roped off.

Last night other hills in the city that were not roped off and over which traffic moved frequently were being used by the youngsters, who felt that they had been given a raw deal.

Doctors Hold No Hope For Adams' Recovery

Physicians virtually abandoned hope yesterday for the recovery of Jed C. Adams, member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals and former Democratic National committeeman from Texas, who has been ill of pneumonia for a week.

Friends said he lost consciousness late Monday night, the Associated Press reported.

World Court Issue Defeated In Senate by 7-Vote Margin

ganda" campaign he said has been waged against the resolution.

The debate took a personal tangent when Senator Huey (Kingfish) Long, of Louisiana, reminded the leader of Robinson's own radio speech for adherence, while Senator Thomas D. Schall (Republican), Minnesota, brought up Sunday night's national broadcast by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I have in mind," countered Robinson, "an address made by Father (Charles E.) Coughlin, of Detroit, in which he made declarations that had no basis in fact.

"I think he permitted his imagination to run riot, and impugned the intelligence of Senators."

Robinson said Father Coughlin "sounded like the Senator from Louisiana" when he said the World Court drew its support "from plutocrats and international bankers."

Senator Borah, archantagonist of the World Court and the League of Nations, pronounced the Senate's action the "most important development since the World War." He said it meant postponement of World Court adherence "forever."

"Victory for Peace."

"I think it was a distinct victory for the American people and for peace," he told reporters.

"A court which would prostitute itself, as it did in the German-Austrian (customs union) case, would be dangerous not only to the United States, but for world peace. The American people won the fight against the League of Nations, and they have won the fight against the World Court."

Reminiscent of the vote which kept the Senate out of the league 15 years ago, and of the only other major Senate reversal suffered by the Roosevelt Administration—rejection of the St. Lawrence waterways treaty last session—colorful crowds packed the galleries, and other hundreds waited patiently in line to view the spectacle.

Cheers Greet Vote.

Despite a caution by Vice President Garner against gallery demonstrations, a wave of hand-clapping and cheers greeted announcement of the final vote. The Vice President delivered another lecture and threatened to clear the galleries. But the show was over. Buzzing with excitement, the crowds filed out.

After the show-down, Leader Robinson, flushed from his last floor efforts, disclosed that at no time did the Administration have sufficient votes actually pledged to assure adherence. But he was obviously disappointed at the outcome. Until the last minute he had hoped that enough doubtful votes on the Democratic side of the aisle would swing to the President's support.

Illustrative of the losses suffered in the last few days was a statement by Senator William J. Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota, just before the vote was taken. A previous supporter of the court, he announced that persistent clamor for many reservations had made him skeptical of the wisdom of entry. He said his "conscience" demanded a negative vote.

Rejected Amendments.

Among last-minute amedments rejected by the Senate, before the adherence resolution was discarded bodily, were:

Reservation by Senator Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma, to prevent World Court participation as long as any member nation is six months in debt arrears to this country, defeated 58 to 26.

Amendment by Senator Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, barring adherence until member nations accepted United States reservations through an exchange of notes, defeated 49 to 34.

Clarifying amendment by Senator Borah, making it "clearly understood" that treaty negotiation must precede submission of matters to the court, rejected 44 to 40.

Amendment by Senator Long, requiring special treaties before any advisory opinion by the court on matters affecting this country, defeated by a voice vote.

The Thomas amendment, accepted by the leadership, requiring negotiation of treaties before this country could submit any matter to the World Court, was the second important concession made by the Administration in its efforts to win Senate approval. The first overture, last week, swept into the resolution the Vandenberg amendment, providing that World Court adherence should not be construed as departure from the traditional American policy of noninterference in Europe's affairs.

Norris Expected Approval.

Capping arguments against adherence, Senator Norris and Senator Trammell (Democrat), Florida, made final appeals for defeat of protocols. So uncertain was the outcome, that Norris conceded an Administration victory, and accused the leadership of "sweeping aside safeguards" in the rush for approval. Trammell charged the court set-up fails to conform to American standards of jurisprudence.

Robinson replied in a fiery speech, assailing pressure from "agencies outside the Senate, to terrify Senators," and allegations of imminent "entanglements that might lead to war."

Concluding three weeks of bitter debate, he vainly pointed out that four Presidents have favored adherence, and added:

"It is a sad thought that after 12 years of deliberation the Senate should recede from the position it took 9 years ago and refuse to take a stand for world peace."

'Ominous Isolation' Is Feared by British

London, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The Senate's rejection of the World Court resolution was regarded tonight as an "ominous isolation" move by the United States.

Britons felt the Senate's action may make President Roosevelt even more wary of European entanglements. They saw it also as certain to stop agitation for United States adherence to the League of Nations.

The rejection also may have indirect repercussions in the forthcoming currency stabilization talks between French and British statesmen here this week-end, because pegging the pound and franc without the dollar is considered ruled out, and it was assumed that Mr. Roosevelt now will be more disinclined than ever to risk the opposition of an inflationist Congress to stabilization.

Election Massacre Denials Continued

Not Guilty, Bruno Says to Kelayres Charges.

Pottsville, Pa., Jan. 29 (AP).—Two and a half hours of cross-examination, bristling with insinuations and veiled accusations, left Joseph J. Bruno unshaken today in his denial of a charge of participation in the Kelayres election eve outbreak which caused five deaths.

"No, sir; I did not," was his categorical answer to every question of whether he fired a shot, encouraged anyone to shoot or saw any person shoot from his house into the crwd of political marchers in the street under his windws.

The former county detective, two of his sons, a brother and three other kinsmen were arrested in his home and indicted for murder. He is the first brought to trial.

China to Seek Red War Union Japanese Hear

Newspapers Hail Possible Collaboration in Communist Clash.

Tokyo, Jan. 29 (AP).—A vigorous expression of Japan's "vital concern" for the peace of eastern Asia in the form of positive Sino-Japanese cooperation was heralded today in leading Japanese newspapers.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek of the Chinese nationalist government at Nanking will seek Japanese aid against China's communist armies, the newspapers said, and the collaboration thus initiated will result finally in the ousting of western influences from China.

The purported new Chinese policy was insistently attributed to Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, who last week told the diet he fervently hoped "China will awake to realization of the whole situation of east Asia and undertake to meet the genuine aspirations of our country."

Called "Imaginary."

That report, however, was as insistently denied. A spokesman for Hirota asserted the whole thing was "imaginary."

Most startling exposition of the new Chinese policy was that printed in the newspaper Nichi Nichi—an exposition the foreign office spokesman declared "so fantastic I decline to comment on it."

Nichi Nichi said Japan, if Nanking accepts her leadership in international affairs and guarantees cessation of anti-Japanese movements such as commercial boycotts, is willing:

1. To exchange ambassadors instead of ministers with China.

Separate Treaty Asked.

2. Sign an agreement with China similar to the Japanese-Manchukuan protocol under which Japan assumes responsibility for Manchukuo's defense.

3. Conclude a separate treaty with China nullifying the nine-power and other treaties to which other powers are parties.

4. Furnish China a military adviser, this, however, only if China dismisses Americans and Europeans now serving the Nanking and provincial governments.

5. Establish a permanent demilitarized zone in north China.

Loans Suggested.

6. Assist China to secede from the League of Nations, in furtherance of abandonment of her policy of obtaining help from America and Europe.

Japanese aid in Chiang's anti-Communist drive, the newspapers said, would take the form of lending China money, furnishing arms and munitions and sending a Japanese military adviser who would actually coduct the warfare against the reds.

Despite the official repudiations of the purported new Chinese policy, non-Japanese observers considered it an accurate expression of the desires of the extreme imperialists and militarists who strongly influence the Tokyo government.

It all ended by Fisch owing Hauptmann $7,500.

One night Fisch called at the Hauptmann home. He said he was gravely ill and that he was about to leave for Germany. With his friend Hauptmann he wanted to leave three things. Hauptmann said they were two satchels and a shoe box.

Months later, Hauptmann said, the shoe box burst open and there was $14,600 of the $50,000 Lindbergh paid to the kidnaper of his son.

Hauptmann began spending that money—"12 or 15 bills of it," is the way he put it today. Word came that Fisch had died, so on May 4, 1934, Hauptmann wrote a letter to Fisch's family. It was read in court today, translated from the German by George M. Priest, professor of Germanic languages at Princeton University.

"A week ago," it started, "I received the sad information of the death of your brother and my best friend. On the 14th of November, 1933, I took $2,000 out of stocks and gave it to Isador. I gave him $5,500 from a private banking account. Isador owes a Mrs. Hille $3,500 since 1932. Isador loaned a friend $2,000 for a delicatessen."

The letter ran on listing item after item, and Hauptmann ended it by telling the Fisch family that he had put $12,000 of his own money into his partnership with Isador.

"Now, Mr. Defendant," Wilentz said, "did you put $12,000 into this partnership?"

"No, it was $9,500."

"That wasn't true then, when you wrote to Fisch's brother that you put up $12,000?"

"No, it was $9,500."

"When you wrote that you took this money out of your private bank, is that true?"

"No, the part about the private bank was not true."

Admits False Testimony.

"When you were first arrested, didn't you tell the authorities that the reason you didn't take this ransom money down to a Federal Reserve bank was that you didn't know where there was a Federal Reserve bank?"

"May be so; I don't remember."

"And all the time you knew you had been in a Federal Reserve bank and deposited gold?"

"Yes."

"So you made a mistake at first and then you corrected that one, too?"

"Yes."

"You were Fisch's broker; you handled this money?"

"Yes."

"After April, 1932, when the ransom was paid, did you buy a canoe?"

"Yes."

"Your wife went to Germany?"

"Yes."

"You took a trip to Florida?"

"Yes."

"You took a hunting trip to Maine?

"Yes."

"And from April, 1932, until the time you were arrested you earned only $200 as a carpenter."

"That's right."

"And your wife didn't work?"

"No."

"Planned to Repay Fisch."

"How much of this ransom money were you going to spend?"

"I was going to stop after spending 12 or 15 bills."

"You were going to stop whether you were arrested or not?"

"Yes."

"What were you going to do with the rest of the money?"

"I was going to return it to Fisch's brother."

"Well, why didn't you?"

"I thought he was coming over here."

"Don't you know that in these two letters you wrote to Fisch's family, you never mentioned the money in the shoebox?"

"I was going to give Fisch's brother $12,000."

"But you never did?"

"No."

"Your friend Fisch lived in one room, didn't he?"

"Yes."

"What sort of a room?"

"A small room."

"Did he ever have more than one room?"

"I don't know."

"He owned no automobile, like you did?"

"No."

"You had thousands of dollars in September, 1934, and you knew you had it?"

"Yes."

And that is where Wilentz left the picture. A picture of Hauptmann living a life of luxury, riding in an automobile, not working at his trade. And a picture of Fisch living a weary existence in a furnished room, trying to earn bread and shelter in the fur business.

Only One Flare-up.

The two men—Wilentz and Hauptmann—were quiet and friendly most of the day in contrast to the scene of rage in which they indulged yesterday. Only one brief flare-up occurred, when Wilentz asked whether Hauptmann ever took a trip to Rye Beach with a man named Fritz Hahn. For some reason that question infuriated Hauptmann and he shouted at the attorney general:

"Who told you to say that?" Wilentz shot back at him.

"Nobody."

"Didn't one of your advisers tell you to signal to your wife the other day that she was to get up and call a witness a liar?"

"No."

"Who told you to change your story about the board found in your closet?"

"Nobody told me."

Then both were calm again.

Edward J. Reilly, of defense counsel, had scant time today, after Wilentz had completed cross-examination, to patch up the holes that the attorney general ripped in Hauptmann's story. That will come tomorrow.

He did get into the record, however, a payroll that shows Hauptmann worked on April 2, 1932. The Lindbergh ransom money was collected that night.

Wilentz called the evidence unimportant, and said Hauptmann's own testimony showed that he worked April 1, failed to work April 2 and decided to quit his carpenter's job on April 4.

Denman Confirmed as Judge.

Davis Foresees New Naval Pact With Japanese

Chief Point, He Says, Is Between Equality and Security.

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—A hint that the United States eventually will find some formula, making possible a new naval limitation agreement with Japan, was given by Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American delegation to the general disarmament conference, in an address tonight.

Reviewing the futile naval conversations in London, which ended in Japan's denunciation of the Washington limitation treaty, Davis told the Council on Foreign Relations that the chief cause of failure was disagreement between Japan, the United States and Britain, on questions of security and national prestige.

"The dominant issue involved," Davis said, "was that of 'equality of security' versus 'equality of armaments.' I regard—and I know the President regards—equality of security as a fundamental sovereign right of each power."

The statement was interpreted by students of the naval parleys, which are being continued in quiet diplomatic conversations in Washington and Tokyo, that President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull still hope a Japanese-American naval construction race can be avoided.

They may foresee an eventual agreement under which Japan would have the prestige of a naval ratio equal to that of Britain and the United States, while those powers would be safeguarded by arrangements in "security" clauses of the treaty. Davis was distressed that Japanese militarists have seized on the naval ratio question as a lever to establish beyond question Japan's dominance—a prestige based upon military power—in the Orient.

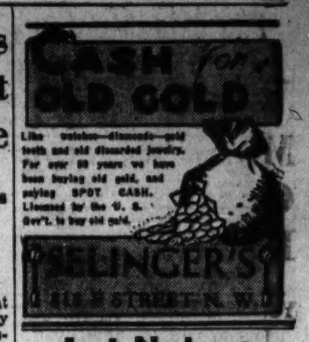

"As a matter of fact," he said, "military power consists of a navy, an army and an air force, and the combined strength of Japan in these three branches of arms is greater than that of the United States; yet, I do not consider that this affects the national prestige of America."

Davis emphasized the far Eastern situation throughout his address and believed that the line of approach used in the Washington conference should be used in new diplomatic efforts for stability in the Pacific. Such an approach would recognize that political and economic agreements should go hand in hand with naval limitation.

Let Nature Stop that Cold—but give her a helping hand

Plenty of fresh air is nature's way of curbing a cold. But it is certainly reasonable that you cannot breathe in fresh air when your nostrils are clogged.

The way to help nature rid you of that cold is to open up wide the air passages. Ephedrinated Vapex Nose Drops will do it—instantly. You can feel them penetrate to the innermost passages and clear them so that fresh, cooling, healing air can soothe the cold-inflamed membranes.

But be sure you use Ephedrinated Vapex Nose Drops. They are different from any other cold remedy ever made. They contain Vapex, that famous war time discovery for colds, and ephedrine which is prescribed by doctors in the treatment of colds.

Fast Modern Way to Relieve a Cold

How to Ease Distress Almost Instantly

FOLLOW DIRECTIONS IN PICTURES HERE

1. Take 2 BAYER Aspirin Tablets. Make sure you get the BAYER Tablets you ask for.

2. Drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

3. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER Aspirin Tablets in a third of a glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat soreness almost instantly.

You can relieve nearly any cold you get by taking BAYER Aspirin, drinking plenty of water; and, if throat is sore, gargling with BAYER Aspirin Tablets stirred in water.

This is recognized as a remarkably safe, sure, QUICK way. For it will relieve an ordinary cold almost as fast as you caught it.

Ask your doctor about this. And when you buy, be sure that you get the real BAYER Aspirin Tablets. They dissolve or disintegrate almost instantly. And thus work almost instantly when you take them. And in a gargle, Genuine Bayer Aspirin Tablets disintegrate with speed and completeness, leaving no irritating particles or grittiness.

BAYER Aspirin prices have been decisively reduced on all sizes, so there's no point now in accepting other than the real Bayer article you want.

Throat Feel Smoked-out?

Get it back quickly, and safely, with LA LASINE . . . the DOUBLE-ACTION Antiseptic

When you've smoked too much you have an unpleasant taste in your mouth. You see evidence of blackish-brown stained mucus. These are warnings.

For excessive smoking results in tiny particles of carbon and deposits of "tobacco tar" becoming embedded in the mouth mucus. Irritation may start . . . germs may breed too rapidly for Nature to kill them with her own antiseptics. Then the bacterial count of your mouth is thrown out of balance. Sore throat or catarrh may follow.

Get this throat ease . . . in 20 Seconds

Gargle with La Lasine mixed 50-50 with water. Or full strength if you wish. Double-action takes place. First, the antiseptic foam of La Lasine surrounds the irritating particles. Your mouth feels clean as you expel them. At the same time, special La Lasine membrane-restoratives bring back to par the salivary glands. Quickened to action, they release their antiseptic enzymes and ferments. The bacterial count of your mouth returns to balance.

La Lasine is safe—even if swallowed. It is used full strength in open wounds. Economical, the $1 size, fitted with dispenser top, makes 2½ pints. La Lasine International, Inc., New York.

LA LASINE

THE DOUBLE-ACTION ANTISEPTIC

1 Its antiseptic foam flushes germs out of the mouth.

"Not Without Honor, Save—"

The current study of Washington's utility regulations by State and municipal agencies is of more than passing significance. It can not be considered as a mere gesture of deference to the National Capital. Rather it is a result of the effective work which the Public Utilities Commission of the District has accomplished.

Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the P. U. C., will go to Albany this week to explain the methods used here to a special utility committee of the New York Legislature. Coincident with this announcement comes a report from New York City that the Washington plan of progressively reducing electricity rates is under consideration there. Officials in New York are deeply interested in the rate reductions that have been effected here without jeopardizing the capital invested in public utilities.

The rates paid by District residents for gas, electricity, telephone and street car service, etc., have been declining almost steadily since 1922. Today local utility rates are considerably lower than they were in 1913, although the cost of living is nearly 40 per cent higher. During the last 10 years the spread between utility rates here and in the country as a whole has progressively widened. For example, the index number representing electricity rates for the entire country had dropped from 91 in 1924 to 74 last year. During the same period the corresponding figure for local rates had fallen from 75 to 37.

It seems exaggerated to suggest that jealousy of this record explains the budgetary slash imposed upon the P. U. C. by Congress. But it is difficult to find any other reason for crippling an agency that has done such effective work. Whether the severely reduced allowance is a result of envy, prejudice or just plain indifference, it will inevitably detract from the prestige of the P. U. C. at a time when that prestige is winning Nation-wide recognition and admiration.

But For The Grace Of God.

The old Adams School, recently burned as a result of an overheated furnace and a defective flue, will get a new flue. This is not as absurd as it might at first appear, for school officials point out that there are some 25 classroom buildings in similar need of attention and repair. No pupils were in the Adams School.

Twenty-six years ago a special commission surveyed the District educational system and condemned eight buildings, five of which are still in use. Fortunately, only the overflow from the administrative offices was using the Adams building at the time of the fire, but hundreds of school children are attending daily classes in the remaining four. If it is not too grim a thought, speculate a moment on the possible consequences if one of these other run-down and inadequate heating systems had given way.

The House sub-committee investigating crime in the District is exhibiting a commendable thoroughness in studying the situation, even to the extent of accompanying police patrols on their nightly rounds. Would that members of the committee which ordered the cut in the District budget, thus blasting all hope of repairing and modernizing the school plant, could see their way to making a similar first-hand investigation.

It is lack of funds, not lack of foresight, that prevents the elimination of such dangerous hazards.

The Pay Cut.

It now seems virtually certain that the House will follow the Senate's lead and pass the bill restoring full pay to Government employes on April 1.

When the pay cut bill was originally voted, the country was led to suppose that a regime of economy designed to effect speedy budgetary balance was contemplated. Such being the case, the cut in the salaries of Government employes was accepted as a painful but logical consequence of the announced policies. However, when the Administration embarked upon its wage-raising program for workers in private employment, and especially when the prospect of budgetary balance began to recede into the distant future, it became increasingly difficult to justify cuts in the modest salaries of Government workers.

Today it appears almost ridiculous to haggle over the relatively paltry cost of advancing the date at which pay cuts are to be restored. A Government that asks carte blanche to borrow and spend nearly $5,000,000,000 for relief and pump-priming purposes can not with good grace refuse to "prime the pump" to the extent of $15,000,000 by returning the final one-third of the original pay cut. There are, of course, other arguments that might be advanced in favor of the restoration. But the chief one seems to be that the economy is by this time relatively immaterial.

A New Unionism?

Insufficient public attention has been given to the very interesting voting for employe representation in the automobile industry, now proceeding under the direction of the Automobile Labor Board. It seems not improbable that these elections, conducted with scrupulous care to avoid external influence of any kind, may provide the basis for a new form of unionism in this industry.

Out of 38,336 votes cast in eight major factories up to the end of last week only 1,847 favored allegiance to the American Federation of Labor. A still smaller number, 508 in all, expressed themselves in favor of company unionism, while exactly 14 workers favored the Communist Auto Workers Union.

Counting all the votes cast for minor labor organizations the returns to date show that 90 per cent of the representatives chosen by the workers as their spokesmen are free from affiliation with any existing form of unionism—company, trade or otherwise. The percentage of those eligible to vote who cast ballots is also about 90, so that the order of the A. F. of L. to have its membership boycott the elections does not seem to qualify the results greatly. At best, it appears, not more than 15 per cent of this large sample of automobile workers favors the A. F. of L. to represent them.

These results assume additional significance because of the present discussions in Washington on the future of the Automobile Code, which is due to expire on February 1. The American Federation of Labor has made it clear that it would prefer no code to renewal in the present form. But the right of the federation to speak dogmatically on the subject seems distinctly lessened by the present balloting in this particular industry.

The distinctive feature of the Automobile Code, from the labor viewpoint, is the board created last March, under the chairmanship of Leo Wolman, in a successful eleventh-hour effort to avert a strike in the industry. That board, which is holding the current elections, was established in part to ascertain the form of organization which would be selected by the workers under conditions of completely free choice. The balloting indicates that automotive labor strongly desires to work out its own industrial unionism, independent of either company or trade union domination.

Whether this development promises a more conservative or a more radical form of organization it is as yet impossible to foretell. But since there was agreement in advance to accept the results of these elections, the new situation should be allowed to crystallize without interference from any quarter.

It will be necessary to build works councils machinery to make collective bargaining effective under the new set-up. But the clear implication of the current voting is that the automobile workers prefer such slow constructive procedure to any immediate strike, called by an organization which has no claim to substantial representation in their industry.

Awakening Giant.

The inaugural trip over the Pennsylvania's newly-completed electrified trackage between Washington and New York represents acceptance of the challenge flung at the railroads in recent years by the fast-developing air and highway lines.

Except for the free champagne served to guests on the maiden run, officials claim that the performance will be typical of regular service in the future. New York will be three and a half hours distant, a saving of 45 minutes on the fastest present train time.

This spectacle of the sleeping giant at last awakening has great significance. Such developments as streamlining and electrification in railroading point to the day when the industry will recover much of the ground it has lost in recent years. Such a recovery will redound to the advantage of the country as a whole, to say nothing of the increased opportunities for convenient, economical and comfortable travel.

Twofold Reclamation.

A twofold interpretation may be applied to the title of the Civilian Conservation Corps. The more popular stresses the conservation of natural resources; the more inclusive lays emphasis on the conservation of the civilian workers themselves. In view of the proposal to expand the corps from its present 300,000 to an enlistment of 1,000,000, and the circumstances surrounding the resignation of Clarence S. Marsh as educational director of the organization, consideration of the double significance of the CCC program is particularly important.

It is conceded that the camps are outstanding among New Deal accomplishments. Not only have appreciable advances been made in the reclamation of land, but the diet of discipline and hard work seems to have solved, to a great extent, the otherwise high tension problem of unemployment among the youth of the country. But do land conservation and the physical well-being of youth represent the ultimate toward which the directors may aspire?

There yet remains, it would appear, the educational field. Since the controversy over the distribution of a booklet discussing the constructive and destructive influences of machines, the CCC educational program has been held in abeyance.

The theory behind the corps centers about a genuine desire better to equip young men to adjust and secure themselves in a fast-changing world. Concern for their physical development represents the first step in the accomplishment of this aim. Once organized, the need for an educational program—both vocational and academic—follows.

That it should be under expert direction goes without saying. In view of recent irresponsible demands to "give the boys guns" and some confused ideas as to what constitutes genuine education, a strong hand will be necessary to save the CCC from extraneous influences and propaganda. It would be well to make certain that the CCC is capable of meeting this responsibility before its personnel is increased.

The State Of Business.

The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production, seasonally adjusted, advanced from 74 per cent of the 1923-25 average in November to 85 per cent in December. This is an extraordinary and encouraging showing, the more impressive because it runs counter to the normal seasonal trend. However, the rise in the combined index undoubtedly tends to exaggerate the extent of the improvement in general business, since the automobile industry is directly or indirectly responsible for a large part of the improvement. Not only has automobile production advanced to the highest level in several years, but the large orders placed by automobile manufacturers are also the chief reason for the advance in the steel industry.

The steel industry, in fact, has been expanding for 15 consecutive weeks, the average operating rate rising from less than 23 per cent in September to over 52 per cent, according to the last weekly report of the American Iron and Steel Institute. Although there has been some increase in miscellaneous buying of steel products, the automobile industry is still the major factor in the market, as evidenced by the fact that steel mills are now operating at 60 per cent of capacity, or better, in regions where automobile steels are manufactured, while the rate is as low as 27 per cent in areas such as Philadelphia, where heavy steels are produced. A decided expansion of demands from railroads and construction industries is needed to bring about a general revival within the steel industry.

Certainly the prospects for a sustained business advance are precarious so long as improvement is based primarily upon so highly seasonal an industry as the manufacture of automobiles. Other trade and production indices have to be examined in order to obtain a more adequate picture of the general business situation. When that is done, the extent of the improvement is seen to be far from spectacular. The value of construction contracts awarded declined in December—a drop only partly seasonal in nature—followed, however, by some advance since the beginning of the year.

Moderate increases in electric output, petroleum refining and car loadings, currently reported, have also assisted to advance the level of private production indices since the December period covered by the report of the Federal Reserve Board. Nevertheless, the character of the upward movement is still too one-sided to offer complete assurance that it marks the beginning of a general business upturn. Already a few isolated indications of an impending recession in steel activity are noted.

Furthermore, threatened labor disturbances, erratic exchanges and general uneasiness created by the magnitude of the Government's spending program are among the factors that interfere with a revival of confidence in the future of American business. Until confidence is reestablished, an expansion of investment activities is certain to be very hesitating and the prospects of a recession, when the concentrated activities of the automobile industry have passed their peak, are correspondingly increased.

The Sensible Method.

The wisdom of rerouting street cars in an orthodox manner around Dupont Circle is self-evident. The National Capital Park and Planning Commission, in granting approval of a plan to accomplish this, is to be congratulated not so much because of the specific improvement, but more because it indicates that common sense is being applied to the traffic problem.

The survey of the means of transportation employed by Government workers is another case in point. Here again such thoughtful inquiry into the fundamental causes of the difficulties suggests that at last the District is working along constructive lines.

Washington's highways are not to be made safe by any one dramatic order or change. But the cumulative effect of obviously desirable revisions, aimed at the underlying factors in the congestion, will go a long way toward providing the solution.

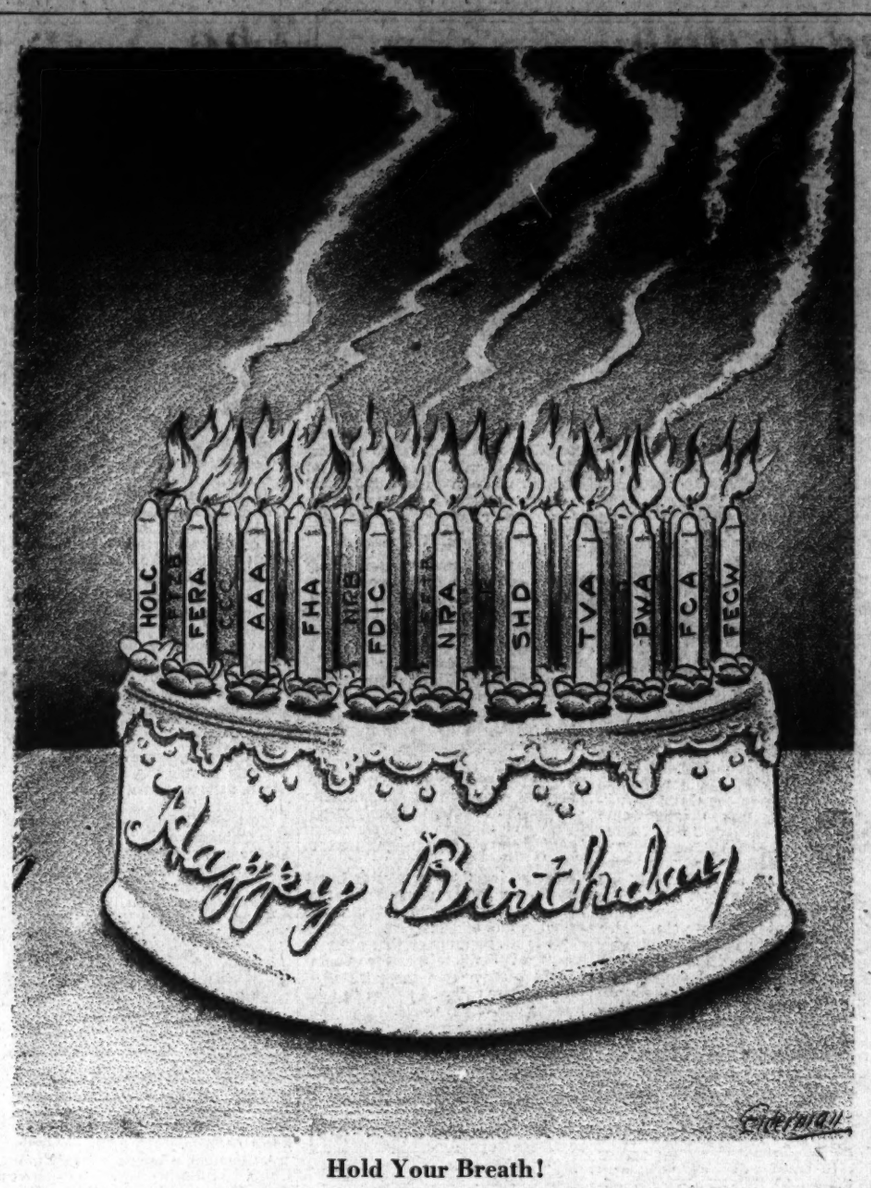

Rule By Bureaus.

(From the New York Sun.)

Representative Carpenter, of Kansas, is a Democrat, so that his picture of Washington bureaucracy can not be set down to partisan malice. In a speech in the House of Representatives on Monday he said:

> Who is it that has more power when it comes to legislation than Congress, the President and the Supreme Court all combined? Who is it that has a greater veto power than the President? It is the various bureaucrats here in Washington. Let a Congressman introduce a bill, and it is referred to a committee and immediately a copy is sent to some department. The chances are 99 out of 100, especially if they did not draw the bill or previously agree to it, they will notify the committee that they disapprove of the bill, and that, for all practical purposes, kills the bill.

The bill in question was not subject to amendment, though more than one member denounced a section which gives the head of the Farm Credit Administration authority to hire as many employes as he pleases and pay them whatever salaries he chooses. This is the same sort of evasion of the civil service principle that appeared in the law creating the Home Owners Loan Corporation and in other legislation.

Skater's Plaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Mirror Pool is again the scene of fine skating. But the facilities offered by the Nation's Capital are barbaric—no comfortable place to put on skates; icy exposure of women and children to seats on cold stone, snow and the ice itself—barring a few inadequate settees; no proper place to check things; no real care of the ice through cleaning and filling in of cracks with warm water, and most vital of all, no proper illumination at night.

Huge sums are available for all sorts of projects, but nothing seems to have been appropriated to provide a few simple comforts and conveniences for skaters.

This is not a criticism of the officials in charge of the public grounds. Their sentiments are well known. They would like to feel proud of what our great city offers to the public in the field of winter sports.

A few things can be done even as matters are. Already CCC boys have been put to work to clean off snow. May that work continue.

Why not get flood lights from the Army and possibly a tent, or a collapsible shed, which can be heated with a coal stove, and plenty of settees? And above all else, pour warm water in cracks late at night. This will avoid many a serious accident. Let us make Washington less ridiculous in its attitude to winter sports.

E. CHRISTOPHER MEYER.
Clarendon, Va., Jan. 28.

To Increase Immigration.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For many years the United States was an asylum for the downtrodden and the oppressed of all nations, and particularly for political refugees who were attracted by the freedom under our form of government. Many of these could neither read nor write, and like Pupin, one of the world's foremost electricians, arrived in New York with no surplus funds. Pupin had only 5 cents. These immigrants brought great prosperity to the United States.

It is well known by economists that every able-bodied man has the capacity of producing many times the cost of his sustenance, and this has been true in greater degree with every invention of labor-saving machinery. The Labor Department at Washington has evidently assumed that our army of unemployed was reason enough for the exclusion of immigrants, notwithstanding the fact that we have ample room in this country for 10 times our present population. And immigration has, therefore, practically been penalized out of existence.

The Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor was presented to us by France as a gesture of welcome to the land of liberty. It would seem to be in order now to provide this lady with a cash register and to relieve her of the uplifted torch!

HENRY WARE ALLEN.
Wichita, Kans., Jan. 23.

Beaches Or Hospitals?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago it was announced over the radio that the President was planning to establish a bathing beach and other amusements for the benefit of colored people in Maryland. To my knowledge there are several such places available for colored people in nearby Maryland.

I do not know how the President intends to finance this project, but whatever is the output, I think it would serve a better purpose if it were used to establish a hospital or any other place where a colored person could go and have expert treatment for the dreaded infantile paralysis. There are many of these unfortunate victims who can not get the proper treatment because there are not any such places provided for them.

I hope the President will reconsider the matter and give all for humanity rather than for pleasure. Even if there were no bathing beaches for colored people in Maryland, I still think that whatever money is spent should be spent for benefit of charity.

CLARENCE BRADFORD.
Washington, Jan. 22.

For Potomac Boulevard.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington papers recently carried a story concerning a Federal project in the State of Maryland—a boulevard to Baltimore to be made a "scenic" highway. Just why this highway is proposed is difficult to understand.

The State of Maryland under the Cramton act has had under advisement for some years a boulevard down the Maryland shore of the Potomac to parallel the Mount Vernon boulevard. The Park and Planning Commission laid out a marvelous highway which, when completed, would embrace 25 miles of truly "scenic" roads. This project included a bridge at Great Falls. I can't think of anything we need less than a "scenic" highway from the District to Baltimore.

On the other hand, the Potomac River road is a magnificent project and we are hoping Gov. Nice will be in favor of this form of Federal and State relief.

MRS. J. A. DORSEY.
Beltsville, Md., Jan. 28.

Concerning The World Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can see no advantage to be derived by the United States as a member of this court. The court is a creature of the League of Nations. Its judges are elected by the council of the league, and their salaries are paid by the league. Its judges and personnel are now, or may be, composed of Orientals, near Easterners, the leading European powers, and representatives of the many little nations created by the Treaty of Versailles.

The court is the representative of interests entirely foreign to the interests and welfare of the United States, or, as Washington said in his farewell address: "Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns."

Knowing, as we should by past experience, the unreliability, duplicity and double-dealing of European and Oriental diplomacy is it wise to submit our interests and welfare to such a court? Our nation, by reason of its detachment and disinterestedness can and does exercise far more influence for the good of the world than it could do as a member of the court.

It is to be regretted the President isn't as meticulous about other provisions of the Constitution as he appears to be about those involving his presidential prerogatives. It is difficult to see, however, wherein the Norris resolution infringes his prerogatives. It is only by an act of the Senate, and perhaps the House also, as adherence to the court involves appropriation of money, that we can join the court, and this being a fact it would seem that Congress has the constitutional authority to prescribe the conditions upon which we will join.

A. S. JANIER.
Washington, Jan. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I speak with reference to the League of Nations, and its offspring, the World Court, that were given birth here in the United States, but have been since disinherited for no reason other than that when the population of this country was about 5,000,000 a certain statesman said, "Beware of foreign entanglements!"

This is 1935, a period in which we literally "fly to live." And with all of our territory in use or "used up," it is just as impossible for us to live independently as it is for the world to exist without the aid of the sun and the moon, controllers of the tides, and the rains and winds.

Therefore, in consideration of the fact that the League of Nations is of American birthright, why not enter it and assist continental Europe, Asia and Africa to get together on establishment of a workable, commonsense bill of human rights.

In Washington's and Jefferson's day it was dangerous to become enmeshed in foreign entanglements because the Government of the United States then was physically unable to protect itself. And it was a 90-day voyage by sail from Europe to this continent. But then is not now.

If illicit trade is to be stopped, fellow countrymen, and a silencer put on radicalisms that will sooner or later cause another World War, a World Court is your one best bet. No country today can exist independently. WILLIAM MEYERS.
Washington, Jan. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The future destiny of this Nation hangs in the balance as the United States Senate debates the momentous question of whether or not we should enter the World Court.

I think we are all aware of the pitiful results of the league's efforts to restrain Japan's unpardonable aggression of China and its usurpation of power in Manchuria a few years back. What did the league do about it? Well, the league issued a few ultimatums, couched in the most delicate terms, to Japan protesting against its aggressive policies. Did this stop Japan? Most certainly it did not. Is the league doing anything today to stop Japan's expansionist policy in China? Of course it is not. Japan has set out to make herself the master of Asia and the league can do absolutely nothing about it, except look on from the sidelines.

What has the league been able to accomplish insofar as terminating the imbroglio between Paraguay and Bolivia in the Chaco? Nothing. And so it goes.

Are we to close our ears to the advice given by George Washington in his memorable Farewell Address, wherein he cautioned us to remain aloof from entangling European alliances?

Boy, Pitcher Of Ice-Water!

Post Office, Wednesday.

WHAT do you think of the bellboy? — Probably you don't think of him.

But what does the bellboy think of you?—You think he doesn't think? He knows an uncomfortable lot about you!

He knows so much that it would be worth your while to give him some thought—and to watch your step.

* * *

Bellboy!

It isn't often he's a boy. If you take—which you never do—a second look at him, you will see that the youthful uniform generally incloses a mature figure. If you could make him talk—which you rarely can—you would find that he generally possesses a grown-up brain.

In 1918, Gen. Pershing declared to a soldier at a hospital Over There: "Sergeant, you're a man the Army is proud of." Today people are calling to that former soldier: "Pitcher of ice-water, boy!"

He says, that it is not uncommon to find college graduates working as bellboys—recruits from the arts, lawyers, teachers, accountants and civil engineers. He says, moreover, that they are not hopping bells because it is the only work they can find.

He says it is fascinating work. And he says there is good money in it.

* * *

Money first:

This particular bellboy, whose nom de guerre is Sharkey, declares that the tips pile up, even in these lean days. In his hotel, there is one bellboy who owns a chicken farm; another is the sole proprietor of a "beauty-parlor" where eight "operatives" are employed; two of the bellboys own apartment-houses.

"Besides routine tips," he tells George A. Posner—who publishes these confessions of Sharkey in "Real America"—"there are rake-offs on every side, from buying jeweled dog-collars for wealthy dowagers to outfitting, as I did the other day, a pair of Siamese twins with a double-barreled dress-suit."

* * *

But, though money is an object, it is not the chief object of the genuine artist-bellboy. The kick is the thing—the fascination of the queer events that happen, the lure of the odd or great—or the odd-and-great—whom the bellboy can observe on a plane provided to few observers.

Sharkey served Charlie Chaplin when that comedian was himself drawing a modest $35 weekly: "He used to entertain his friends by doing funny falls in his room." Sharkey drew the morning bath for the movies' first Master Director, David Griffith: the bath "included chunks of ice and a dash of champagne." When the management sent Sharkey to inform Sarah Bernhardt that the guests disliked her shouting and furniture-breaking: "She panned me in highbrow theater-language."

He "roomed" Mme. Schumann-Heinck:

"The last time I heard you was in a 'Y' camp in France. You sang a song that stuck to me my whole hitch, 'When the Boys Come Home.'"

Said she: "Sit down."

* * *

Did other guests hammer on the wall when Paderewski played his piano out of hours? Sharkey had to explain to the artist that it was merely carpenters repairing the partition. Was the bed too small for Primo Carnera? Sharkey helped "break out the end to fit him." Why, Sharkey has seen the Singer Midgets lie down for the night across a cot—four in a row!

Is it any wonder that the bellboy becomes expert in "how to size up and handle all sorts of people?" This bellboy declares that the lesson is not hard to learn: we all belong in well-defined grooves . . .

Besides, "the heft of a bag" soon reveals whether it holds clothes or bricks.

* * *

Sharkey has found that the richest of us are not such liberal fee-dispensers, proportionately, as their less lucky brothers and sisters. Yet he says that a Scotchman is almost always a good tipper! . . .

* * *

What, however, the Post-Impressionist considers the most valuable confession made by Sharkey is this, which is just slipped into the middle of a paragraph:

"A tip out of proportion to the service we give makes us suspicious."

The Post-Impressionist wonders whether Sharkey really didn't make that confession inadvertently. We wonder whether, in any case, it does not constitute a breach of the Bellboys' Code of Professional Ethics and may not bring him up before the Board of Censors of the National Bellboys' Association.

* * *

Anyhow, Sharkey, here is where you yourself have done some tipping. You have given us a really helpful tip.

We hate to excite suspicion. And the more high-priced the hotel we enter, the more it gives us a guilty air—so the more we make it suspicious. But you, Sharkey, have kindly indicated how to end all that.

Henceforth, we shall stagger 50 per cent of our tips and administer a double-depression cut to the other half.

WHILE the League of Nations and the western world in general are engrossed with the universal economic depression, European political complications, the Saar situation, the Gran Chaco dispute, etc., a great game of empire building, greater, in point of the area involved, than has ever been recorded in modern history, is going on in that section of the Asian continent lying between China proper in the east and Russian Turkestan in the west, and between Siberia and India in the north and south, respectively. The area involved comprises something like 2,400,000 square miles, almost one-third of the habitable part of that continent.

The chief actors in this drama of empire are Soviet Russia and Great Britain, with Japan staging a sideshow. The real meaning of the Japanese-Manchukuo thrust into Chahar can be understood only in the light of that great drama. The curious fact is that the sideshow gets more advertising and draws larger crowds than the big show. After all, the Japanese must be a shrewder showman!

The scene in the drama is laid in Mongolia (1,367,600 square miles), Sinkiang (or Chinese Turkestan, 550,000 square miles), Tibet (463,000 square miles), all so-called dependencies of China, as well as a part of Yunnan, a province of China proper, with the Chinese Provinces of Kansu and Szechuan in danger of being drawn into it. These regions are obscure and inaccessible, far away from the beaten track, and, what is more significant, purposefully closed to foreign observers by powers interested. It is a drama which is not meant for showing until it is all over.

MEANWHILE, the Japanese sideshow in Manchuria (263,600 square miles) is for the whole world to see and criticize. Newspapermen of all nationalities and creeds have reported about it; foreign consuls, who have no legal right to be there, remain comfortably at Dairen, Mukden, Harbin, Antung and Newchwang; the Lytton Commission and a British trade mission have reported on it; foreign goods of all national origins enter there in increasing quantities. And so there is no use wasting words on the little show. Let us peep through the closed door at the big one.

First about Mongolia. In 1912, in the wake of the Chinese revolution of 1911, which spelt chaos and disintegration, Tsarist Russia virtually detached outer Mongolia from China and made it a Russian protectorate. The Mongol-Russian agreement concluded, then stated that "in accordance with the desire unanimously expressed by the Mongolians to maintain the national and historic constitution of their country, the Chinese troops and authorities were obliged to evacuate Mongolian territory, and the Khutukhtu (Living Buddha) was proclaimed ruler of the Mongolian people." "The old relations between Mongolia and China," it continued, "thus came to an end, and the imperial Russian government shall assist Mongolia to maintain the autonomous regime which she has established and to admit neither the presence of Chinese troops on her territory nor the colonization of her land by the Chinese."

Interpreting the above agreement and the protocol annexed thereto a Chinese writer, Mr. Ken Shen Weigh, says:

"It is to be noted that throughout the agreement the term 'Mongolia' and not 'Outer Mongolia' was used. Thus Russia by one stroke of the pen sought to nullify the age-old relations between Mongolia and China and secured for herself all the rights and privileges that even China herself did not enjoy in the days of her overlordship. In other words, China, hitherto the acknowledged suzerain, could not settle the foreign relations of her ex-vassal, could not deal with her directly, could not own land, could not colonize, could not build railways or have mining concessions. On the other hand, Russian subjects could move, reside freely anywhere in Mongolia, engage in every kind of business, commercial, industrial, or otherwise; Russian subjects could make contracts of every kind; Russian subjects could export and import goods free of duties, taxes, or other dues; Russian credit institutions could have branches in Mongolia and transact all kinds of businesses; Russians could have allotments on lease, acquire them as private property or for cultivation; Russians could obtain concessions of any kind."

• • • •

ALL this is necessary to remember, because the Bolshevist regime in Russia has adopted and strengthened the Czarist policy in Outer Mongolia. In 1921, the Soviet army had entered Outer Mongolia in pursuit of the remnants of the White army and set up at Urga a people's revolutionary government. Needless to say that this government was "run" by Russians, military and civil. Then the two governments signed a secret agreement which was understood to have included these provisions: (1) Soviet Russia and the revolutionary Mongol government recognize each other as the only government in the territory of Russia and Mongolia; (2) the Soviet government undertakes to establish in Mongolia, free of charge, postal telegraphic communications and will supply the necessary materials for this purpose; and, (3) the Mongol government recognizes the right of property on land within the territory of Mongolia and agrees to give the Russians the ground space necessary for buildings of diverse kinds and for railways built with Russian capital.

Soviet Russia, as a price for winning China's recognition in 1924, is said to have withdrawn its troops from Outer Mongolia, but only after native troops had been drilled according to Red ideas and Red methods. Moreover, the key positions in the native army are still occupied by Russian officers, while Mongolian finances and trade are virtually in Russian control. No foreigners, except Russians, are admitted into Outer Mongolia. No one raises the question of the open door. Sooner or later Mongolia will become a member of the Soviet Union.

But Outer Mongolia is to Russia only a step in her march toward China through Inner Mongolia, of which Chahar is a part. Under the Czarist regime, this advance was done by force of arms; the Soviet regime attempts it by subtler methods.

• • • •

NEXT about Sinkiang or Chinese Turkestan. This furnishes Russia with a second route of march toward China. Eventually this promises to become the main route, because the route through Outer and Inner Mongolia is exposed to Manchukuo-Japanese interception, as witness the present Chahar operations.

Sinkiang is a vast territory between Mongolia and Tibet. In the late summer of 1931 its Chinese governor, Chin Shu-yen, nicknamed "the Murderous Governor," because of his massacre of native Mohammedans, invoked Russian aid in order to quell a rebellion. Russia had just completed the Turksib Railway skirting the western boundary of Sinkiang for hundreds of miles, and was ready to enter upon a contest of political and economic supremacy in that new field. In response to China's appeal, the Soviet government rushed to Tehwa three bombing planes with Russian pilots, many machine guns and rifles, and a large quantity of ammunition.

Russia's price for giving this aid was a secret agreement by which the governor pledged himself: (1) To allow Russians to export the products of Sinkiang to Russia without special permit and without paying export duty; (2) to give Russia the exclusive right to promote industrial, agricultural, electrical and transportation enterprises for the economic development of Sinkiang; (3) to allow the Russians the freedom of travel in Sinkiang, and (4) to allow Russia to establish radio stations at Tehwa and Kashgar, and to open telegraph communication between Sinkiang and Russia.

The governor, though backed with Soviet money and Soviet arms, was finally forced to flee to Russia as a result of a coup d'etat staged by his enemies. Last year he was arrested in Shanghai, whither he had gone secretly from Russia, and confessed much of his nefarious dealings with the Soviet Union or its agents.

• • • •

MEANWHILE, the Chinese government sent to Sinkiang its foreign minister, Lo Wen-Kan, to look into the Russian situation there. He found that the governor was not the only man who was Russia's puppet, but that other Chinese generals also danced on the Russian string. According to information from Chinese sources, the trade and industry of Sinkiang are being monopolized by Russians, while Communist propaganda is keeping pace with economic penetration. The Russians set up shops and factories in all the principal towns and put the Chinese and natives out of business. Ninety per cent of Sinkiang's foreign trade has passed into Russian hands. In 1929 Sinkiang's trade with Soviet Russia amounted to 7,130,000 rubles. In 1931 the figures increased to 24,110,000 rubles and in 1932 to 28,000,000 rubles. The real meaning of Sovietization of Sinkiang is that it is a stage in Russia's advance into central China via Kansu and Szuchuan.

The Russification of Sinkiang has been a matter of grave concern to England. Soon after the construction of the Turksib Railway, that is, in June, 1931, England sent to Sinkiang an expedition from Simla, India. Disregarding Chinese protests, it explored the country for six months. At the same time, another expedition was organized in London on a much larger scale. It was equipped with airplanes and automobiles, and spent a year and a half exploring about 60 per cent of the territory. Observing that the Mohammedans, who constituted the majority of the population, hated the Chinese and were hostile toward the Russians, England adopted a policy of befriending and supporting them. Thus the provisional government of South Sinkiang was inaugurated in the city of Kashgar toward the end of 1933. It is generally presumed that England has obtained in South Sinkiang much the same privileges as were secured by Russia in North Sinkiang.

And now about Tibet. Beginning with Col. Younghusband's expedition in 1904, England has been deeply interested in Tibet. For 30 years it has been England's policy to extend her influence into Tibet by ingratiating with the Dalai Lama. When, in 1926, the Chinese nationalists under the guidance of two Bolshevist leaders, M. Borodin and Gen. Blucher (alias Galen), embarked upon a virulent anti-British agitation in the south of China, England rendered substantial assistance to the Dalai Lama's anti-Chinese campaign, thus hoping, perhaps, to make up in Tibet for what she was about to lose in the Yangtse Valley. In 1929 it was reported that tens of thousands of British and Indian soldiers had been sent to Tibet, and that native troops had been trained by British officers.

England has also advanced her interests on the Burmese-Chinese borderland. On December 19, 1933, a contingent of British soldiers entered a region called Panhung, which China had always claimed as part of Yunnan Province. They put up barracks, a radio station, and laid an airfield. The region, covering some 4,000 square miles, is said to be rich in gold and silver. British entrepreneurs, under the aegis of the military operations, are reported to have begun mining operations.

And thus the game of empire building goes merrily on, and a new map of Asia is in the making. Once more the theory of the white man's burden is in full bloom.

Along The Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

A Happy Company.

SOME of our highly discouraged Brain Trusters, what with the country coming to show an increasing dissatisfaction with their efforts, are finding comfort and understanding these days at the Canadian Legation. It might be said that it affords them a haven from the unappreciative voices of their own countrymen. Here they find a most receptive audience in the person of Minister Herridge. If one wanted to be mean he might say a receptive audience and a gullible one.

BARGERON.

The visits of Henry Wallace, Rex Tugwell and Leon Henderson, the latter of NIRA, to the legation have come to be so frequent as to attract considerable attention. There is a reason for the visits. The Canadian Minister thinks the Brain Trusters are fascinating and they very naturally think he has a most understanding, capacious mind. There can be aught but harmony in such a gathering as this.

It seems that Mr. Herridge's brother-in-law, Premier Bennett, of Canada, is skating politically on thin ice. Mr. Merwyn Brown, of the local staff of the Buffalo Evening News, points out that while it is the custom in Canada to call an election at least every four years, there has not been one since 1930 and the reason is that Mr. Bennett is afraid of his strength. Preparations are said to be under way for an election in the spring, however, and in the meantime, Mr. Bennett is doing everything he can to repair his political fences.

To this end he is looking around for new-fangled things. Who could be more helpful in a search such as this than Messrs. Wallace, Rex Tugwell and Leon Henderson. They not only can think up fantastic schemes, but they have the faculty of expressing them in poetic speech. Thus their friendship with Mr. Herrick.

Prime Minister Bennett in his pronouncements of the past six months has embraced one chunk of the New Deal after another until he is said now to have pretty much the whole piece. The visits of our Brain Trusters with Minister Herridge are believed to be responsible, not that they have sought to impose their schemes upon the Canadians, of course, but that the Canadian prime minister admittedly needs some new stuff and our Brain Trusters certainly have it.

The result is that Canada hears Prime Minister Bennett denouncing Laissez Faire, the French woman of the demi-monde whom the Brain Trusters brought over to sustain them and who is apparently now to make her entry into Canada. At least, without her Mr. Bennett will find it impossible to do to the Canadians what has been done to us.

• • • •

Mr. Bennett is said to have already promised an NRA, an AAA and a rout of the Old Order. Only recently he promised an Economic Council though not as all-powerful as that advocated by Mr. Wallace. His speeches are paraphrases of our Brain Trusters. One sees Tugwell, particularly, in nearly everything he says.

Of course, it is not intended to suggest the Brain Trusters have yet been dethroned here. But there are enough signs to make them uncertain of their future and unhappy. Even though we still take many of their doses we are not doing it with the hurray of a few months ago. This in itself makes them feel down in the mouth. Their poetic nature makes them sensitive. They not only want us to swallow their medicine but to acclaim them as saviors as we do so.

Is it any wonder then that because of our general unappreciativeness and growing signs of downright disgust that they should welcome the refuge which Minister Herridge offers? Ah, he is a man that understands.

What Prime Minister Bennett doesn't realize, though, is that there is really no need of this indirect way of getting their ideas.

He can have the Brain Trusters up in Ottawa with him. We won't mind.

Allred Acts to Clear Capitol of Transients

Austin, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Texas Rangers and highway patrolmen were ordered by Gov. James V. Allred today to patrol capitol grounds to prohbit transient unemployed from camping there.

The governor commended the State Board of Control, relief administrators, for refusing to feed the transients, saying, "They were uninvited."

California Lifts Florida Ban.

Sacramento, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—A 19-year-old quarantine against the importation of Florida citrus fruits into California was lifted today by A. A. Brock, State director of agriculture. Under a quarantine against citrus canker and mekanese, California markets have been closed to fresh Florida citrus fruits since 1916.

No End Of Books

'Sea-Sequel' to 'Week-End Book' Chock-a-Block Full of Fact and Fancy for Nautical Tastes.

By Theodore Hall.

I'VE never taken "The Week-End Book" on a week-end, and I don't expect to take the "Sea Sequel to the Week-End Book" (Random House, $2.50) to sea. Why? Because I must own to a disinclination at leading particular treasures out into the perils, convivial or nautical, of life.

"The Week-End Book"—let's lead up to its new-born brother gradually was and is a book to turn a Sinn Feiner into an Anglophile of the deepest dye. Nobody but the British, seemingly, can make and anthology so downright charming. Vera Meynell, Francis Meynell and John Goss selected their "Great Poems, Hate Poems, State Poems," their games and songs, their cooking hints and first-aid advices, and tucked these odd bedfellows snug and cozy within the pleasantest of covers.

The book began modestly. My 1924 copy—shades of bibliophilia! could it be a "first," held as unwittingly as I once, as a child, read and pored over and played with and scuffed about on the floor an 1885 "first" of "Huckleberry Finn?"—this 10-year-old copy, anyway, has but 320 pages. And the latest edition, after more than 125,000 copies have gone out into fond and increasingly fond hands, holds 564 pages. A good thing grows, you see, and "The Week-End Book" added lore on birds, stars, architecture and (imagine it! but it's done to a turn) law. Then it sent out an off-shoot, "The Week-End Problem Book." Now its urbane, gently witty, all curious and companionable spirit puts out to sea.

• • • •

Ideal for Sea.

Marion Coates, who edited "Sea Sequel," along with the editors of the pioneer volume, is pretty sure you'll take the book voyaging. Implying shipboard days, he says of it:

"Its aim is to pamper every mood from energetic elation to dyspeptic dejection; from that engendered by the wish that the voyage might never end to one of despair that it ever began; from inspiration to panacea, from lazy peace to excessive heartiness—in short, from poetry to piracy to ping-pong."

But certainly we can use this gay homeopathy ashore—and on dry land, now and at once, is where you'll want to get acquainted with "Sea Sequel."

• • • •

The editors proceed first to "pamper" us with a hundred pages of salt-water poetry, from the ballad of "The Death of Admiral Benbow" ("Brave Benbow he set sail for to fight, for to fight") all the way to T. S. Eliot's magical "Marina."

Then they repeat to use eight sea stories—Conrad, Masefield, Melville, and so on, not forgetting that landlord himself at the inn of sailorman humor, W. W. Jacobs. Who reads Jacobs nowadays?—and I can't help putting the question in the tones of hearty old octogenarian blood would employ when he asks: Who has fun anymore? J. B. Priestley stretched it only a little when he said that the stories of Ginger, Peter, and old Sam Small had given him "boy and man, more delight than the total works of Rabindranath Tagore, Andre Gide, James Joyce, John Masefield, George Moore, Jakob Wassermann, Eugene O'Neill, Georg Kaiser, Theodore Dreiser, and probably the Nobel Prize winners for the next ten years."

• • • •

"The Battle and the Breeze."

But we've got to go swinging on. A section called "The Battle and the Breeze" holds a grand array of true narratives of the sea—discovery and stirring voyages from Vasco da Gama to Admiral Peary. Another holds adventures of mutiny, piracy and shipwreck, as well as data on the famous mysteries of the Marie Celeste, on the Erebus and the Tiger amid Arctic ice, and on that old favorite, the Sea-Serpent.

Taking up "Games: Dress and Undress," the editors offer very sharp tips on deck tennis and shuffleboard, etc., and note with astuteness that on shipboard "it is possible by an arrangement of nets to play cricket quite a long time before the balls have all been lost" and that "football is rare to the point of being unheard of." Should you feel an urge toward "Housey-housey," a very British gambling game with just about the finesse of cold-hand poker, you'll find the rules here.

As for another deck sport, listen to the eminently wise editors: "If you wish to win the potato race, you do so before the race commences, by persuading everybody else that it is easier to carry a large potato than a small one." Keyserling once remarked that on cruises people were twice themselves in fancy dress, and our amiable advisers give hints on everything from Javanese dancing girls to Arabian sheiks. Due warning is included, for the latter costume, that under the sheets and towels "there should be at least one undergarment.

• • • •

The "Ship's Company" section will prepare you to sail a small boat and to avoid collisions (sinister notions, both, for passengers on liners). Still, all this navigation, rules of the road, and tide and weather data will make your conversation impressively nautical. After a pious perusal of this section you will be able to point out a captain from a purser by the stripes on his sleeve, to declare to your table mate that the Cutty Sark was a faster clipper than the Thermopylae, and to bowl opposition over with the statement that on a single voyage the Levithan can carry a volume of freight equal to a train of freight cars 44 miles long.

Even if your only chance to exhibit your salt water blood is a trip on the Fall River night boat, this section will still be worth its weight in 66-cent dollars to you.

• • • •

Perils of the Sea.

"The perils of the sea are the common perils of the land with one or two added, and one or two (earthquakes and taxicab skids, for example) eliminated." So we're given professional advice on such ills as seasickness, hiccups, sunburn, and on a condition described as "Before the Night"—"Before retiring to the Smoke room, it is recommended to take a half to one ounce of olive oil."

Which leads (the editors have been about, one sees) to a collection of chanteys and sea songs with music provided. Then they wind it all up with a glossary of sea terms ("a moribund language which 'hotelism' on board ship makes it unnecessary to learn") and the familiar "Week-End Book" style of blank pages for your own additions to the anthology.

"Sea Sequel" is handsomely printed, delectably bound, and so primed with obvious self-recommendation that I can only say: There it is; go and enjoy it.

"We'd better trade back—here comes ma!"

Charles I Of England

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE great Queen Elizabeth died in 1603, having reigned 45 years. Then England and Scotland were united. The King of the Scots, James VI, the son of Mary Queen of Scots, became King James I of Great Britain. His oldest son, Henry, the Prince of Wales, was one of the most charming boys in the history of the royal families. If he had succeeded to the throne, the history of England might have been different. Unfortunately he died in 1612, at the age of 18, and in 1625 Charles became king.

I was brought up in the Puritan tradition, so that when I was a child, I had about the same opinion of Charles as was held by those who removed his head; it was only after I grew up, and read more history, that I discovered that he was one of the most religious and pious of British kings, and that he was also quite uxorious, under the domination of his wife. He was not a "bad man" morally. But he had the misfortune to believe that he was the Lord's anointed, that he ruled by Divine right. Now there is no good in holding such a view, unless your subjects agree with you.

• • • •

The British love individual liberty, and the Parliamentary Party happened to be led by a man of genius, one of the greatest soldiers in military history, Oliver Cromwell. He was just as religious as the king, but belonged to "a different denomination." To him the Divine right meant nothing at all. Many of his party had no wish to do the king any bodily injury; they merely wished more liberty. But Cromwell, talking to his soldiers, told them that he did not want any man to follow him who would have the slightest hesitation to pistol the king if he met him on the field of battle.

• • • •

Oliver Cromwell became dictator with the title of Protector. The general opinion used to be that Cromwell was a sanctimonious hypocrite, assuming extreme piety in order to control the Puritan party.

About 200 years after the execution of Charles, Thomas Carlyle said to himself, "All the historians are trying to account for the mask worn by Oliver; they inquire as to the nature of this mask and his reasons for wearing it. What if this mask should prove to be no mask at all, but rather the man's own face?"

When King Charles II came to the throne in 1660, the judges who had condemned his father fled for their lives. Three of them arrived in New Haven, Conn., and three of the city streets today bear their names —Whaley avenue, Dixwell avenue and Goffe street.

Spoils System Would End In Dictatorship

Drive To Raid Relief And Other Agencies Sure Way To Undermine Democracy.

By Elliott Thurston.

IT would be hard to overstate the importance of the issue raised by the Congressmen who are threatening to harass and cripple Government relief and other agencies in order to force these agencies to surrender all control over appointments. Such a drive as that now launched by House Democrats would, if successful, be the surest, quickest way, not only to wreck the New Deal, but to undermine a Democratic form of government.

One reason why Fascists, Socialists and Communists alike predict the ultimate downfall of democracy is that democracy is sure to crash when administration of large and difficult affairs falls into the hands of incompetent political camp followers and job hunters. The British long ago foresaw this, as they have foreseen so many other things which are only just beginning to be understood on this side of the Atlantic. The British civil service, without being by any means perfect, is nevertheless a model. It provides a reasonable guarantee that public affairs will be managed competently and with necessary continuity regardless of the political administrations which come and go.

More than ever today it is imperative for the United States to establish a real civil service, free from the influence of politics and covering far more important offices than now come under the rules. For as the Federal Government expands and assumes control over more and more of the affairs of the Nation, the administrative problem becomes at once the most vital.

• • • •

BAD laws can be largely mitigated by good administration. But the best of laws are bound to prove ruinous when applied by incompetent administrators. We have had many examples of this. The securities act has proved an unworkable act, but able administration has done much—all that is possible short of amendment of the act—to make it sane and workable. The Farm Loan System, under previous administrations, was sound enough legislation, but it was literally wrecked by the very kind of politics which the House Democrats now want to play with Federal relief agencies like the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Public Works Administration. The Farm Loan System was finally salvaged from the politicians, but only after a deadly struggle.

The present drive by House Democrats is amazingly brazen. In normal times it would deserve and receive adequate public attention—and be squelched by the force of decent public opinion. It aims to raid relief agencies so that politicians will fill jobs now held by men chosen for experience, merit and ability. The HOLC and the RFC, for example, could soon be destroyed if incompetent politicians were to replace trained, experienced examiners and appraisers—and these are the jobs for which the politicians are now hungering.

In the HOLC, for instance, the appraiser is a key man. Largely on his expert judgment rests the question of whether the Government is to make good loans or bad loans—whether money is to be thrown away or soundly used. If time-serving politicians are to get these highly important jobs it follows inevitably that public funds will be squandered and used to line the pockets of favorites.

• • • •

THE same is equally true of RFC examiners and experts. They pass on loans, on appraisals. The work requires high intelligence, experience and impartiality. It is no job for the political hanger-on. If this work is to go under the rule of political favoritism, if money is to be loaned to pay political debts or buy political support, then the result is all too obvious. That way lies the downfall not merely of the Administration but of democracy itself.

Why President Roosevelt tolerates the unblushing spoilsmen like Mr. Farley and at the same time supports and appeals for higher standards of public service is an eternal mystery of his best friends and supporters—Senator Norris, for example. The result is a wholly inconsistent mixture of good and bad administration. That is, a few relief and administrative agencies have been free from the spoilsmen at least so far as selection of trained technical and expert personnel is concerned. Others have been delivered over body and soul to Mr. Farley. As soon as some of the well-run agencies get rid of incompetents they turn up overnight on the pay rolls of other agencies.

• • • •

THE political demoralization and corruption of public service is no new phenomenon, heaven knows, but it is more serious than ever today because the Government has undertaken to run more of the country's business than ever before. Problems of such magnitude and complexity are involved as to tax the best brains available. Management of the enormous affairs already taken under the wing of the Government is going to be difficult enough without turning it over to job hunters who are sure in the end to destroy themselves if they do not destroy this form of government.

Nothing would do more to cheer those who want to fasten iron dictatorship upon this country than to turn over administration to certain demoralization from which the only escape would be to transfer management to a Stalin, a Hitler or a Mussolini.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Elmer Goes South.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.

Dear Ed: Well, here I am down here in Miami entirely surrounded by $2 mutuel windows, sunburn fanatics and people who have taken a pledge not to bother with the furnace. It is the same old place except the pink flamingo influence is spreading, and there is a flock on the grounds of a Miami Beach hotel almost as big as the one at Hialeah. I don't know whether the management got a setting of eggs from Joe Widener or whether a pair of Hialeah flamingoes were persuaded to come to the beach and start housekeeping, but, anyhow, these pink birds are getting to be the smart lawn ornament down here, and I am thinking of getting one myself.

• • • •

It looks like a good season down here, although the hotels are suffering from something of a boomerang. There was such a rush of tourists in December that word went forth that the biggest season since the boom was impending. Hotels in general raised their rates and the result was that thousands of tourists were frightened off. Now the boys are in something of a panic, and it will be doing them a favor to let you know that there are plenty of rooms at Miami and at Miami Beach and that the managements will listen to reason. So come on down.

• • • •

The building business may be a flop in other parts of the Distracted States of America, but now houses have sprung up all over Miami Beach since last winter, and this community affords the goggle-eyed visitors that novelty of novelties these days, a busy carpenter. This is probably the only section of the country where architects and masons don't have to take a memory course to recall when they last did a day's work.

• • • •

Bayshore and LaGorce golf courses at Miami Beach are in better shape than ever and either the traps are not so deep or else I am getting shorter. LaGorce is the course where each hole is named after some famous writer, and if my game runs true to form this season I expect to have the rough named after me.

• • • •

The long shots have been featuring life at Hialeah and every third person you meet in southern Florida is engaged in the difficult feat of trying to read a dog chart and a horse chart at the same time, and, incidentally, play a punch board.

• • • •

Altogether it is a gay and nutty life, but what puzzles me more than anything else down here is the discovery that the Minsky brothers have opened a burlesque house at Miami Beach!

• • • •

This may not be carting coals to Newcastle, but is certainly carrying strip poker to a nudity camp.

Can You Remember?——

Away back when a Big Spender was generally thought of as a Broadway playboy instead of a United States Senator?

Kentucky Emergency Relief officials found that 84 families on relief rolls had 105 coon dogs listed by name as requiring assistance, too. The report that the dogs are refusing to do any hunting for fear they will become ineligible is being investigated.

Maj. Hollock's Funeral To Be Held Tomorrow

Funeral services for Maj. Roland M. Hollock, U. S. A., retired, will held at the Fort Myer Chapel, tomorrow, at 2:30 p. m. Full military honors will be accorded him from the Fort Myer Gate of Arlington National Cemetery. The Alexandria Masonic Lodge will participate in the services.

Maj. Hollock died Monday night at Walter Reed General Hospital. He was 60 years of age. A native of Pennsylvania, he went into the Army Service Corps in 1918, later entering the Judge Advocate General's Department. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lillian Hollock, 118 Masonic View, Alexandria, Va.

Wells Reelected Head Of D. C. Scout Council

Capt. Chester Wells has been reelected president of the District of Columbia Council of the Boy Scouts of America, it was announced yesterday.

Lady Hobart Killed As Hunter Stumbles

Taunton, Somerset, England, Jan. 29 (AP).—Lady Hobart, master of the Taunton Vale Harriers, was killed on the hunting field today. Her horse stumbled on ground made slippery through a thaw and threw her heavily to the ground.

Sir Vere Hobart, her husband, is ill in London. Lady Hobart formerly was master of the Isle of Weight Harriers and was commandant of the Westcliff War Hospital.

Birthday Fetes Rule Schedule Of Night Clubs

Hotel to Open All Floors to Roosevelt Benefit; Some Music Slang.

By Kay Ware.

The President's Birthday Ball and night club news are practically one today. All ballrooms at the Shoreham will be opened, three orchestra's—Max Lowe's, Sidney's and Meyer Davis'—will furnish music for dancing. Frederico and Barbara, featured in the Shoreham's floor show, will dance for guests. The Gypsy ensemble from Club Troika will appear 15 strong including Matt Windsor, impresario; Ladimar Diloff, basso, formerly with the Cosmopolitan opera; Marusia Sava, contralto; Mme. Pauline Achmatova, soprano; Mme. Anna Sablukova, operatic star formerly with the Moscow Art Theater, and Vyacheslaw Momonoff, tenor. Also, Boris Yourlo, the dancer, will be there.

Tiny Da Costa's Tango Orchestra is ready for your entertainment in the Lounge. Don't forget about Tiny's new contest—he wants parodies on "Anything Goes."

Heigh-Ho is all agog about the Cansinos, smooth dance team. The term smooth is deliberately chosen, because the two pride themselves on the ebb and flow of their steps. Rumor has it that they're to appear at a local theater. More later.

Social list includes Leon Belasco, Vince Callahan, and Herluf Provensen, enjoying themselves after the Armour broadcast last week. Also, Cornelia Otis Skinner appeared.

From Sidney's Orchestra at the Mayflower lounge comes this list of expressions used by musicians. Next time you hear any of them use the words below, you will know what they mean:

To jam—When an orchestra jams, they play "hot" music during the entire evening.

Session—The hours of a job, i. e., "cocktail session," "supper session," etc.

Corny—The musician's favorite term for anything that isn't musical—a band may be "corny," a musician or a song likewise.

Commercial—When a song is called "commercial" it means it was written to appeal to the masses. It's usually "corny."

This concludes the first lesson.

Ernestine Gardner has been all dressed up like an Oriental maiden, while rehearsing vocal numbers for the Bal Boheme. Fenton Froom, her vocal partner, intends to go as Fu Manchu.

Two ladies who like the Bamboo Room at the Willard are Hope Jackson and "Jo" Andrews, of the Army set.

Pilgrim's Club introduces Gina and Giano, smart dance team, who do Boleros under the rustic ceiling of the club. Charel de Thomee pleases the artistic with piano solos and imitations of La Bordini. Harlette Carr, blues singer, is direct from the Lord Baltimore Hotel; Roy Masters and his Cosmopolitas furnish dance music.

Lotus goes in for girls—eight of them—who can dance as a chorus then step out of line for specialties. They are Leonora's Debs, picked, trained, and staged by Leonora herself, who runs a dancing school in New York, and is fussy about her shows. She selects only eight girls from a hundred or more, believes they must look sweet and refined.

Mixing pleasure with business, the Hi-Hat's Paradise Islanders landed a little more business. Seems that Sam King, Hawaiian delegate to Congress, and John Wilson, former Mayor of Honolulu paid the Islanders a visit, got into a back-home-chinning. The upshot was that the musicians planned for a congressional social function, date yet to be determined.

Another good bit: Gordon St. Chad, the leader, used to be in the employ of Henry Ford as the automobile king's private entertainer. George Ku, another of the group, played for Ford following St. Chad's engagement.

Hi-Hat's management is planning to enlarge the room. It needs it.

The Government Employe's Sick Benefit Association is putting on a dance at the Auditorium February 28. Radio orchestra, singers and acts are promised. For tickets or further information call Vincent Haskin, Lincoln 9866.

Line-up at Club Habana: Rahda, dancer who studied Hawaiian and Indian dances from natives; the Masters duo with musical comedy and tap dances. Regulars, Schaeffer, Del Roy, Donahue, Leon Brusiloff and Boys always good for a sigh, laugh or tear.

Embassy Cocktail spot with reminders of comforting beverages lining the walls is a new and attractive place. Try a Sunday dinner there.

Interpreting 'The Flea'

Bigamy Charges Hold Restaurant Manager

Albert F. Sturm, restaurant manager, was held for grand jury action on bigamy charges yesterday before Police Judge Gus A. Schuldt.

Sturm, it was charged, married in Austria in 1921. He allegedly left home last year and married again. He contended he had obtained a divorce from his first wife in Austria. He was held in bond of $1,000.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway Skyline.

I BROKE two dates with Jack Dempsey yesterday. At 11 a. m., I was supposed to have met Dempsey and Lou Davis to inspect Jack's palatial new restaurant, and at 5 p. m. I was to have met the Crown Princess of the Dempsey dynasty, the baby, Joan, but a cold canceled both of these pleasant obligations.

We made the dates Saturday midnight, while the Dempseys and myself were en route from the Central Park Casino to El Morocco. The cab was lurching and side-slipping through streets packed with drifted snow. Traveling with Dempsey at any time is a precarious adventure—the cab drivers neglect their wheels and compass to sneak glimpses of the most famous heavyweight champion of our time.

Dempsey enjoys the affectionate interest of the mobs. "We all pretend that it is annoying to have people staring and whispering," said Jack the other night, "but wouldn't it be terrible if it stopped." Other celebrities aren't so honest.

He is excited over the baby, Joan. I asked Hannah if the baby daughter resembled her. "She looks just like Jack," the mother said. "Even her shoulders and hands resemble him." Dempsey shook his head. "No, she doesn't," he said weakly. Hannah said, "Stop denying it, you know that you love to hear me say she resembles you." So the big fellow laughed, "I guess you're right at that, Honey."

BEFORE CAROL LOMBARD left for Miami and Havana, she asked me to drop in and have a cocktail. "Dropping in" at the Waldorf is a definite defiance of the laws of gravity, because to drop in, you generally have to soar 20 or 30 floors through the elevator shafts.

The blonde Lombard miss was in bed—ill—when her secretary ushered me in. Outside, the winds were howling and snapping, the windy blasts driving the snow against the window with the sound of buckshot. The doctor had picked a good day to keep her in bed.

A silver tray, very elegant, stood on a table. Into it, The Lombard daintily inserted a hand and pulled out a humble frankfurter. I'd expected caviar.

She is a brisk, interesting speaker. The level blue-gray eyes and high forehead hint at the ambition and determination of the flickers' blonde sophisticate. She is a good two-fisted curser and her "hells" and "damns" offer staccato punctuation to her sentences. You can understand readily why John Barrymore took to her while filming "Twentieth Century" for Columbia. Her frankness would appeal to any man.

One line of her part in this picture was addressed to Barrymore. Glaring at him while the cameras ground, she shouted: "You're nothing but a cheap ham actor." Barrymore laughed when she delivered the line the first time. "Tell the truth, Carole," he said, "you've been wanting to tell me that for the last two weeks, haven't you?"

OBSERVATIONS: Confirmation of yesterday's line about Rosalind Kress. . . . Heiress to the 5-and-10 millions. . . . Who will wed Wesley Frame, Washington, D. C., boy with the Utica Mohawk Cotton Mills. . . . Was forthcoming at her New York home . . . Daniel M. Magee, in charge of Miss Kress' business affairs, verified the engagement, according to the Associated Press. . . . When Bert Ord and his fiance, Louise Fowler, of Worcester, Mass., give a dinner party for Mr. Frame and his fiance, Miss Kress! . . . Broadway has gone very British, with "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," "Clive of India," "David Copperfield" and "The Iron Duke." . . . British Gaumont's treatment of "The Iron Duke," dramatization of the career of the Duke of Wellington, is pretty bad. . . . At no time does the central character emerge strongly and forcefully. . . . It is high drama reduced to a bedroom farce. . . . Most of the Broadway bars have concocted special cocktails and highballs for the President's Birthday Parties. A bartender showed me the recipe for his own creation. . . . It was a powerful drink, even on paper, and when the various ingredients were mixed together, it promised to have the kick of a mule. . . . "What do you call this paralyzer?" I asked. . . . "It's the Recovery cocktail," said the bartender. . . . Sort of a knock-you-down recovery.

GRETA GARBO, going to a night club on the coast, wins column upon column of publicity. We are assured that this is the first time the former Copenhagen department store worker has done this.

There seems to be an error in the records. When Garbo was in New York, she visited The Park Avenue night after night.

However, the coast must be excused its naivete. Just recently, Louella Parsons' column told us that "Peter Ibbetson" had been purchased as a starring vehicle for Gary Cooper. "The story will be changed," said Miss Parsons, "to give it a Gary Cooper slant" . . . I wonder if they can give Shakespeare a Joan Crawford slant.

CAN'T get out of my mind the drama of that little British trawler, foundering in the Mediterranean, and sending out a gallant farewell . . . "If any ship picks up this wireless," the radio sputtered, "this is a salute to Old England" . . . It sends a chill up your spine.

Sharecroppers Appeal To AAA Investigator

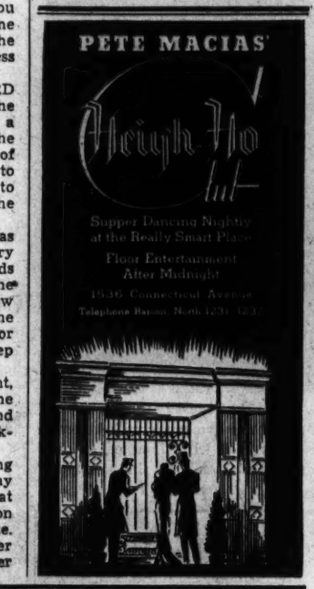

Marked Tree, Ark., Jan. 29 (AP). The sharecroppers — described by Norman Thomas, Socialist Party leader, as "forgotten men," living in conditions "worse than peonage"—carried their grievances to the Government today.

Workers from the east Arkansas farms took their complaint to Mrs. Mary Conner Myers, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, who is conducting an investigation at the direction of Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. Mrs. Myers revealed nothing concerning what she heard. Her report will go to Washington shortly.

Mrs. William Dawson, wife of the United States Minister to Ecuador and Colombia, arrived in New York yesterday on the Grace liner Santa Clara.

Representative and Mrs. James H. Gildea have been joined in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel by their daughter, Miss Marjorie M. Gildea, who arrived from Coaldale, Pa., yesterday.

Mrs. Emanuel B. Celler has joined Representative Celler at the Shoreham for a few days.

Florescus Will Give Dinner Party Tonight.

The Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. Florescus will entertain at dinner tonight in their home on Woodley road, in honor of the United States Minister to Rumania, Mr. Alvin Mansfield Owsley. The guests will number ten.

The Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Baroness van Breugel Douglas are spending several days in New York. They met the former's sister, Mlle. Louise van Breugel Douglas, who arived in New York yesterday morning aboard the Volendam from Holland.

Mlle. van Breugel Douglas will accompany Baron and Baroness van Breugel Douglas to Washington the first of the week. She will visit them for several months.

Mr. Joao de Deus Ramos, Secretary of the Portuguese Legation, has returned to the Shoreham after spending the Christmas holidays with his family in Portugal.

Mrs. William Jennings Price will entertain at luncheon tomorrow at the Mayflower in compliment to the sisters of Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Mrs. Carroll Miller, Miss Ida Guffey, and Miss Pauletta Guffey.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Holcombe, jr., of Farmington, Conn., who are visiting friends here for a few days, are stopping at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Commander John F. Donelson, who is stationed at the Navy Department here, and Mrs. Donelson have moved to the Wardman Park Hotel.

Miss Marjorie Walsh, who has been at the Mayflower for the past two months, will leave today for her home, Belcamp, in Cincinnati. After spending about a month there with her mother, Mrs. Frederick W. Hinkle, Miss Walsh is planning to go on a southern cruise and then make a trip to New Mexico. She will return to Washington in March.

Visitors From Chicago Leave for Palm Beach.

Mrs. Bertha E. Baur and Mrs. R. T. McKeever, of Chicago, who have been guests at the Mayflower for two weeks, left yesterday for Palm Beach. Mrs. Baur will remain in Florida about a week and sail for England to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bartle Bull.

Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore Hodges, of San Francisco, and their son, Henry Clay Hodges, are at the Shoreham for an extended stay.

Mr. Oliver B. North, assistant commercial attache to the United States legation in Ottawa, is at the Mayflower.

Mrs. George Burnham will have guests with her at luncheon at the Mayflower today following the last of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concerts of the season. Other luncheon hostesses will include Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Eugene Woodson, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mrs. Ernest H. Daniel and Mrs. John Proctor.

Del Mars to Leave For Florida Soon

Plans for Journey Include Flight to Nassau.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar will leave next week for Florida, accompanied by the latter's mother, Mrs. Given. They will go first to Winter Haven, where they will spend some time with Mrs. del Mar's sister, Mrs. Frederick Brooks McFeely. Mrs. Given will remain there, and Mrs. and Mrs. del Mar will fly to Nassau for a brief visit. On their return they will go to Palm Beach, where Mrs. Given will join them. They will be away about three weeks.

Mrs. del Mar will entertain at a luncheon today in her home on Belmont road.

Party at Hotel Today Will Aid Fund for Blind

Money Will Be Raised to Provide Talking Book Machines.

In cooperation with Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the Secretary of War, and chairman of the Washington Talking Book Committee, nine local organizations of Jewish women will give a card party today at the Wardman Park Hotel. The money raised will be used to provide Talking Book machines for the sightless of Washington.

Mrs. David Pressler is chairman and Mrs. Joseph Salomon is vice-chairman of the party. Handsome door prizes have been donated.

The talking books, now being circulated free to the blind throughout the United States through a Federal appropriation, must be recorded on these reading machines in order to read aloud to the blind. Since the Federal appropriation is limited to the publication and free circulation of the books, efforts are being made to place the machines in the hands of the needy among the blind.

State Society Election Called

Plans for Social Events Will Be Made at Meeting Friday.

The Connecticut Society will elect officers at a meeting Friday at 8 o'clock at the Willard Hotel. Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Meriden, is a candidate for president. Mrs. George Maynard Minor, of Hartford, a former head of the D. A. R., is slated for vice president, as is Mrs. M. Eva Woodward, of Norwich, a descendant of the second Governor of the State.

Plans for an elaborate program of entertainments for the remainder of the social season will be discussed. As Connecticut is now celebrating its tercentenary, being the only State in the Union with 300 years of self-government, the society will make preliminary plans for a function to mark the occasion. It is expected this event will be held within the next few weeks.

Mrs. Johnston Here On Way to Florida

Former Capital Social Leader Is at Mayflower.

Mrs. Ormond Lawson Johnston, of London, arrived from New York last night for a brief stay at the Mayflower before going to Palm Beach to spend a fortnight. Mrs. Johnston is remembered as the former Mrs. Lyman B. Kendall, prominent in Capital society.

After the death of Mr. Kendall, she made her home for some time on their estate in Bradley Hills. Her daughter, Mrs. George Grant Mason 3d, the former Miss Jane Kendall, who has been spending the winter in New York, is now in Palm Beach. Mrs. Johnston will return to England after her visit in the South.

Social Leaders Plan to Attend Concert Today

Boston Symphony Orchestra Will Give Program at Constitution Hall.

A notable group has made reservations for the second matinee concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, conductor, to be given at Constitution Hall this afternoon. Before the concert Dr. and Mrs. Koussevitzky will be luncheon guests of the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips.

Among those who will attend the concert are the following boxholders:

Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Chester Bolton, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. William R. Castle, the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. R. W. Crafts' Studio Offers Variety Of Instruction

Block Printing, Needlework, Designing, Lettering Among Courses.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

HOURS that pass on leaden feet soon acquire the wings of the wind once you've joined the extremely pleasurable classes at a craft's studio.

Here you learn block printing, needlework, leather work, designing, lettering, basketry, weaving, wood carving, camp crafts and how to make such diverse things as jewelry and marionettes.

Aside from its being all manner of fun, it's really quite a saving, too. For instance, the lovely leather purses you so often admire and pinch your budget to purchase, you can make yourself for amazingly little. And, of course, you can do your own designing and have just the the bag you've dreamed about.

It's the same way with jewelry. Few women are ever able to find just the right brooch or pair of earrings. Hundreds of women walk the soles off their shoes looking for a certain type of belt buckle. How simple and what fun to make your own, to see your own idea take actual shape and form!

One young lady who was particularly interested in the weaving classes has just completed a colonial bedspread in an old design done in blue and white. She has this over a spool bed and everybody thinks her great-grandmother made it.

There's another very good angle to these craft classes. Those who are new in Washington and are eager to meet congenial companions will find this an interesting place for contacts.

There are classes all day, and night classes too, so pick your time—and your craft!

Artificial Fingernails.

Never has it been truer that any woman—even the one who bites her fingernails—can have attractive hands. As everyone knows, hands are made or marred by fingernails so it would seem that she with the nervous biting habit would be out of luck. But not so! A local store has hundreds of customers who depend on artificial fingernails to give their hands a slender, tapering effect.

These fingernails come 10 to a package and include a small container of dependable mucilage and an applicator. You put the nails on, file them to suit yourself, and polish them as you please. You can count on it. No one will ever guess they aren't your own, and plenty of people will envy you.

From a very practical standpoint a box of artificial nails is a veritable life saver at times. Just at the crucial moment, say, you break your nail. What's to be done? The answer is quite simple if you're a wowan with foresight. A broken nail becomes a matter of no consequence. A new one in its place, and presto! you're all fixed up!

Candlewick Spreads.

Ladies, here's the chance of a lifetime. A very alert and enterprising young man, who happens to be buyer for a bedding department, chanced upon an amazing bargain. He bought up some lovely candlewick spreads at prices many times below par. He is putting these on display today and you have only to see them to become immediately candlewick-minded!

There are dozens of different designs, in dozens of beautifully combined colors, or you may buy them in a solid natural.

For the time being they will sell for anywhere from a third to a half "off," so that you will be able to pick up a $20 spread for almost nothing and a $10 spread for less than that.

One of these little wonders is a splendid example of unusual designing and workmanship. It is bordered with a long fringe and has altogether over 16,000 tufts!

The spreads are available in single and double sizes, almost any color scheme, and at unbelievably bargain prices.

What Today Means

"Aquarius."

IF JANUARY 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 1:15 to 3:15 p. m. and from 6:15 to 8:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m.

On this January 30 some well meaning friend may possibly call your attention to one of your shortcomings. You will exercise good judgment if instead of taking offense you express your appreciation of their frankness, and at the same time make up your mind to correct it. Business results may depend largely on your own mental attitude, so it is very important that you keep in an optimistic state of mind and display a cheerful countenance. Mental relaxation is desirable on this date, so it is advisable to seek in the evening some diverting form of amusement.

A singer who upsets all traditions of opera stars is this platinum haired young woman, Helen Jepson, who sings in Washington today. She's lean, untemperamental and doesn't try to surround herself with an aura of glamour. Her conversation is occupied more with her husband, baby, and cooking ability than with tales of singing triumphs.

Newest Met Star Makes a Stunning Appearance in Mannish Suit.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

TRADITIONS which have nurtured grand opera singers for years are calmly brushed aside by platinum-haired Helen Jepson, newest star of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Take the matter of size and appearance. While most divas are conspicuous by their weight, Miss Jepson is as lean as a sportswoman.

When she entered the music room of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, her Washington impresario, yesterday morning she was wearing a severely mannish suit with gray waistcoat, pastel shirt and four-in-hand tie. Her head was covered with tight curls which out-platinumed Jean Harlow's. Sounds incongruous, but the effect was nothing short of stunning.

Then consider the matter of temperament. Helen Jepson hasn't any, at least not in the accepted sense. Emotional depth, yes. But temperament, no. She's not one of these prima donnas who put on the high dudgeon act if asked to sing anything less than an aria. The beauteous, dark-eyed Helen leaps blithly from Faust to the "Old Oaken Bucket." They're both music as far as she is concerned.

Will Make Movie In June.

Long before she made her debut at the Metropolitan last week she had been singing Stephen Foster's familiar numbers and other homey songs over the radio. Says she enjoyed it because more people will sit down and listen to "Swanee River" than to "Thais." Incidentally, she hopes to sing both "Faust" and "Thais" at the Metropolitan some day. And in June she will make a talking picture.

Since her amazingly successful audition at the Met, Miss Jepson has spent a large part of her time in being interviewed. She has learned to take rapid-fire questioning and the crackle of flashlight bulbs as matter-of-factly as she takes her oatmeal. Only once has she been a trifle annoyed with her publicity, she said yesterday. That was when a New York reporter quoted her as using more slang than a chorus girl.

"And I really use very little slang," the songstress explained. "But after that article appeared I received dozens of letters saying I was evidently not the right type to sing at the Metropolitan."

"Sometimes it takes me all day Sunday," she smiled.

Cooks as Well as She Sings.

She's more than willing to talk about her husband, George Possell, and their 2-year-old daughter, Sallie Patricia. The orchidaceous existences of other divas is not for Helen Jepson. She's a homemaker and is proud of it; declares she can cook just as well as she can sing.

Baby Sallie Patricia is her attractive young mother's most consistent admirer. She paws through every magazine and whenever there's a picture of a blonde she thinks it is her parent and begins to coo "Mama, ma-ma," at the photography.

"And if she can't find a picture of a blonde, Sallie Patricia is disgusted. She throws the magazine on the floor," laughed the Met's newest soprano. "And you should hear her imitate me. She strikes a couple of notes on the piano and then vocalizes. Oh, she's a darling; has a remarkable sense of rhythm. I want her to be a pianist. Not a professional one, perhaps, but I want her to be able to play well while she's young. It's important for a girl to have accomplishments like that, I think."

Husband Also a Musician.

Sallie Patricia comes by her sense of rhythm naturally. Her father as well as her mother is a musician. Mr. Possell, a flautist in the orchestra with which Helen Jepson broadcasts, is his wife's best friend and severest critic.

"But I never criticize him," Helen said. "You see he's quite a bit older than I and he knows so much about music. He knows so much more than I do—about everything."

And then the opera star who began her singing career in an Akron, Ohio, church choir adjusted her four-in-hand tie and patted her platinum curls. Another news photographer was ready to pop a flashlight bulb in her face.

Has Emotional Depth but She Is Without Temperament.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

EVERY MOTHER has to be a fatalist to some degree. If she worries for fear the children will fall off the swing when they're playing outdoors, or catch the measles in school or take cold when they forget their rubbers, she will be gray before her time. If she takes every possible precaution against danger, she will make life insufferable for the children with her constant warnings. So, to some extent, she must let things take their course and hope for the best.

Yet there are certain dangers that are so constant, so serious in their effect, that it behooves every mother to exert herself to prevent them. Coasting in the street is one of them.

No one wants to deny the youngsters the fun of coasting, and in crowded sections where play areas are few, the problem of how the children can play in safety is a difficult one. Yet even on the outskirts of the District, where there seems little excuse for it, children coast in the streets. There is scarcely a motorist who has not had the horrible sensation of coming suddenly upon a child rounding a corner on a sled directly in front of the car; even a careful driver is not to blame when an accident occurs under such circumstances.

Keeping children off the street is the parents' responsibility. Impress them as vividly as you can with the potential dangers. Send them, or take them if you can, to the parks or hills which are set aside for coasting. If you live in a suburb, help them to find a hill on a vacant lot that goes down to the woods, and not into a public highway. Encourage them to play there, even though you have to stay to supervise the sweeping and packing down of the snow, to make the hill good for coasting. It takes constant vigilance to keep the children off the streets, but the effort is well spent.

Mrs. Anna Nagle, of Boston, national president of the National Spanish War Auxiliary, will be the guest of honor at a reception to be given by the local chapter tonight at the Carlton Hotel.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Should Unattached Woman Live in Hotel Room, House or Apartment?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I read your column each day, but haven't yet seen a problem brought up like mine. I am a woman without family ties, and don't know just how to go about making myself a home that will be pleasant and comfortable. Hotels I find crowded and noisy, affording no real place for entertaining my friends. They yield no real privacy. Yet to live alone in a house seems unwise, and to find congenial friends who might share a house is difficult.

• • • •

All my friends have their own homes, and strangers are a gamble.

I could afford to take a nice house and furnish it with some lovely things I have collected. But can one person really make a home, and is it worth the effort to keep up an establishment? My relatives are all married or dead, with the exception of an aged aunt whom I had expected to live with me, but who is now so feeble she must spend her remaining days in a hospital.

• • • •

I can hardly bear to go on living in a hotel. My friends tell me it is not safe for a woman to live alone. Does a single woman fit in anywhere? One day I think I have decided to take a house, furnish it and try living in it; the next day I hesitate and waver. What do you advise? PERPLEXED.

Apartment Preferable.

DEAR PERPLEXED: If you lead a somewhat retired life, socially, I don't believe you would be justified in assuming the expense and responsibility of a house. A small apartment, in a good apartment house or apartment hotel, is much to be preferred for the single woman. There are advantages as well as disadvantages, depending upon the point of view of the individual, to living in a hotel room.

• • • •

I think you will find the greater number of unattached women who, like yourself, don't care for life in a hotel room; and who are in a position to create a home more to their liking, find a small apartment the most satisfactory solution.

• • • •

There is, of course, an isolation about apartment house living that isn't necessarily true of life either in a hotel or in a house; but that should appeal particularly to one who seeks privacy, who is averse to crowds and noise, and who wants to create a pleasant, homelike atmosphere, in which to entertain her friends.

• • • •

Certainly a single woman is "safe" within the walls of a well-ordered apartment house in a good neighborhood, where tenants have to pass a sort of merit test before they are admitted. There are many such apartment houses in Washington.

I personally would advocate a home of one's own, without friends, however congenial, included as permanent fixtures. Because a home, in the truest sense, reflects the personality of its mistress, and that she is not entirely free to express if she must take another's tastes into account.

If I were in your position: dissatisfied with my present hotel room, with the means to lease an apartment, and the desire to make a home, possessed of lovely things with which to begin to furnish it, I shouldn't waste a moment of time in negotiating with a rental agency. M. H.

Pudding Gets Conspicuous Place On the Menu in Cold Weather

By Dorothea Duncan.

FORTUNATE these days is the housewife who knows her puddings. The weather man is doing all he can to make this half-forgotten dessert have a welcome and conspicuous place on the menu. The rest is up to the housewife. Before you insist that your family prefers pie or cake to puddings, look into the vast realm of desserts that have been kept in the background because they bear the lowly name—pudding.

You never hesitate to serve plum pudding for Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner because it is a good old-fashioned American tradition. Why, then, do you let it become completely eclipsed by another dessert after two servings? If, by any chance, it is too expensive, try one of the other delicious steamed puddings. There are any number that are economical and equally tempting.

If you haven't a steamer you can make one very easily. A rack placed in the bottom of your largest covered baking dish will do the trick. The pudding may be steamed in separate custard cups or in baking powder cans. The latter are most adaptable because they have close-fitting lids. The bottom of the baking pan is filled with boiling water, and the pudding containers are set on the rack which has been placed in the bottom of the pan. The lid will not be as close fitting as that of a steamer, so if there is no steam outlet valve in your baking pan cover, you still need have no fear that the steam will blow off the lid of the pan. Enough steam will escape from around the lid to prevent this. The pan should be set on a fire just hot enough to make plenty of steam within the pan.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.

3 tablespoons butter
2-3 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
1 cup milk
2¼ cups flour
4½ teaspoons baking powder
2½ squares unsweetened chocolate
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, and egg. Mix and sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with milk to first mixture, then add chocolate, melted over hot water. Turn into buttered mold. Steam for two hours.

Molds should be filled not more than two-thirds full as the puddings will expand. The water should come half-way up the sides of the mold. Boiling water should be added in the steamer as needed.

Don't forget that cornstarch, sago and tapioca are the backbone of many a delicious pudding. Rice has its place among these three, too. These, of course, are the cooked and baked puddings. Fruit, canned, fresh or dried, coconut, nuts, raisins, figs and dates will develop the character and palatability of your puddings. Even a plain cornstarch pudding is an admirable dessert when served with a sauce of fruit or chocolate.

Dinner Menu.

Tomato Bisque
Croutons
Escalloped Salmon
Baked Idaho Potatoes
Buttered Spinach
Salad Greens with French Dressing
Bread and Butter
Snow Peaks
Coffee Milk (for children)

Snow Peaks.

1 tall can evaporated milk diluted with ¼ cup water
1-3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, separated
3 tablespoons Angelica wine
1 No. 2½ can peaches

Scald diluted evaporated milk in double boiler. Mix sugar, cornstarch, salt and beaten egg yolks. Add to milk and cook, stirring constantly until mixture coats spoon. Remove at once, cool and add wine. Put peaches in sherbet glasses. Add custard and top with meringue, made by beating egg whites with 6 tablespoons confectioner's sugar and ½ teaspoon almond extract. Serves 6.

Use 1 teaspoon vanilla if wine is omitted.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Healing Power of Fever.

"AIN'T nature wonderful!" said the city waif on his first visit to a fresh air home in the country. Nature is wonderful and the protective functions of the body are legion.

In spite of a tremendous amount of investigation we do not know all about fever. For centuries fever was interpreted as a disease. Before we knew about bacteria, scores of ponderous medical volumes appeared entitled, "Fever" or "Fevers," and we still have the term coupled with a descriptive word to indicate the kind or sort of fever, such as typhoid, scarlet, puerperal, typhus, yellow, etc.

It is generally conceded that fever is the body's reaction to the insult of infection. It means that tissues are being burned at an increased rate, the heartbeat is more rapid, and the breathing is usually accelerated. Perhaps under these conditions the body is manufacturing neutralizing substances that destroy infection. We know, however, that a very high fever is in itself a menace if continued for any appreciable length of time. It changes the structure of certain body cells and may render them useless, hence an effort is made in the presence of infection to keep the fever within reasonable bounds. Sponging with tepid or even cold water will drop the temperature a degree or so and leave the patient more comfortable. This is a rational therapeutic measure, but the use of powerful drugs to reduce temperature, except in the higher ranges, is now frowned upon.

In certain chronic types of infection the body does not seem to be able to neutralize the toxin or destroy the infecting agent because temperature does not develop. Chronic arthritis and syphilis of the nervous system are examples and both usually improve under fever therapy.

In 1917 Wagner-Jauregg threw a veritable bombshell into the medical ranks by demonstrating that artificially produced fever exerted a beneficial effect on syphilis of the nervous system. In order to produce this fever for the treatment of cases of dementia paralytica—a type of insanity due to syphilis—he used malaria organisms. His was pioneer work and was followed in some instances by spectacular results.

Within the last few years the high frequency current (superdiathermy or radiothermy) has been employed and has the advantage of convenience and of careful control. In other words, the temperature may be raised to any desired point for as long as required.

Caution must be observed in any form of fever therapy, as the temperature of the body must not be raised artifically (1) without good reason, (2) unless a careful physical examination shows that the patient can withstand the temperature, (3) without the certainty that the apparatus employed is accurate, reliable, and under complete control. Equipment is now available by means of which the temperature may be raised to 105 degrees F. or even higher and maintained for a few hours at that level with safety. This treatment must not be attempted by unskilled or untrained persons.

Novels Called Women's Best Creative Work

Woman's best work in the art world consists in writing novels, Sheila Kaye-Smith, noted English writer declared recently in New York. She is spending a few months in the United States. Although she qualified woman's contributions to the arts in general, Miss Kaye-Smith said members of her sex have been pioneers in many stages of the novel's development. In this connection she mentioned Sarah Fielding, Jane Austen, George Eliot, and Virginia Woolf.

Abundant Life Plan Unfolded By Poet's Wife

Mme. Angelo Sikelianos Discusses Activities With Mrs. Roosevelt.

By Elizabeth Young.

THIRTY YEARS ago in Greece an American girl discovered, and since has lived, a way of life which can, she says, lead the world out of chaos. It can replace human frustration with artistic self-expression for every individual.

It has to do, she says, with using one's hands and one's feet . . . "and, incidentally, one's brains."

Mrs. Roosevelt, she says, has recognized and placed in operation this basic principle through her handicraft and subsistence homestead projects.

Who is this prophet of the more abundant life? She is Mme. Angelo Sikelianos, born Eva Palmer, of New York City, for 25 years wife of the great Greek poet who founded the Delphic movement, and his indefatigable partner in reviving the Delphic festivals in Greece.

Made Authentic Costumes.

That revival in 1925 of the ancient Greek festival was no easy achievement. While her husband toured Greece, spending his private fortune buying from the peasantry magnificent exhibits of handicraft, they would not lend because they could not comprehend the notion. Mme. Sikelianos busied herself at loom and bench, turning out authentic Greek costumes to be worn in the pageants and games. She directed the production of "Prometheus Bound," and learned for the first time how wisely, if blindly, she had chosen in youth to study Greek drama and Byzantine music and art; why she had mastered the technique of weaving and cobbling.

In helping give form to her poet-husband's plan—since sponsored by the Greek government—to make Delphi the center of world culture, and a world capitol which might bring all nations into accord in solving common human problems, Mme. Sikelianos found the threads of her past training and experience falling into a meaningful pattern.

As Mme. Sikelianos talked she absent-mindedly stroked the deep folds of the Greek chiton which was her dress. She leaned slightly forward from her seat on a couch at the Dodge Hotel. The chiton, a straight navy blue garment of soft heavy wool, would have been bulky on a figure less slight. Her bare feet were shod in thonged leather sandals which she had made herself. She makes everything she wears. Her arms were bare from the shoulder, and her hair, reddish-sandy in color, was cut to shoulder length, braided on either side in front of her ears, and bound about with a braided fillet.

She was genuinely oblivious of the curious glances of passersby. After all, she has dressed in that fashion for 30 years, and must have ceased long since to be self-conscious about her appearance, if ever she was.

Fabrics Delightful to Wear.

Discussing her wardrobe, she said: "I've dressed myself entirely for 30 years. And I'm dressed forever. These handwoven fabrics never wear out; they're easy to make, easy to wash, and delightful to wear. They can be put on a dozen different ways, so one never tires of them."

Mme. Sikelianos had come to Washington to discuss with Mrs. Roosevelt her experience in reviving interest in handicrafts in Greece. The meeting resulted in Mme. Sikelianos' departing from Washington the same evening to inspect Mrs. Roosevelt's subsistence homestead project at Reedsville, W. Va., and when interviewed she was arranging to take the first train there.

"Can humanity revert to the simple life again?" she repeated the question put to her. "I think so. Mrs. Roosevelt is getting at it, in her belief in the necessity of restoring handicrafts, in her attempt to get people out of the city, into the country. We must make life as interesting in the country as it seems in the city.

Liberate Artistic Capabilities.

"By the organization of great folk festivals, like ours at Delphi, you stimulate and liberate all kinds of artistic capabilities in the individual which he doesn't realize he has until he tries them. I think there is tremendous hope of people finding themselves through working with their hands.

"The opportunity to liberate our creative capacity—what else do we want of life?" She recited, half humorously, scientists' accusation that humanity is developing automobile legs, and in a few generations will have lost the power of voluntary locomotion, unless people return to walking.

"The same principle applies to hands," she said. "Almost nobody uses his hands to create in this generation. But perhaps we can reclaim the ability in a generation if we try.

"Yes, we can return to the simple life, if we will begin again to use our hands and our feet, and, incidentally, our brains."

Parole Reform Is Asked in Bill Given to House

$5,000-a-Year Chairman, 2 Judges on Board Here Proposed.

By James D. Secrest.

A complete change in the District parole administration, which has been under fire of District law enforcement officers for several months, is proposed in a bill introduced in the House late yesterday by Representative Ditter (Republican), Pennsylvania.

The measure, Ditter explained, is an outgrowth of hearings conducted by the District Appropriations sub-committee, of which the Pennsylvanian is the only minority member.

Under the proposed set-up the parole board would be composed of an appointee of the President and two justices of the District Supreme Court, to be designated by the chief justice. The justices would serve in rotation for periods of one month.

$5,000 for Chairman.

The present parole board is composed of three persons appointed by the District Commissioners and serving on a part-time basis without salary. The Presidential appointee, proposed by Ditter, would devote his full time to the job, would serve as chairman and would be paid $5,000 a year.

The chairman, the bill states, "need not be learned in the law." His appointment, which must be confirmed by the Senate, would be for a four-year term. He could be removed only by the President.

Intended to eliminate some of the secrecy that has characterized proceedings of the present parole board, the measure requires the board to submit certified copies of all petitions for parole to the United States attorney, corporation counsel, the superintendent of police, and to the judge who imposed the sentence under which the prisoner is serving.

The copies must be furnished within five days of receipt of the petition, and no hearing can be held until ten days after the petition is circulated.

Applicants for parole are required under the bill to file petitions with the board, under oath, setting forth the following information:

Name, residence at time of conviction, offense or offenses for which sentence was imposed, the name of the justice or judge who imposed the sentence, the date of such sentence, and grounds on which the applicant seeks parole.

Ditter Explains Aim.

Speaking of the mandatory notice of intention to hold a hearing, Ditter said:

"The procedure which I have outlined in the bill for presentation of petitions and the serving of copies thereof upon the district attorney, corporation counsel, superintendent of police will to my mind overcome the possibility of paroles being granted without complete information which should be pertinent to such applications."

Ditter explained that he was not "reflecting in any way upon the members of the present parole board" but that he is "convinced that the appointment of a chairman and the assignment of judges to constitute the board will improve conditions about which much complaint is heard in the District."

The bill was referred to the House District Committee, which meets today, and it is expected that Chairman Mary T. Norton will refer it to the sub-committee now engaged in a study of crime conditions in Washington.

"Divers changes in the parole board set-up and procedure have been suggested to the District Commissioners, but Ditter's bill is the first to reach Congress.

Roosevelt to Broadcast.

At approximately 11:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, President Roosevelt will broadcast a short birthday message to the Nation.

The Young Democrats of the District gave a special ball of their own in honor of Mr. Roosevelt's birthday at the Mayflower Hotel last night. Today at the Mayflower the Washington Lions Club will honor the Chief Executive with a luncheon meeting. Guests of honor will include former Vice President Charles Curtis and Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York.

Tonight the California State Society will hold a dance at the Raleigh Hotel. A special party will be held in Harding Hall of the Government Printing Office.

In all, 7,500 parties are scheduled in the country. Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, will be the guest of honor at New York's largest ball at the Waldorf-Astoria.

In Boston, the President's younger sons, Franklin and John, are expected to cut slices from a 3,400-pound birthday cake to send to their parents and the President's mother.

Brown Before City Crime Inquiry

ment, which had been watched for as the committee was called to order by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman, failed to materialize. The day before, Representative Schulte had cross-examined Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, asking him if he did not know that a police captain and even an inspector and other police officers fraternized with underworld characters.

Maj. Brown, who followed the lead of the Commissioner and did not ask for names on the opening day, subsequently announced he would ask Representative Schulte to name names at the hearing yesterday.

Reporters Are Assailed.

Newspaper reporters participated in the warm discussion precipitated by the attack on them by Representative Schulte and Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), also of Indiana. It was agreed these remarks should not be made public.

A reverberation of the statement of Mr. Schulte came later in the "on the record" part of the hearings, however, when Maj. Brown, who was testifying, turned and, looking directly at Representative Schulte, said:

"I want to say as a matter of record that if any evidence is developed here I would appreciate it if I might have first chance at it, for this in a measure is my job."

Maj. Brown added that he would like to be present when derogatory testimony is given so he could get it first hand and proceed against policemen at once. Representative Schulte objected. He did not want any witness to be intimidated by the presence of the police chief, he said.

Schulte's Reply Quoted.

His immediate reply to the quoted statement of Maj. Brown was:

"Maj. Brown, I am mighty happy to hear you make that statement for this reason: That there is no question in my mind but what something will be developed—we are developing something out of this investigation. Personally, I feel we will go places and get evidence and we want you to cooperate and help us to bring in the individuals so that we may ask certain questions, and I do not think there is any question that there will be a great deal of light thrown on the gambling situation in the City of Washington."

"That," Maj. Brown said, "is just why I asked if I may sit in when certain witnesses are called, so that I can get first-hand information."

Other Facts Brought Out.

Testimony developed from questioning of Maj. Brown by other committee members was that Washington is not particularly troubled with the "dope" traffic; many former bootleggers have gone into the gambling racket; there is no division of the city among entrenched gangs or crime groups; gambling is controlled by two or three local persons known to the police, with a few small timers trying to "chisel in;" reports that notorious racketeers have moved into Washington and taken over control of Jimmie's place, among others, are not true; although there has been an increase in the District murder rate there has been a decrease over a three-year period in the number of other felonies; there is a desperate need for more uniformed patrolmen.

The executive hearings, from which the public is excluded, are to be resumed at 10:30 a. m. Friday. Today the full District Committee is to meet.

Shepard's Wife Died of Poison, Doctor Swears

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 29 (AP).—Actions of Maj. Charles A. Shepard concerning the poison death of his second wife were described as "peculiar" by an Army associate of the 43-year-old tuberculosis specialist at his second murder trial today.

Maj. Paul R. Hawley, former chief of the medical service at Fort Riley, Kans., and Maj. M. F. Du Frenne, of the Army medical service at Washington, took the stand as prosecution witnesses to tell of Zenana Shepard's baffling last illness.

"Mrs. Shepard died of mercurial poisoning," said Maj. Hawley, explaining that professional uncertainty was cleared up by a post-mortem examination.

"Acted Peculiarly."

"Did you," asked Defense Attorney Hal Harlan, "tell Surgeon General Ireland that Shepard had acted peculiarly about the affair?"

"I did," Hawley said. "I thought so then and I said so."

Hawley said that a few days before the death of Mrs. Shepard at Fort Riley, June 15, 1929, he told Shepard that the case had baffled him and he believed she would die.

"'There must not be any autopsy,' Shepard said to me."

"'Mrs. Shepard isn't dead yet,' I told him, 'but since you brought it up I'll tell you right now I won't sign a death certificate until I know more about this case than I do now.'"

An autopsy was performed after Mrs. Shepard's death and the finding led to the arrest of Shepard nine months later.

"A Great Light Dawned."

Three days before Mrs. Shepard died, Hawley said, "I got together all my information on the case and sat down to work it out.

"Suddenly a great light dawned on me. It was clear that Mrs. Shepard had a metallic poisoning. I though of lead, mercury, bismuth or arsenic."

Shepard, convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment at his first trial four years ago, listened closely to the testimony, but seldom consulted his attorneys.

The third Mrs. Shepard, the former Alice J. Watt, of Denver, sat inside the spectators' railing.

Misunas Returned to District

Arthur (Big Dutch) Misunas, Tri-State gangster (right), is taken from the Richmond train to District Court, handcuffed to a Richmond detective. He was sentenced to 3 to 15 years for highway robbery here, the sentence to run concurrently with his Virginia term of 35 years.

Misunas Draws 3-15-Year Term For D.C. Holdup

Sentence for Union Station Crime Concurrent With Virginia Penalty.

Pleading guilty to a charge of robbing the United States mails, Arthur (Big Dutch) Misunas, erstwhile "brains" of the notorious tri-State gang, yesterday wiped out the last criminal charge pending against him in the District Supreme Court.

Already under a 35-year sentence in Richmond, where he was given a "break" because he testified against two erstwhile members of the gang and sent them to a death sentence, Misunas was hurried to Washington late yesterday to clear up the records of the Union Station "job," in which a mail truck driver was shot down.

He already had pleaded guilty, while two others, indicted with him, denied their guilt. They are John (Slim) Dunn and Sam Berlin, who recently were convicted here of the robbery of the Heurich Brewery.

Dunn and Berlin were sentenced to terms of from 3 to 15 years—and the identical term was given Misunas yesterday. Misunas, therefore, will have only 35 years to serve, because the sentence here was allowed to run concurrently with his Virginia sentence.

In the latter case Misunas, Robert Mais and Walter Legenza were indicted for the murder of a Federal Reserve mail truck driver. Both Mais and Legenza are now awaiting electrocution early next month.

Nice Presses State Probe In Assembly

Bill Providing Inquiry in All Offices to Be Introduced.

New Governor States Public Aroused Over Banking.

(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29.—The administration bill, proposing the appointment of a "State investigating commission" to investigate all administrative departments and offices of the State government, along with a number of other measures, will be presented to the General Assembly in the near future, it was indicated here today.

"The bill virtually sets up a superior court," Gov. Nice said in a statement, "as the investigating commission will be vested with the broad powers of such a tribunal."

The bill will be offered in the Senate by Senator J. David Baile, Republican, Carroll County, minority floor leader. Its provisions empower the Governor to appoint a commission of three, the investigations would extend over a two-year period, and the commission would make its report to the Governor, who in turn would transmit it, along with any additional recommendations, to the General Assembly of 1937.

Cost May Exceed $100,000.

Gov. Nice said he has made provision for the cost of the inquiry in his budget, soon to be submitted. The amount of appropriation asked has not been revealed, but the Governor intimated it will be over $100,000.

Declaring that the investigation is "not a partisan, political or personal one, but its single purpose is the great goal of the public good—the comprehensive service of the people by protecting their interests and promoting their general welfare," Gov. Nice transmitted to the Senate a formal statement touching upon its general purposes.

The statement was addressed to Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), Prince Georges County, president of the Senate, and read before the body. At the outset, the Governor said, the proposed investigation is in fulfillment of a pledge to the people prior to the State election last November.

Would Probe Banks.

The Governor's statement, in part, follows:

"I have asked to be introduced a measure providing for a State investigating commission to investigate thoroughly the administrative departments and offices of the State government, and also, in connection with the office of the bank commissioner, to investigate the management and affairs of all banks and trust companies which were closed by the bank commissioner, or which have not repaid to their depositors, or to the State, the moneys deposited by them therein, or whose failure caused loss and distress to considerable numbers of the people of Maryland, besides loss of State funds.

"During my campaign for the Governorship, I conversed with thousands of the citizens of Maryland. I addressed large public gatherings of the people in almost every section of Baltimore City and in every county of the State. These widespread contacts and experiences with the great masses of our people gave me an intimate knowledge of their sentiments and feelings about conditions in the State, and of their wishes and expectations, if I should be elected Governor.

"The desire and demand, which, from their well-nigh universal expressions, I found not only uppermost in their minds, but most serious and urgent, were for a thorough investigation of the bank, roads, motor vehicles, insurance and other important departments of the State Government, and, above all, the management and condition of the banks and trust companies, which the bank commissioner had to close and take possession of, or which failed to repay to the people the deposits of money, in most cases the earnings and savings of families, which these failing banks and trust companies had not only received and accepted from the people but had solicited or induced the people to make.

Oystermen and Boats Ice-Bound in Annapolis Harbor

Goodwin, Post Staff.

Scores of oyster boats with their crews operating in the Chesapeake Bay have been tied up for more than a week at Annapolis. The boats came into port after their dredging operations had been halted due to the number of undersized oysters exceeding the Maryland limitation. While in port, subzero weather froze them in. Above photo shows some of the oystermen attempting to break ice around their boat, preparatory to "churning" the craft to determine if it is still in sea-going condition.

Father of Hero in Auto's Dive Dies When Told of Accident

Salisbury, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—While Salisburians were starting a movement to honor Carl Thornburg, 23, for his heroic rescue of his companion who had been trapped in a submerged truck cab in the ice-choked river, here, hundreds of miles distant, in Cherryville, N. C., Thornburg's father died of shock when informed of the accident.

Thornburg and Lewis Snead, lifelong friends, were in the truck when it skidded on an ice-coated street before daylight yesterday and nosedived into the harbor. After breaking his way out of the water-engulfed cab, Thornburg broke open a door and pulled the injured Snead through the icy water to safety. An X-ray showed Snead had suffered fractures of three ribs, collar bone and a bruised lung. He was resuscitated after being dragged to the dock by Thornburg.

Risks Life Trying to Save Dog.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Windsor Palmer, 22, of Palmers, had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon when he attempted to rescue his dog, after it had broken through the ice on the Potomac River, near his home.

Seeing the dog break through the thin ice as it rushed playfully out from the frozen shore, Palmer went after the animal in a boat, accompanied by his cousin, Biscoe Knott, 17.

Leaning over the side Palmer reached for the dog and fell in the icy water. By heroic efforts his cousin pulled him in. The dog, a valuable setter, struggled a while and then went down.

Three Sleigh Riders Hurt.

Waynesboro, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Three youths were taken to the Weems-Watkins hospital here as the result of coasting accidents on the police supervised slide which extends five blocks.

These were Robert Courtney and Roger Pleasants, whose sled crashed into an automobile, and Carl Myers, who was thrown against a pole when his sled overturned. The injuries consisted of lacerations and bruises.

Driver Cleared in Fatality.

Waynesboro, Pa., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—A coroner's jury yesterday afternoon termed the accident in which Albert James Largent, jr., 8, was fatally injured last Thursday night as "unavoidable" and exonerated the driver, John Barnes, Glen Furney, Pa.

Inquest witnesses, which included Barnes, said the child started carrying his sled across the street and then slammed it directly in the path of the automobile. Barnes said he had no chance to stop. His car was stopped immediately after striking the boy.

Child Injured on Sled.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Catherine Kohler, 9, suffered a broken femur when her sled collided with the truck of Harry S. Myers last night. She was taken to the Washington County Hospital.

It was the fourth serious sledding accident in Washington County in three days, one sledder having been killed. Two others are in the Washington County Hospital in a serious condition.

Four Injured in Sleigh.

Chambersburg, Pa., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Four persons were injured and 15 others shaken up when an automobile driven by G. Ralph Baker, of Waynesboro, rammed into the rear of a two-horse bobsled carrying a party of local residents. The accident occurred near Chambersburg.

Richard Bacik, 12, received treatment at the local hospital for a double fracture to his right leg; Mrs. Kathryn Miller suffered fractured ribs, and Mrs. C. M. Small and Ralph Brown, jr., lacerations and severe bruises.

Baker told the local State highway patrol that he was traveling 35 miles an hour and failed to see the sleigh until it was too late to avoid a collision. A charge of reckless driving was preferred against him by the highway patrol.

Overcome by Tractor Fumes.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Two Anne Arundel County road employes today were recovering from an unusual accident which occurred last night while they were cleaning snow from the Taylorsville road.

Herbert Tucker, 23, and Eugene Aisquith, 28, of Annapolis, were working in the rear of a tractor when they were overcome by fumes from the exhaust of the machine.

Cold Halts Construction.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Because of the sub-zero weather of the past week, the J. Henry Miller Co., which has the contract for the new Washington County Hospital building, has been forced to suspend operations.

Hospital Seeks Increase in Aid

$7,500 Instead of $1,000 Asked by Hagerstown.

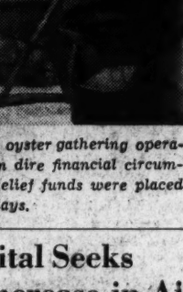

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Because most of the free patients at the Washington County Hospital are residents of this city, the mayor and city council last night voted to seek legislative action increasing the city's annual appropriation from $1,000 to $7,500 following a conference with the board of trustees of the hospital.

A similar increase from the county will be sought by the board from the board of county commissioners, which appropriates $2,000 annually.

The mayor and council was informed that not only had free patients taken all the interest received on several large legacies, but it had been forced to use some of the principal. The hospital has been operating at a loss for some years.

Sham Battle May Be Seen By Roosevelt

Cadets and Marines Plan to Reconstruct Chancellorsville.

Military Display Near Fredericksburg Is Due May 2.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—President Roosevelt will be invited to attend a gigantic military display on the famous Civil War battlefield at Chancellorsville, 12 miles west of this city, on May 2, when cadets of the Virginia Military Institute reproduce the famous march of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson in the Battle of Chancellorsville in 1863 and later reenact the battle with United States Marines from the Quantico post.

Maj. Gen. John A. LeJeune superintendent of V. M. I., has consented to send the 600 members of the cadet corps here to reproduce the historic march.

Gen. Harry Lee, commandant of the Quantico post, is awaiting further instructions before saying definitely whether the Marine Corps will be present.

To Open Jackson Trail.

An invitation to President Roosevelt to attend the celebration and to deliver an address is to be presented at the White House shortly.

The exercises will formally open the "Jackson Trail," which is now being traced by workers of the Citizens Conservation Corps under guidance of the National Park Service.

The "Jackson Trail" is the route over which Gen. Jackson marched his army in the battle of Chancellorsville, May, 1863, executing one of the most spectacular and brilliant military movements in history to attack the rear of Hooker's army and with other Confederate forces drive the Union Army back across the Rapidan and Rappahannock Rivers.

It was in this battle that Jackson, who before the war had been an instructor at V. M. I., suffered wounds which caused his death a few days later.

Driveway Planned.

In the sham battle now planned between the two military forces the V. M. I. Cadets will play the part of the Southern forces while the Marines will be seen as the wearers of the Federal Blue.

The National Park Service has been engaged for some months in acquiring property and rights of way to restore the route of Jackson's march and will make it into a driveway which will be one of the most interesting sections of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park.

Jobs Service Pares Budget

11 Offices Closed, 28 Cut From Pay Roll in Old Dominion.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Closing of eleven suboffices of the national reemployment service in Virginia and the dropping off of 28 persons from the pay roll, effective January 23, was announced today by Frank A. Cavedo, State director of the N. R. S.

This action was taken on orders from Washington to reduce the monthly budget of the Virginia service from $10,500 to a little over $7,000, Mr. Cavedo said.

The sub-offices closed are Culpeper, Courtland, Front Royal, Covington, Farmville, Martinsville, Salem, Tazewell, Keller, Suffolk and Pearisburg.

This reduction leaves only twenty-three NRS offices throughout the State. When the service was first organized shortly after the CWA began, there were 110 offices. Two subsequent reductions in offices and personnel have been made.

Proud Grandfather

COL. ROOSEVELT, son of the former President, who showed elation over the birth of a grandson at Baltimore yesterday.

Baltimore, Jan. 29 (AP).—Col. Theodore Roosevelt, son of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, became a grandfather today, and it was hard to tell who was the more excited and happy—he or the proud father.

A bouncing 7-pound 1¾-ounce boy was born to Grace Roosevelt McMillan, the colonel's daughter, and Mr. McMillan, who were married last March. An hour and a half later Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt had arrived by airplane.

"It's a perfectly splendid boy," Col. Roosevelt said a little later in a burst of enthusiasm. "Both the mother and boy are doing fine. And we think the father will pull through all right, too."

"But yourself, Col. Roosevelt—how are you getting along?" he was asked.

"Oh, yes," was the reply, "I am doing fine now, thank you."

Col. Roosevelt's good humor cropped up the first thing upon his arrival from his home at Oyster Bay.

"We are not going to plow him under," he said with a laugh, evidently referring to the Government's recent production control movements. "No, sir, I refuse to be plowed under." The grandchild is Col. and Mrs. Roosevelt's first.

House Kills Road Board Restoration

Delegates Reject 3-Man System, Utilities Equalization.

West Virginia's Senate Declines to Indorse Roosevelt Aims.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—The House of Delegates today killed bills proposing restoration of the three-man road commission system and equalization of utility valuations for rate-making and taxation purposes. The Senate voted down a resolution to indorse the program of President Roosevelt in its entirety. The measure previously had been passed by the House and was identical with a resolution on which the Senate refused to act immediately a week ago.

The name of U. S. Senator-elect Rush D. Holt figured prominently in debate on the bill to direct that the board of public works fix valuations of utilities at not less than rate-making valuations determined by the public service commission.

"Won on Holt."

"We went into this election and won on the popularity of Rush Holt," shouted Delegate Adams (Democrat), Ohio, "and it was the fight he made on utilities that put Rush Holt where he is today."

The House adopted, 52 to 37, a recommendation by the finance committee that the measure be killed. Chairman Thomas (Democrat), Kanawha, replying t Adams' assertion that the bill was a part of the Holt program at the last session, declared:

"He says this bill would not accomplish the purposes its sponsors say it would."

"Didn't he favor it in 1933?" asked Adams.

"He did, and so did I, but we did not have the information that we have now," replied Thomas.

The finance committee chairman asserted information received from the public service commission showed that it would cost $2,500,000 to place into effect the bill offered by Delegate Shahan (Democrat), Randolph.

"David Copperfield" Wins Approval of Women's Clubs and Teachers' Council

Famous Classic On Screen Wins Unique Acclaim

Reprinted From Yesterdays Last Edition.
By Nelson B. Bell.

Because there may linger in the public mind some of the skepticism of Dickens' transferability to the screen occasioned by the unexpected failure of "Great Expectations" to ring the bell of mass approval, it is interesting to note with what acclaim "David Copperfield" has been greeted by the feminine leaders of thought and civic enterprise in America.

Following a private screening of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production during their annual convention here recently, the national board of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, made public its unanimous indorsement of this film.

Mrs. Grace Poole, national president, had this to say: "I consider 'David Copperfield' one of the finest pictures I have ever seen. Little David, the beloved Micawber and the humble Uriah Heep come right out of the pages of the book unto realistic life on the screen."

Appraisals in like tenor were voiced by Mrs. Robert C. Lawson, first vice president; Dr. Josephine Pierce, second vice president; Judge Fanniebelle Sutherland, director of the Kentucky branch; Mrs. John Kanuf, president of the North Dakota federation; Mrs. Thomas J. Walker, head of the Massachusetts club organizations and numerous others.

Guide for Teachers.

In addition to this important opinion of a cross-section of American womanhood, there is an impressive brochure dealing with the same topic which is published and distributed by the National Council of Teachers of English.

This is a teacher's manual, setting forth methods whereby a critical appreciation of the photoplay version of Charles Dickens' novel, "David Copperfield," may best be inspired in the child and adolescent mind.

Sixteen pages are devoted to a study-guide for the classroom. It is an enlightening pamphlet to intelligences of any age or degree of development.

All this, then, would seem to be a direct refutation of the frequent charge that the motion picture industry is not making definite strides in the production, distribution and systematic publicizing of works of enduring literary and dramatic worth.

The cast of "David Copperfield," to be seen in Washington at Loew's Palace Theater, is such as to hold forth promise of a complete realization of all the commendatory things that have been written and said of "David Copperfield," released for national exhibition on the eighteenth of the present month.

"Springtime for Henry," Benn W. Levy's farce that pleased Broadway for several months two seasons ago, will have its first local stage presentation in Washington on February 22 and 23, when the Montgomery Players will stage it in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School Auditorium. Margaret Buckley, Martha Roberts, George N. Mathews and Stanley True, comprising the cast of four necessary to make this engaging comedy click, have been in rehearsal three weeks, under the direction of Dick Westwood. Ralph S. Fowler is designing the set.

Phil's Phriendly Philippic.

It was amateur night at the Bowdoin Square Theater, Boston. The youngster named Phil, who went on with a cheap accordion strapped to his shoulders, was being ravenously gnawed by the pangs of hunger. In fact, he had not surrounded what is technically known as a "square" for three days.

He played and sang that vaguely remembered chanty dedicated to the occasions "When Mariuch Dances the Hutcha-ma-Kutcha" and they liked the lad. The manager rewarded him handsomely with half a dollar, four bits in any man's money, and next day sent him to Fall River, Mass., where he was rewarded with the amazing sum of $1 for his efforts. Still hungry, he spent 90 cents of it for food and 10 cents for a night's sleep in a cheap "flop house."

The next morning, being, of course, broke, he appealed to the cop on the beat and got a fine assignment to the town woodyard, where derelicts were permitted to split wood to the sum of a ticket back home. Phil was glad he lived in New York and Not San Francisco. However, when the authorities saw the blistered hands, some days short of full fare, they took compassion on the kid and sent him on his way via the Fall River Line.

Dot-Dashed Lowdown.

This, as you no doubt have guessed, would be Phil Baker, headlining the current stage bill at Loew's Fox . . . Born in Philadelphia 37 years ago and since childhood a victim of the wanderlust . . . Nothing at all for him to wander away for days, 50, 100, 200 miles from home . . . Doing odd jobs for his keep, if any . . . This system is not conducive to systematic study, with the consequence that he has no formal schooling whatsoever . . . But plenty of natural sagacity . . . Spent all his money for cheap musical instruments, thus leading to his Massachusetts experiences, after which he teamed with Ed Janis (no relation to Elsie) and did a small-time vaudeville act . . . Coffee and cake money! . . . Had lived on Seventy-second street in New York near Ben Bernie and had always wanted to team with ye old maestro . . . Finally got audition, walking three miles to the Bernie home, lugging the shabby accordion case on his tired back . . . Found Bernie still in the hay, so played while Bernie slept . . . "Not enough experience, kid, come back next year" . . . Then the war and enlistment in the Navy . . . After that the breaks . . . Vaudeville single, revues, musical comedies, Ziegfeld productions, Century Roof, swanky night clubs, "Greenwich Village Follies," etc., etc. . . . And now look at him! . . . Is married and has two children . . . Boy and a girl . . . Has never had a lesson on the portable piano in his life . . . So he clowns a lot!

If the eminent Ray C. B. Brown will pardon the intrusion, I am informed on reliable box-office authority that Max Rabinoff's production of Verdi's "La Traviata" in Constitution Hall tonight, with Edis de Philippe singing the role of Violetta, gives every indication of being a complete sell-out. Not only will the audience be one testing the capacity of the spacious auditorium, but it will be one of Washington's typically distinguished official, social and musical gatherings. Think what would happen if the National Capital had a real opera house!

Echoes of the Past.

Several weeks ago we had the novel experience of interviewing Irene Dunne, engaged in filming "Roberta" in the West Coast studios of RKO-Radio, by long-distance phone. The results were printed in this space next morning and mailed to Miss Dunne in Los Angeles, lest she think the whole thing a fake and the call coming from no farther away than Beverly Hills.

So the postman only had to ring once yesterday to deliver this one:

My Dear Mr. Bell: Received copy of interview, which was delightful and splendidly written (sic). For me it was an interesting experience and difficult to believe we were 3,000 miles apart.

Have just completed "Roberta." It will be released in about three weeks and should be shown in Washington some time in April. Hope you see and enjoy it.

When you come to California be sure to look me up. I shall be glad to meet you personally.

Thanking you and with kindest regards,

(Signed) IRENE DUNNE.

A postscript was to the effect that Miss Dunne broadcast selections from "Roberta" on the "Hollywood Hotel" program, Friday night at 6:30 Pacific standard time. But, alas, "the pardon came too late." The broadcast arrived before the word of it and we didn't know, not keeping up on such things as well as we should.

Private previews are going on apace. Sunday midnight the drama desks were hailed to a screening of Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily," at Loew's Fox, and this afternoon at 2, the Warners are vouchsafing the same group a peek at "The Right to Live, the new Warner Brothers production costarring George Brent and Josephine Hutchinson, who made a favorable, but unique, impression in her first assignment opposite Dick Powell in "Happiness Ahead," a whimsy of the window-washers. More of these later.

Safety First Note.

The taxicabs are skidding much better this morning—or had you already noticed?

"Dizzy" Becomes the "Iron Duke"

Always the master—of men, of women! In the Gaumont-British picture, "The Iron Duke," now playing the Radio City Music Hall in New York and eventually to be shown in Washington, George Arliss is said to surpass his every previous screen portrayal as the Duke of Wellington. It is, perhaps, a bit of a strain on the imagination to visualize Arliss doing the part that was played by C. Aubrey Smith in "The House of Rothschild," but the Arliss artistry is capable of histrionic miracles of this sort.

Bounty Back

Loudoun County Restores 50-Cent Hawk Reward.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Following an appeal made by farmers and sportsmen of Loudoun County in which they stated that hawks are increasing in the county and making great depredations upon the birds, the board of supervisors meeting here this morning restored a bounty of 50 cents on each hawk killed over six months.

This money will come out of the dog fund and not the general county fund.

A bounty, formerly given by the State, was removed 10 years ago, and since that time hawks have increased. Sportsmen declared that more are to be seen now than any time in memory.

Health Director's Ouster Demanded

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—An effort to remove Dr. Claude A. Thomas from the office of director of the Berkeley County health unit here was officially and openly recorded in a resolution by Berkeley County court yesterday, with President Amos Dunham and Commissioner Phillip Strine, both Republicans, supporting, and Commissioner J. C. Ellis, Democrat, the third member, not voting.

The health unit has been a matter of dispute here for some months. Dr. Edward Cameron, who had headed the unit for five years, was held ineligible last spring on the ground that he had not completed his naturalization papers as required by the State. The unit was without a head for some weeks until Dr. Thomas, former chairman of the city Democratic committee, was named while the court was politically Democratic.

The Rockefeller contribution to the unit has been discontinued. Those in touch with the situation said the foundation would not contribute to a unit where the head had not been able to meet the foundation technical requirements, which Dr. Thomas has not been able to do, not having had special training in the work. The contribution of the city toward the unit has also been withdrawn, it was stated in exchanges between the city and county authorities, until a director qualified on the Rockefeller basis was named.

Illness Holds Up $17,000 Car Suits

Several of Those Involved Ill in Maryland.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Four suits for damages, aggregating claims of $17,000, the result of an automobile accident on the Frederick road, August 16, scheduled for trial in the circuit court yesterday were carried over until next month owing to illness of several persons involved and several witnesses.

All the suits are against the same defendant, Stanley Graham. The plaintiffs are Alfred Zekiel, who seeks $5,000 damages; Mrs. Matilda Zekiel, his wife, $10,000; Edward Hall, $1,000 and Grace Hall, $1,000. The plaintiffs allege that while driving along the road the defendant traveling in an automobile ran into the rear of their car injuring all the plaintiffs.

A suit brought by Peter H. Raun against Edwin Lundgrin, for $2,500 for alleged breach of working contract, scheduled for yesterday, was also carried over until next month. The plaintiff alleges that he entered a contract with the defendant at a salary of $300 per month and expenses in July, 1929, and that about May 14, 1931, the defendant discontinued his services while indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of $1,240 and $905.69 expenses. The defendant alleges that a copartnership existed between the parties and no action can be taken in law.

Reprinted from yesterday's Last Edition.

Part II.

"MANSION ON THE HUDSON."
Scene 2. June, 1898. Sally. Mrs. Stanley Howland, Jr.
Scene 3. Winter, 1920. Carrie Howland.
Scene 4. Spring, 1927. Mrs. Joseph Kelley.
Scene 5. Summer, 1934. Tony's wife.
The scene is laid at "Tall Trees," a large estate on the Hudson.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Here is by far the most distinguished, most diversified and most significant demonstration of the dramatic potentialities of the unique form of one-person play evolved by Cornelia Otis Skinner that ever has been revealed to the public.

Beyond any of the other multiple-scene character sketches in which Miss Skinner has been seen, "Mansion on the Hudson," through the instrumentality of one player, constructs the skeleton of a complete and moving drama, coherent in premise, development and climax and makes real and expressive sharply contrasted characters that are never ever seen or heard.

This is an achievement that Miss Skinner has not heretofore encompassed in her interesting, but not primarily dramatic, studies of noted persons based wholly on the revelations of historical research.

"Mansion on the Hudson" is an admirable creative effort—original, native, as complex as any formal drama and expository of a remarkable gift of imaginative vision on the part of its author-star.

Spans Half a Century.

It takes up the history of the "mansion on the Hudson," known as "Tall Trees," ancestral home of the Howlands, back in 1880, when the magnificent, sprawling estate already had behind it the traditions of half a century of family living. Mrs. Stanley Howland, chatelaine of the mansion, refuses to melt to the warmth of old embers fanned into flame and remains stanch to her home, her profligate husband and her three small children. Here are planted the elements of enduring romance that trace their way through all the remaining sequences of a consistent and intensely interesting dramatic narrative.

The action comes down the years from 1880 to 1898. The son, Stanley Howland, is in the U. S Army bound for Cuba, leaving his Southern bride as ostensible matron of "Tall Trees," scorned and humiliated by her sister and brother-in-law, Carrie and DeWitt Howland. Stanley dies of typhoid before leaving Tampa, Fla., and the concerns of the play are next taken up in 1920.

Carrie Howland, having refused to marry "beneath the family name" by accepting Joseph Kelley, the "shanty" Irishman who lives next door and throws rocks at the Howland kids, is a middle-aged spinster, confronted with the need of selling the estate to survive; DeWitt, a young drunkard pretending to be an artist.

Thence in quick succession through the occupancy of "Tall Trees" by Joseph Kelley and his chewing-gum heiress wife; the acquisition of the property by the rich speakeasy proprietor, Tony, its former gardener, for a swanky roadhouse, and the final episode of the society girl's patching together the tag ends of a tragedy of degeneration and despair.

Plays Wide Range.

The characters assumed by Miss Skinner in each of these fascinating episodes are recited in the small-type paragraphs preceding these hurried midnight enthusiasms over an astonishingly complete and thrilling evening in the theater.

The best, by far, in this fallible estimation, is the 1920 incident, in which Miss Skinner limns an unforgettably poignant portrait of a baffled, disappointed and heart-broken woman, who has sacrificed her life for others and a family legend and finds that it has availed nothing. This is one of Miss Skinner's unassailable masterpieces in basic outline and flawless execution. Almost paired with it in excellence is the flashy Mrs. Joseph Kelley of the 1927 period. These characters are poles apart and eloquent testimony to the remarkable interpretative talents of their creator.

Not only in writing an original, native drama for her solo execution has Miss Skinner departed somewhat from precedent. Slightly greater use than usual is made of appropriately suggestive stage settings and "properties." The costuming, as is always true of Miss Skinner's offerings, is impeccable, the timing perfect and the utilization of period furniture and music helpful to the atmospheric fidelity to time and place of a drama as actual as if all of the people its star addresses were present in the flesh.

Clever Short Sketches.

"Mansion on the Hudson" was preceded by three of the short character sketches upon which the fame of their author originally rested.

"Nurse's Day Out" and "Being Presented" were the most heartily received last night. "On the Beach at Barbados," a sketch of the blasting consequences of miscegenation, perhaps, was just a shade too morbid, although beautifully written and done.

This bill will be repeated tonight and again on Friday and Saturday nights; Wednesday matinee, "The Wives of Henry VIII;" Wednesday night, "The Empress Eugenie."

Last night's audience, which included among others of distinction Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, was overwhelming in its tribute to Miss Skinner at the fall of the final curtain.

Relief Unit Named In West Virginia

Committee to Take Over Work in County.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—A new independent committee to "take over and administer" the State relief program in Berkeley County, particularly the "social security program such as old-age and widows' pensions," has been named by William N. Beehler, State administrator, it was disclosed in a letter today to members of the present Berkeley County Welfare Board.

The new board will be composed of Charles G. Smith, banker; Trammell Hollis, automobile dealer; Cleveland M. Selbert, attorney and former Mayor of Martinsburg; the Rev. Dr. S. R. Diehl, Presbyterian pastor; Robert G. Coffman, funeral director, and Hillen Powell, labor representative. Hollis and Coffman are also members of the county welfare board. Three of the six are Republicans and three Democrats.

The State administrator, in his letter, explaining creation of the new board says: "It is our feeling that when these social security plans materialize, these responsibilities together with the duties imposed on county welfare boards by statute, will give these boards heavy responsibilities and duties. For these reasons, together with the feeling that an independent committee of local citizens will be the most efficient method of carrying on our program" the new board is named. He specifies that the county welfare board will continue in existence, carrying on the duties required by statute.

85 New Mattresses Distributed to Poor

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—The distribution of 85 new mattresses in Fauquier County, through FERA office, Warrenton, Mrs. Ruth W. Thompson, relief director, brought relief and comfort to as many families.

The mattresses were made by relief workers in Harrisonburg and distributed from the Richmond office to relief clients.

Staples Will Attend Parley on Liquor Tax

Richmond, Jan. 29 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Stables tomorrow will join a conference in Washington to be held in the interest of States desiring legislation to prevent Federal taxation of State liquor monopoly profits.

While in Washington he also expects to discuss with Senator Byrd and Representative Bland a joint resolution to give Virginia civil jurisdiction over the Chamberlin Hotel at Fort Monroe, he said before leaving today.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

The Gossipel Truth

Hollywood, Jan. 28.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN is trying to persuade Walt Disney to make a special silent cartoon with only sound effects, similar to his picture, "The Waif" . . . Chaplin's purpose is to arrange a non-talkie picture program so his flicker will not seem so strange and jar the audience . . . Jack Kirkland, "Tobacco Road" playwright, and Jayne Shadduck will tear up the marriage license.

George Arliss is rehearsing the company of "Richelieu" in a special dressingroom and won't allow anyone in the room . . . including the director of the picture . . . The James Dunn-Patsy-Lee romance isn't . . . They each have new partners. Dunn going places with Lyda Roberti and Patsy going with Dick Stabile of Ben Bernie's band . . . In Los Angeles, they flaunt "Welcome" banners on the slightest provocation . . . Douglas Churchill noticed this welcome banner waving:

"Welcome—last day of Garbo in 'The Painted Veil.'"

There is no accounting for what Hollywood will do.

The picture industry donated and was forced to give thousands of dollars to the political campaign to defeat Upton Sinclair . . . and now the picture business is paying Upton Sinclair a nice weekly salary to play the Pantages Theater and make speeches . . . One of the original ideas Groucho, Chico and Harpo Marx had for the finish of their new flicker was that, with the final fadeout and the picture over, there is a sudden flash and a big closeup of Zeppo appears on the screen. Zeppo says . . . "Well, folks, did you miss me?"

• • • •

LYLE TALBOT and Peggy Waters have quarreled and now everything is off . . . Fred Stone posed for a publicity picture with Mae West, and all that day the veteran trooper walked about the Paramount studio telling his friends, "I met Mae West—in person" . . . The Fox confidential phone directory, which lists the private phone numbers of the studio stars and executives, also has this notation, L. Hovelson—"pot washer" . . . Dick Powell and Ted Fio Rita are battling . . . Powell won't permit Fio Rita to lead the orchestra for his songs on that soup program. Powell has his own conductor . . . Allan Jones and Betty Furness are "Love in Bloom" . . . One writer at Paramount turned in a script which had an identical scene, word for word, that was in a scenario which this same writer had recently turned in at Universal . . . When Paramount questioned him about this, the writer answered, "I did it because I thought the scene was so good that they wouldn't use it at Universal."

The songwriters gave a dinner at the Beverly-Wilshire last week to honor a melody-maker they all admire—Jerome Kern . . . There was only one female songwriter among the Tin Pan Alleyites gathered and that was Dorothy Fields . . . Ben Bernie started his remarks by saying: "Lady and Gentlemen" . . . Ben then went on to say that he was there to represent the orchestra leaders of America who can't read music. Bernie concluded his speech in praise of Kern by stating that everyone admired this great songwriter and only recently Jerome Kern had won the Noble Sissle Prize for music.

JOAN MARSH and the Marquis de la Falaise playing bagatelle outside of a cigar store on a Saturday night—which should give you an idea of the wild Hollywood night life . . . Sammy Fain and Irving Kahal, who did the songs for "Sweet Music" and the new Mae West flicker, are no longer a team . . . Josef von Sternberg didn't attend the Ballet Russe of Monte Carlo with Marlene Dietrich, but he did take Dietrich's daughter, Maris Sieber . . . George E. Stone's new girl friend is Mickey McKillop, one of the better Le Roy Prinz's dancers . . . "The Whole Town's Talking" is the best gangster film in years. It's a new slant on the tough guy theme, and will start a new cycle of gangster flickers. In it, Edward G. Robinson gives his best performance since "Little Caesar" . . . The Joseph Santley's—she is Ivy Sawyer—expect a baby . . . At a party, one of the guests admired the Sam Goldwyn house and kept praising it . . . Goldwyn was pleased and said, "This house cost me $240,000." . . . The guest was startled by the amount. "Aren't you counting in the loss on the last Anna Sten picture?" he said.

William Wyler, whose option was not renewed by Universal, will return to that company as a director . . . He is touring Europe with his wife, Margaret Sullavan . . . Universal cabled asking her to return quickly for a new flicker. She cabled back that her husband had nothing to do and she wanted to keep him company . . . Groucho Marx and James K. McGuinness had some differences about a script . . . as the story traveled, it grew until people were saying they hated each other . . . Groucho phoned McGuinness and said: "Jimmy, will you come to the house this Sunday for dinner?" "I'd like to," answered McGuinness, "but I have a previous engagement—which I will make as soon as possible."

E. J. Smith Heads Frederick Bar

M. G. G. Urner, Jr., Elected Vice President.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Edward J. Smith was elected president at the annual meeting of the Bar Association of Frederick County at the courthouse yesterday.

Other officers chosen were, Milton G. G. Urner, jr., vice president; Benjamin B. Rosenstock, secretary; Patrick M. Schnauffer, assistant secretary, and Holden S. Felton, treasurer. A legislative committee comprising former State Senator Jacob Rohrback, Parsons Newman and Edward S. Delaplaine was appointed.

The association voted to hold its annual dinner and a committee composed of Mr. Rohrback, H. Kieffer DeLauter, Leslie N. Coblentz, H. Noel Haller and Alton Y. Bennett was named to plan the event. The proposed date is February 18.

Arundel County Maps PWA List

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—Approximately a dozen public works projects will be suggested to Abel Wolman, State PWA administrator, for Anne Arundel County by John A. Bromley, county engineer.

Bromley said his main recommendation would be for the building of a municipal airport on a site near Eastport. An unsuccessful effort was made to establish the airport last year.

Other projects that are being considered include an underpass under the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric Railway tracks at Cedar Park and the building of a bridge over Spa Creek to join with the Bay Ridge road.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

STEP by step, or rather move by move, the Government is solving its own office housing problem.

The latest move is that of the Federal Housing Administration which is about 90 per cent settled in the rejuvenated old Justice Building at Vermont and K. While that structure has been repaired throughout—air conditioned, newly floored, equipped with high-speed elevators, and painted—it is groaning under greater congestion than ever. Used as Justice headquarters, it was crowded with about 900 employes. Now FHA is jamming 1,100 employes into the same space.

BAKER.

For instance, a unit of 25 of FHA's Procurement Division is packed into the same space that was crowded with 16 Justice employes. FHA's moving from the new Postoffice Building and the old Southern Railway Building will be complete when the Supply Division moves in.

Federal Communications Commission will move into the quarters vacated by FHA at New Postoffice Building.

NRA, scattered in 11 buildings, is expected to become centralized in the old Labor Department Building, 1712 G street northwest, this spring. But, the old labor building must undergo renovation, and before this is done, Secretary Perkins must move. Most of her department already is over in the palatial edifice at Constitution avenue and Fourteenth street. Delay in the shipping of furniture for the Cabinet member is holding up her moving.

The big shipbuilding program of the Navy is causing congestion there and the department is seeking to have the Shipping Board moved out. The latter unit is seeking space in the Commerce Building, and expects to obtain 75,000 square feet to be released by NRA.

Robert H. Alcorn, chairman of the joint conference on retirement, will address the Association of Professional and Technical Employes at 4:45 p. m. Friday in the agricultural auditorium.

ALL Californians in Government service are urged by Walter McIntosh, NRA, to attend the California State Society's ball and entertainment tonight at the Raleigh Hotel. Mr. McIntosh announces he has booked Phil Lampkin and his Loew's Fox Theater Orchestra, which will feature a program dear to the hearts of the Golden State folks.

LAMPKIN.

Installation of new officers will take place at the monthly meeting of the Society of Federal Translators Monday night at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, it is announced by Ignatius Jawney, State, secretary.

FINANCIAL condition of the Department of Commerce Credit Union was reported good with a 6 per cent dividend declared at its January meeting when new officers were elected. Plans for an active year are being mapped by the following:

E. J. Jutz, president; W. P. Wright, vice president; H. E. Keenan, treasurer, and E. E. Schnellbacher (F), clerk.

The new board of directors includes the officers and the following: F. H. Davis, G. W. Lambert, E. F. Blanchard, R. N. E. Saxton, E. F. Klinge and M. L. Whitney. On the credit committee are Wharton Moore, S. D. Grove, William Sanger, Willard Thompson and T. J. Llewellyn. The supervisory committee included H. S. Clem, R. W. Newland and W. S. Pawl.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF (F), (P) or (C) follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Phil Baker and his own Radio Revue and other acts; screen, Ramon Novarro, Charles Butterworth and Una Merkel in "The Night Is Young"); or to Loew's Palace (Gary Cooper, Francot Tone and cast of thousands in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer"); or to Loew's Columbia (Will Rogers in "The County Chairman").

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon up to 2:30 p. m.

Justice Postettes.

Miss Ann Power is absent on sick leave. Miss Regina Coady recently moved to Baltimore and is now commuting. Miss Anna Nathanson has been confined to her home due to illness. Miss Marie McCoy (F) is entertaining guests from West Point, N. Y., this week. A son was born January 20 to Mrs. Elizabeth Neale, formerly of the Identification Unit.

Barrick Slain, Coroner Declares

Winchester, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—That Guy E. Barrick was violently killed January 27, between the hours of 1 a. m. and 10 a. m. by means of a shotgun wound inflicted at close range to the right temple by an unknown person or persons, was the report rendered today by Acting Coroner A. J Tavenner on the basis of testimony he heard in a hearing that ended shortly before midnight Sunday.

Barrick, who operated a used furniture store in this city, was found shot to death in his Greenwood home Sunday morning. His death, several persons testified, followed a party which lasted until early Sunday morning.

Navy to Stage 12 Events Saturday

Basket Ball Against Pitt Features Afternoon's List of Events.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 29 (AP).—The Naval Academy will stage a carnival of winter sports here Saturday with 12 events in seven different sports.

The fencing, swimming and water polo teams will meet their initial opponents, while rifle, wrestling, basket ball and boxing teams also will be in action.

There will be two matches each in wrestling, fencing, water polo, boxing and basket ball, and single meets in rifle and swimming. Both the varsity and plebe teams will participate.

1:00 p. m.—Wrestling, Virginia Military Institute Freshmen vs. Plebes.

Fencing—University of Pennsylvania Freshmen vs. Plebes.

1:30 p. m.—Rifle (small bore), New York University vs. Varsity.

2.00 p. m.—Water polo, Baltimore Y. M. C. A. vs. Plebes.

2:30 p. m.—Boxing, Virginia Military Institute Freshmen vs. Plebes.

Basketball—University of Pittsburgh vs. Varsity.

Fencing—University of Pennsylvania vs. Varsity.

3:30 p. m.—Swimming, University of Virginia vs. Varsity.

Water polo—New York Athletic Club vs. Varsity.

4:00 p. m.—Wrestling, Virginia Military Institute vs. Varsity.

Basketball—Massanutten Academy vs. Plebes.

5:00 p. m.—Boxing, University of Richmond vs. Varsity.

Navy Swimmers Average.

Coach Henry Ortland will have an average team, not particularly well-balanced, to open its season Saturday against Virginia's swimmers.

The team is headed by Capt. Joe Plichta, holder of the national 440-yard intercollegiate title, and holder of the Naval Academy records in the 220 and 440 yard swims. Teamed with him is Jack Stevens, who was the runner-up for the national 440 intercollegiate title, and who placed third in the national 1,500-meter intercollegiate swim.

Hyland Leads 220 Field.

Billy Hyland, a consistent performer, has been competing for three years in the middle distances. H. A. Westin and L. A. Smith, seniors, swim with Hyland in the 220-yard test.

W. R. Smith, W. A. Thomas and J. M. Devane all show promise in the 50-yard sprint. J. L. McEntee and Lou Bauer, seniors, are steady in the diving events.

George Grider, a junior, and C. Goodlow, a sophomore, will represent the Navy in the 200-yard breast stroke. Charles Doos, G. D. Clift, Bob Williams and R. H. Burgess swim the 150-yard back stroke.

Bethesda High Rallies To Take 11th of Season

Holding its opponents to a lone point in the final period after trailing by eight points at the first quarter, Bethesda High rang up its eleventh victory of the season yesterday, defeating St. John's Prep on the Lelanders' court, 31 to 20.

The Johnnies found the hosts decidedly off form at the start and ran up a 10-2 lead. Bethesda cut it to 12-10 at the half, jumped into the lead in a seesaw third quarter and ran up a decisive score in the last quarter with Johnson in a starring role.

Yanks May Transfer Wheeling Franchise

Newark, N. J., Jan. 29 (AP).—George Weiss, general manager of the "farm" teams in the New York Yankee baseball system, said today the transfer of the Wheeling (W. Va.) franchise in the Middle Atlantic League to Akron, Ohio, "was being considered."

Weiss said the plans for the transfer were still "very tentative" and that he was going to Akron tonight to continue negotiations.

Ex-Tunney Promoter Dies Penniless at 57

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—William Jacobs, old-time fight manager, referee and promoter who gave Gene Tunney some of his first matches before the war at the old Sharkey A. C., died penniless last night in Bellevue Hospital of a heart attack. He had been a patient in the city institution for two weeks. Jacobs was 57.

Member of Tank Team.

Miss Katherine Trundle, a Sherwood School graduate of Sandy Spring, who is in her sophomore year at Northwestern University, is a member of the Northwestern varsity girls' swimming team and last month was a close second in the 100-yard free style and third in the 40-yard crawl.

A Champion Up in Arms

Find three world champions in the picture. Or maybe you didn't know that Barney Ross, who is being carried in the arms of World Heavyweight Champion Max Baer, holds both the lightweight and junior welterweight titles. The little scene was enacted before Ross went into the ring at Miami to defend his junior welter title successfully against Frankie Klick.

Coaching 7 Sports Just One Of Rep. Shanley's Former Jobs

By Dillon Graham
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

REPRESENTATIVE JAMES SHANLEY'S seven-sport coaching career ended—temporarily, he hopes—less than a week before he was sworn in last January 3 as a Representative from Connecticut.

Right up until the time he left for the Capital, Shanley continued coaching the Hillhouse High School ice hockey team in New Haven. His squad numbered 94 energetic youngsters.

The curly-haired lawmaker, whose black bushy eyebrows etch a broad hedge line across his slender face, has found time for years to practice law, teach and coach seven sports at Hillhouse—football, basket ball, baseball, track, tennis, swimming and ice hockey.

A few seasons back he had Albie Booth, later to win renown as Yale's "Little Boy Blue," on his prep eleven. Shanley said yesterday he regards Albie as the greatest athlete he ever coached and one of the finest he ever saw.

"I've never seen a player who could relax physically, and yet not mentally, during a game as could Booth," he said.

Shanley was a Hillhouse athlete back in 1915 and played baseball there with "Jumping Joe" Dugan, once famed Yankee third baseman. Football, basket ball and track were his other sports.

"I believe every player on our baseball team in 1915 either went into professional baseball or was captain of a college team," Shanley says.

As an undergraduate at Yale, Shanley was a shortstop on the Eli nine and began his long coaching regime at Hillhouse, largest of the New England prep schools.

"I found I could get my exercise in coaching and at the same time do something for the boys," Shanley said, "that's why I chose coaching over golf and tennis, and devoted several hours a day to athletics."

Shanley, a member of the foreign relations committee, has made a study of sports from the early Greek and Roman days and plans a book on the influence of athletics on history.

Gate at Ross Bout More Than $31,000

Attendance About 10,000, Promoters Pleased.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 29 (AP).—Fight fans paid somewhere between $31,586 and $35,652 to watch Barney Ross, of Chicago, successfully defend his junior welterweight title against Frankie Klick, San Francisco scrapper, in their 10-round battle here last night, promoters announced today.

No one at fight headquarters professed to know exactly how much revenue was taken in on ticket sales, although all connected with the show proclaimed it a "financial success." Promoters, who gave out the two sets of figures, agreed the paid attendance was "about 10,200."

Ross, who also holds the world's lightweight title, was the complete master of the fight with Klick from start to finish.

Just High Victorious In Fair Grounds Race

New Orleans, Jan. 29 (AP).—Just High, a 4-year-old offspring of Justice F., which apparently was in the habit of finishing either second or third, finally carried his speed for 6 furlongs today to capture the top event at the Fair Grounds.

In eight of his ten previous starts he was either runner-up or third while winning one race and finishing sixth in the other. Today, however, he broke as usual, fast, and refused to stop, stepping past the judges with two lengths to spare over Almadel Jr., to pay $9.20 straight. J. J. Coughlin's Very Well, of Chicago, was third.

Rockville Wins, 66-15; Star Shoots 25 Points

Eugene Ochsenreiter, Rockville High School scoring ace and leader in the Montgomery County League, set a new individual scoring record for county courtmen yesterday, when he rang up 25 points to lead his team to a 66-to-15 victory over Damascus at Damascus.

The Rockville star sent 11 field goals and 3 fouls through the hoop in the three quarters of the game in which he played. His brother, Jimmy, was inserted in his place in the last period and scored 10 points.

Eastern Spurt Turns Back Central

Roosevelt's Five Never Threatens, Bows to Tech, 30 to 18.

By John R. Vosburgh.

ANOTHER unlucky interhigh basket ball victim ran afoul of Eastern High's firing squad yesterday and was quickly and coolly dispatched and laid away bearing a label describing it as Central High, corpse No. 5, mowed down, 42 to 27.

The act took the form of Eastern's fifth straight interhigh victory and came as a rather vital stepping-stone in its climb to the championship. Tech, twice-beaten, nevertheless remained mathematically in the running by trouncing Roosevelt, 30 to 18, on the Roosevelt court. The Eastern-Central debacle took place on the Tech floor.

Central put up a valiant fight for existence and at the end of the third quarter was still very much alive, being but 6 points behind, on the short end of a 30-to-24 score. But the Eastern guns began barking a steady staccato of baskets in the last period which wiped up the Mount Pleasanters rapidly and impressively and the game ended with the Lincoln Parkers in complete control of everything but the admission booth.

Trails Only 14-12.

Victory would not have meant a great deal to Central's title hopes, already firmly entrenched as it is in fourth place, but for a while it appeared as if the Raymen might jolt Eastern into the ranks of the fallen just out of pure deviltry.

This appeared doubly possible at the end of the first quarter after Central had exchanged swap for swap with the champions and trailed only 14 to 12. The second period found things only a trifle better for the leaders. Billy Vermillion, Central guard, was checking the one and only Lavelle Dean into comparative submission and finding time to snare a few points himself. Bill Thompson, Central center, also was hitting the scoring column and at half time Central, chiefly through the efforts of Chick Hollidge and Gay Edelin, was hard pressed to hold a 22-17 lead.

At one time in the first quarter, Vermillion, almost single-handed, had carried Central to a 12-10 lead, but Dean and Reds Scheible scored a basket apiece to erase the advantage. It was Scheible day yesterday, by the way, for Eastern. The fast-shooting redhead took the scoring honors away from Dean, tallying 14 points to his captain's 13 and becoming the first to lead Dean in the total point column since the series started. Vermillion was about four-fifths of the Central team, scoring 12 points from far and near.

Central Stages Rally.

Central back in the second half and at one time drew up to within three points of the Lincoln Parkers as the result of two baskets by Vermillion and one by Thompson. But the last period found Vermillion turning the Dean-guarding duties over to a team-mate in order to concentrate on point-getting and the result saw Dean tally three

Stanford Trackmen May Forego 2 Events

Stanford University, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—Stanford's track team, holder of the I. C. A. A. A. A. and National Collegiate A. A. championships, may not compete in either classic this spring, it was indicated today, because of the time thus taken from studies.

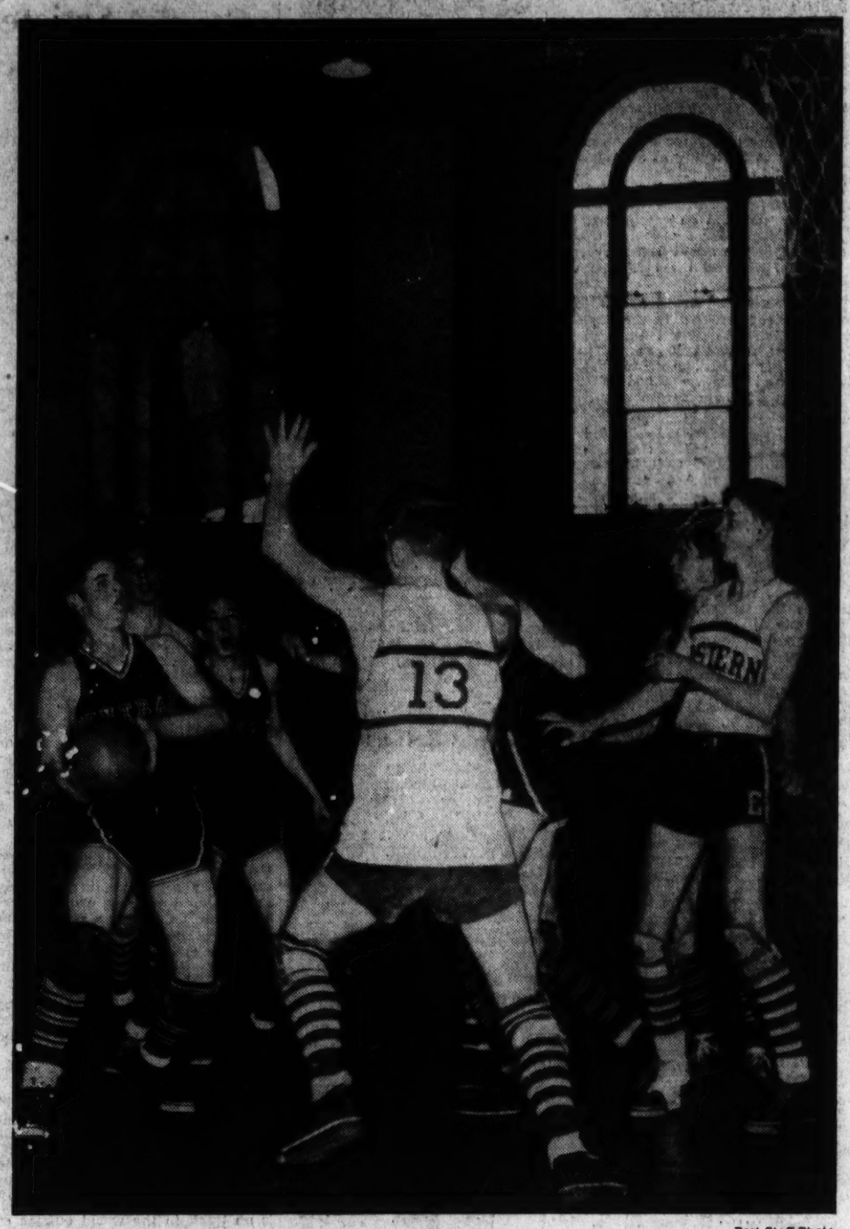

Neither of the major meets was included in the list of the Indians' dates, and Graduate Manager Alfred R. Masters said chances of Stanford entering are small.

Loos Gets Coast Job.

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 29 (AP).—Eddie Loos, one of the leading playing professionals of the country, today was signed by the Lakeside Golf Club as winter professional beginning November 1, of 1935. Most of Hollywood's motion picture celebrities are members of this club.

Through the summer months Loos is professional of the Lake Shore Club, Chicago.

Fuchs Willing To Sell Part In Braves

Meanwhile, Group Seeks $75,000 From Fans for Tickets.

BOSTON, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—President Emil Fuchs today offered to dispose of his holdings in the financially embarrassed Boston Braves to any suitable purchaser, but at the same time a group of friends planned a money raising campaign to save the Braves for Fuchs.

Headed by Gov. James M. Curley—whose election campaign Fuchs helped direct—a group of State and city officials acting as "fans" planned the advance sale of 15,000 books of 5 tickets each. At $5 apiece, the books would provide $75,000 ready cash for the club. A committee of several hundred prominent Bostonians would promote the sale.

Sold Small Blocks.

Meantime Ed Cunningsham, Braves secretary, announced Fuchs was "willing to sacrifice his interest in any equity he has, including his equity in the Braves, if by so doing he would be sure that his friends who purchased stock during the past few years would be repaid or their equity protected." Fuchs has sold small blocks of Braves stock to friends during the past few years, reportedly at $80 a share.

From New York came announcement that the National League had safeguarded the Braves' lease of Braves Field, which was supposed to be "going to the dogs," for the next 11 years. Fuchs, it is understood, is supposed to raise $50,000 by February 5, when the National League holds another meeting on the club's plight.

Art Shires Needs Money; Will Try Comeback in Ring

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Art Shires—the same boisterous "whataman" who fought his way out of the American League and American Association and ended up as a mediocre first baseman for the Fort Worth Texas League club last year—will try a comeback in the boxing ring.

He has been matched to fight 190-pound Sid Hunter, of Comanche, Tex., here Thursday night.

Several years ago while playing with the Chicago White Sox, Art went on a fistic rampage to the extent that during the off-season he was signed for several heavyweight fights. He didn't go far in the ring, however.

Now Shires, 27, needs money and a new athletic reputation.

"I figure I'm the Texas heavyweight champ now, but I guess I will have to go through the formality of winning it," Shires said.

Chisox Contract For Glenn Wright

Former Star Shortstop Is Signed for 1935.

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP). — Glenn Wright, one of the National League's outstanding shortstops during a career divided between Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, was signed by the Chicago White Sox today.

Wright, who was waived out of the National League at the end of the 1933 season, played with Kansas City of the American Association last year. He had a fair season, batting .281, playing largely at first base. The deal was completed by Harry Grabiner, vice president of the Sox, who is in Los Angeles.

Newport News Beaten By Thomas Jefferson

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Thomas Jefferson High School won its first basket ball victory in the Virginia Athletic and Literary Basket Ball League today by defeating Newport News High, 20 to 19, in the Jeff gym here.

Newport News led during the first quarter, but the Jeffs forged ahead to register a 12-to-10 lead at the half. Capt. Bobby Spangler and Joe Dodd starred for the visitors while Capt. Wright carried the weight for Jefferson.

Perry Wins Net Title; Shares in Two Others

Wellington, New Zealand, Jan. 29 (U.P.). — Fred Perry, of England, world's champion amateur tennis player, won the New Zealand singles championship and shared in doubles and mixed doubles finals victories today.

He defeated A. Kay, the Australian, 6—2, 6—3, 6—2, for the singles, with D. France, of New Zealand, won the doubles, and paired with Miss S. Whittaker, of Australia, to take the mixed doubles.

Brown Balks Kilpatrick At Parley

'If He's Savior, Why Not Give Him Your Job?' He Inquires.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—Jack Dempsey, acknowledged by both factions as pugilism's potential "savior," was caught in a withering cross-fire and barred as a referee today, when the smoldering feud between Madison Square Garden and the State Boxing Commission flared into virulent, open warfare.

The boxing kettle, seething for months with poor matches, stupid commission rulings and unsatisfactory decisions, finally boiled over at the commission meeting and a better brawl was staged than the ring has seen for many a moon.

KILPATRICK.

The Manassa mauler was not present, but his name was hurled back and forth across the huge oaken table like a hand grenade, inflicting considerable damage whenever it landed upon Col. John L. Kilpatrick, Garden president, or upon one of the commission's "three dumb dukes."

Dempsey Is Barred.

Throughout the barrage of charges and countercharges, Chairman John J. Phelan's "No! No! No!" boomed out. "No, Dempsey can not referee Friday night's fight between Art Lasky and James J. Braddock for the Garden."

Kilpatrick, a big, florid man who used to play football at Yale, was persistent. He requested, he demanded that Dempsey be allowed to referee because the former champion is the only man who could restore public confidence in the fight game. He charged that the public's confidence has been scuttled by incompetent commission appointees, causing great financial loss to the Garden.

Won't Be Ordered.

White-haired Bill Brown, the commission's ball of fire who once tabbed Maxie Baer a "bum," sprang to his feet and roared, "Yes, we admit Dempsey might do much for the game, but we, the representatives of New York State, will not let Madison Square Garden or anyone else dictate whom we shall appoint as referees.

"Moreover, Kilpatrick, if you regard Dempsey as the savior of boxing, why don't you quit your job as president of the Garden and let Jack take over that job. A lot of people are wondering why you don't do that. Another thing, Kilpatrick, you're crying about our decisions. Well, what about your boxing bouts? I claim that the bouts at the Garden have been worse than the decisions. And I guess most fans agree with me."

Cites Ross Case.

Brown's face was crimson and Kilpatrick's turkey red, as Brown exclaimed that the Garden was "overrun with gamblers" and that there was something queer in Lightweight Champion Barney Ross' persistent refusal to do business with Garden matchmakers. "Why don't you look into that Ross business?" demanded Brown. "You might learn that everything isn't as spic and span as you think in your own house?"

The commission kissed-off last week's reversal of the Risko-Dundee decision with a long-winded statement from Phelan to the effect that the commissioners never had "actually reversed a decision" as yet. They merely "corrected" the score cards of judges of referees when they failed to tabulate according to the law. That's what happened to Judge Sidney Scharlin's card after the Dundee-Risko bout.

Virginia's Five Wins Fourth Straight

Defeats Randolph-Macon by 34-17; Hold Foe in Second Half.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—The Virginia basket ball team won from Randolph-Macon here tonight, 34 to 17, to register its fourth consecutive victory over a State rival.

Both quintets put up a ragged exhibition at the start and there was little scoring during the first ten minutes.

Before the half ended, however, Rogers and Smith got range of the basket to make the half-time score stand, Virginia, 15; Randolph-Macon, 8.

Sandlotter's Dream to Come True on Sunday

Expenses Paid by Post in Effort to Develop D. C. Baseball Talent.

FROM the sandlots to the big leagues in one jump—that is the opportunity offered the fortunate Washington sandlotter whom the Washington Post will select on Sunday for a tryout with the Nats in the South.

From the ranks of the Washington Post Baseball Association, which last year comprised 90 teams in 15 leagues, The Post will name the lucky lad who will go with the Nats to their Biloxi, Miss., training camp with all traveling and hotel expenses paid by the Washington Post.

The announcement that The Post soon would select the player deemed to have the best prospects of succeeding in organized baseball has been greeted this week with wide activity among team captains, managers and loyal fans who are advancing the names of their favorite players as candidates for the chance.

All Players Considered

Pitchers, catchers, infielders, outfielders, every department of play will be considered by The Post's selection committee in making its choice of the local sandlotter who soon will realize the dream of every young ball player—the chance to make good in the big leagues.

The Post will base its selection on performances during the past season with batting, fielding and pitching averages having a bearing on the choice, although those items by no means will be conclusive.

President Clark Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats have enthusiastically indorsed the plan of The Post to develop local talent for the Washington team and have promised their full cooperation toward giving the youth selected a thorough tryout.

Not within recent years has the Washington Ball Club boasted a home-product in a regular position, although Alvin Powell, former Takoma Park sandlotter, is now bidding for a regular outfielder berth with the Nats, and other local youths have made good with other big league teams, notably Bill Werber, who learned most of his baseball on Washington sandlots.

The outstanding example of a home-town sandlot product to make good with the big league team of his native city is Joe Vosmik, the hard-hitting outfielder of the Cleveland Indians, whom the Cleveland Club picked up from the city's sandlots in 1928, farmed out for two years, and brought back as a sensational player.

Leave for Biloxi February 28.

The player selected by The Post is expected to leave for Biloxi on February 28 with the first group of Washington players and spend the entire month of March with the team at its training camp. He will be quartered at the same hotel and will receive individual instruction from Manager Bucky Harris.

Thereafter the player's fate will be strictly in his own hands. If his showing in practice and in exhibition games is good enough to warrant retention by the Nats, he doubtless will be given a contract and sent to one of the numerous Washington farms for development.

And then, again, there is always that long chance that the jump from the sandlots to the big leagues will be made in one hop—if the player selected does the sensational and wins a berth with the Nats during their Biloxi stay.

The dream of some sandlotter will come true—Sunday morning, in The Washington Post.

Hug Again, Claimed Last Week, Wins 2d in Row at Hialeah

Evergold 2d, Half Length In Rear

Filly Comes From 4th in Stretch to Take Feature Event.

By Walter Haight (Post Staff Writer).

HIALEAH PARK, Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.—Hug Again, named for her mama, Affection, brought J. U. Grattan interest on his money today when she teamed with little Georgie Watson to win the Idle Hour, the day's feature over the six-furlong course. Hug Again was making it two in a row since she was claimed last week for $3,000. She left in her wake, among others, Evergold, Black Buddy and Band Wagon.

Evergold, with Meade up, drew the bulk of the wagering, going to the post at less than 2 to 1. The veteran couldn't match the closing rush of Hug Again and had to be satisfied with second money, a half length away and the same distance ahead of Black Buddy.

Band Wagon Takes Lead.

Some Pomp, Band Wagon and Black Buddy fought for the dubious pace-setting honor as the field galloped along the back stretch, with Evergold, pinched back at the break, in fourth position. Hug Again was a conspicuous last at this point. In fact, Watson did not make his move until the swing into the final straightaway. Band Wagon had gone to the top, with Black Buddy second and Evergold a menacing third. Hug Again was running in fourth place.

There was a wild dash for the finish line and Hug Again stole the show. Watson drew his whip and the filly fairly jumped away from it as she came up with Evergold. Watson gave her a final crack nearing the finish and she stretched her head to win. She paid $9.20.

Track Record Falls.

The track record for a mile and a sixteenth over the turf course fell in the sixth race. With the regular starting gate used instead of the awkward walk-up starter, the field was away in good fashion and victory went to Motley, which ran the route in 1:44 1-5, two-fifths of a second faster than Impeach's mark. Little Cynic was second and St. Moritz was third.

Price Headley's Sparta, a game little St. Germans filly, won the opening sprint for juveniles, catching the leaders at the eighth pole and drawing away at the finish. Let's Pretend was second and Secret Vote third.

The 3-furlong dash was free from the jamming that generally marks these events and the best horse won. The mutuel was $11.10.

Sun Tempest and Happy Find ran as a team for most of the six furlongs of the second race, but the first named, admirably ridden by Pichon, developed a stretch kick that Happy Find failed to match. Fervid followed the pair. Sun Tempest, the favorite, paid $6.20.

Abel Wins on Own Horse.

Jockey A. J. Abel, who is also trainer and owner as far as the horse Black Target is concerned, rode his horse to victory in the third race and made it two successes for the favorite players with a $6.50 mutuel. Black Target was ahead after four jumps and had enough left to offset the closing rush of Highest Point. Hoops was third.

The well-played Golden Way took the fourth race at seven furlongs. With Apprentice Bryson lending a helping hand, Golden Way finished two lengths ahead of St. Stephens, with Cathop a close third. The winning mutuel was $8.30.

Eastern Triumphs Over Central Five times from the floor which, with two baskets by Scheible and one by Edelin, made a run-away out of the last few minutes.

Al Katz of Central had a big day and his floor-work time and again helped the Eastern cause.

Roosevelt's Ruff Riders never threatened the much-superior Techmen, who took a 17-8 lead at half-time. Spiro Kolius, high-scoring Roosevelt forward, was held scoreless from the floor. The score was 8-5 at the end of the first quarter, but Andy Farrell and Reds Daly led a Tech attack to widen the lead in the next period. The final two quarters were merely a repetition of the early going.

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Hialeah Park, Miami, Fla., Jan. 29.

Jockey Don Meade, the Nation's highest paid rider, is sadly off form now. Instead of having a host of followers who bet his every mount through the Maryland season, Meade's presence in the saddle here is the signal for many betters to look for another horse. He appears to be trying at all times but he is guilty of little mistakes that decide races. He seems to have lost the rip-snorting, dare-devil style that used to mark his work. No one is more concerned about it than Meade himself. The boy told one of the turf writers here that he "couldn't do anything right. I wish I'd get set down for 20 days. Maybe the rest would change things." That walk-up starter that I told you about yesterday was not used today. A gap was cut in the fence and the turf race was started from the regular stall gate. BILL.

First race—Our David seems to be auspiciously placed in the day's opener. Asked to carry 116 pounds, but under Arcaro's handling I'm disregarding weight. Air Line gets in light and both races and trials have been good. De Valera may go well.

Second race—Mount Lookout is one out of Clocker Mike's morning trial group. Raced well last out and may step home here at a good mutuel. Slave needs a scratch to get in action. Has plenty of speed. My Muggins is an upset possibility.

Third race—Dove of Peace has the early speed of this race. Under the light weight, this one may open a long lead and outlast the opposition in the stretch. Feudal Lord is the one to beat. Corrymeela for the show end.

Fourth race—Master Lad turned in a whale of a winning effort here last week. Carries 116 pounds, but won so impressively that I'm forced to return to him. Gifted Lady is a consistent sort and she will be in the thick of the stretch battle. Mettle's last deserves a show rating here.

Fifth race—New Deal, another with the top weight assignment, shapes up well at this mile. Providing Earl Porter gives us a real race ride. I expect his number to be displayed. Larranaga is at tops and is the one to beat. Slapdash for the show. Plight, left at the post last out, may surprise.

Sixth race—Mantagna's last effort was a beaut and one that can not be disregarded. A probable favorite under the guidance of Jockey Litzenberger. Chief Mourner, an old Charles Town friend, has been working in brilliant fashion and may be the sleeper here. Thruster for the show.

Seventh race—Just American did not fancy the turf course in his recent outing. Ran a good race, but moved in spots. Tomorrow, back on the main track, he may collect chief money. Matar and Standout for the rest.

Eighth race—Mayvite was a well-meant horse the other day when Wright tumbled off. Should go well here. Tuffy G and Limbus to complete the money bracket.

Southern Methodist Names Bell as Coach

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Madison Bell was named head football coach of Southern Methodist University today, succeeding Ray Morrison, who resigned to accept a coaching position at Vanderbilt.

Bell was line coach under Morrison last season. Previously he had been at Texas A. and M. College.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARTA, $11.10, $6.60, $4.00; LET'S PRETEND, $22.20, $6.80; CLAPPING JANE, $2.70.

SPARTA, away in the first flight, worked her way up and, running straight in the middle of the track, won drawing away. LET'S PRETEND rushed into lead at the sixteenth pole, but tired suddenly. CLAPPING JANE, away fast, swerved badly in early running and boy had all he could do to straighten her out. She showed good speed. INFIDOX finished with a rush. NED'S AFFINITY, a nice looking filly, is sure to improve. She broke fast, but was crowded back just after the start. LITTLE NYMPH came from far back.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. Claiming prices, $1,500 to $1,200. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:49. Off at 2:52. Winner, Ollie H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN TEMPEST, $6.20, $3.90, $3.20; HAPPY FIND, $3.30, $2.90; FERVID, $4.60.

SUN TEMPEST, well ridden, saved ground all the way, raced HAPPY FIND into defeat and drew away at end, but was ridden out to win. HAPPY FIND, under light weight, displayed keen speed for 5½ furlongs, then stopped. FERVID, well up all the way, was kept on outside and finished gamely. HEROWIN came with a rush in stretch. RAMUS, on the inside for the entire trip, had no mishap. RUTHS HOPE showed flash of early speed.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. Claiming price, $2,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:22. Off at 3:27. Winner, A. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN WAY, $8.30, $4.20, $3.40; ST. STEPHENS, $5.00, $4.10; CATHOP, $3.60.

GOLDEN WAY was allowed to rate along back of the fast early pace, came around field entering stretch, closed gamely and was drawing away at end. ST. STEPHENS, showing marked improvement, was kept close up and ran good race. CATHOP got into lead at the sixteenth pole, but tired suddenly. DISASTER came from far back. QUICKLY was well up for half a mile, then dropped back. HANK MACTAVISH displayed good speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Idle Hour. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:35½. Winner, J. U. Grattan's ch. f. (4), by Stimulus—Affection. Trained by R. Arbique. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:11 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUG AGAIN, $9.20, $4.00, $2.70; EVERGOLD, $3.40, $2.40; BLACK BUDDY, $2.70.

HUG AGAIN in great form. She was away poorly, but was allowed to rate along to the middle of the turn, where she began to move up, was taken around field in stretch, closed with a rush and held on gamely. EVERGOLD was outrun for the first three furlongs, closed very fast, and ran good race. BLACK BUDDY, well up all the way, had no mishap. BAND WAGON displayed good speed, but weakened suddenly in final furlong. SOME POMP ran good race and is about ready to win.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000. Claiming prices, $2,000 to $1,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:05. Off at 5:06. Winner, H. Massey's ch. g. (3), by Hourless—Queen of Wenonah. Trained by E. Anthony. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44 1-5 (new turf course record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRASS MONKEY, $8.80, $4.10, $3.70; AL NEIMAN, $3.10, $2.70; CAW CAW, $5.20.

BRASS MONKEY trailed far back to the far turn, where he moved up gamely, came around field and won going away. AL NEIMAN rushed into lead, set fast pace, but tired in last sixteenth. CAW CAW moved up with a rush on inside, then tired. PEEDEEQUE weakened in last furlong. COUSIN GEORGE stumbled and went to his knees at the start.

CampbellBack, Confident of New Mark

Will Be Satisfied With 300 M.P.M.; May Be His Last Gamble.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell, prince of speed, came back to America today with a drama of 300 miles an hour over Daytona Beach's golden sands resting in his crated, 7-ton juggernaut Bluebird, and the feeling that this perhaps was his last gamble with roaring death.

"Theoretically, she's faster than my old record of 272.108," he said. "I can't say more. But I will be satisfied with 300 miles an hour."

The slim Englishman, in his fiftieth year, knighted after he set a former record at Daytona Beach, in 1931, has every confidence that his entirely rebuilt monster will eclipse any speed man ever before has accomplished on land. The great Bluebird, retaining only the old 2,500-horsepower motor, has been streamlined to perfection, equipped with double wheels in the rear to increase traction, and big flanges jutting out in back to act as air brakes in the five miles it takes him to come to a stop.

Middle of February.

Tentatively the time for Sir Malcolm's newest attempt on the land speed record has been set for between February 14 and 20, when the beach at Daytona should be at its firmest and smoothest, with a combination of east winds and full moon.

"She has many advantages over the car I drove in 1933," Campbell said. "By seven months of study in the wind tunnels we have reduced her windage to a point where we really need the air flanges to slow her down to reach the end of the 10½-mile run at Daytona in safety.

"Any kind of a lifting surface on her now," he chuckled, "and I'm sure she would take right off the ground."

To Depend on Beach.

Success or failure in his attempt will depend entirely on beach conditions, he says. His tires are tested to withstand strains of better than 300 miles an hour. He has never driven the rebuilt car because there is no track in the world outside of Florida where a test can be made. But there is no questioning his optimism.

"I feel that there is no theoretical limit to automobile speed," he said, "provided that the perfect track, about 15 miles of hard, level sand, could be found. I saw the perfect spot in the depths of the Sahara Desert last year while I was hunting for gold south of Beggan, the last oasis out of Oran. It was 30 miles long and might have gone on for another 300 miles. But we could never have gotten Bluebird in there."

Twenty Grand's Rider, Coucci, Leaves Coast

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP).—Following the recommended scratching of Twenty Grand from the Santa Anita Handicap came the information that Silvio Coucci, jockey who was to have ridden the Greentree Stable veteran in that race, would leave tomorrow for Miami, Fla.

With Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable divided between California and Florida, this was taken to mean that Coucci would finish out the winter there, now that Twenty Grand apparently is out of the local picture.

Daily Double Pays $2,431 at Alamo

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 29 (AP).—Two players of the horses profited by their attendance at Alamo Downs today when they purchased the only tickets on the winning daily double and in return received $2,431.80 each.

The pair, unidentified, picked Donna James and Royal Link, rank outsiders, to win the second and third races, respectively. In the mutuels Donna James paid $34.90 and Royal Link returned $42 straight.

The featured race, 1 1-16 miles, was captured by Crowned Head, a 7-year-old gelding, from the Six Bar Stable. Taking the lead at the three-quarter pole, the son of King James finished a length in front of King Pin, a field horse, with James Boy third.

G. W. Girls to Compete At Goucher on Feb. 16

The annual girls' triangular basket ball "play day" among teams from George Washington University, Goucher College and Hood College will be held at Goucher February 16.

The games will be played under a two-court system with participation open to all classes of the respective schools. Miss Katherine Traver, '35, of Frederick, Md., Hood basket ball manager, is in charge of the meet.

Duke and C. U., Undefeated, Vie in Ring

Visitors Rated Even With Cards for Matches Saturday Night.

BOASTING one of the most formidable boxing teams in the South this season, Duke University's leather-pushers invade Washington Saturday with high hopes of giving Catholic University its first defeat of the season. Both are undefeated.

With a reputation as large as the Washington Monument and a roster that includes three men who have battered their way through all opposition, Duke will enter the ring with a 50-50 chance of socking the Cardinals into submission.

Should Danny Pyne, Catholic's heavyweight, be withheld from competition, the Blue Devils will have a slight edge over the Brooklanders, possibly the margin that will decide between victory and defeat. That Pyne will not box was almost a certainty yesterday.

Three Undefeated.

Duke's undefeated trio are Capt. Freddy Lloyd, 125 pounds; Jack Kneipp, sophomore, 135-pounder, and Ray Matulewicz, a rugged and clever 165-pounder. But Angy Restaino, who meets Lloyd, and Capt. Eddie Thibideau, who will face Kneipp, are undefeated, too, and have no intention of surrendering their unsullied records to the visitors.

Duke won two of its three matches without really extending itself, whipping Richmond, 7 to 1, and South Carolina, 6 to 2, and there are some who will testify that Coach Ad Warren's men "wuz robbed" of two decisions in the draw with Clemson.

Won Title in '32.

Lloyd's victims were Dave Scott, Richmond; Jay Altman, Clemson, whom he kayoed in the first round, and Raks Jenkins, South Carolina. The Duke leader won the 125-pound Southern Conference championship in 1932, and then was out of competition for two years because of illness.

G. U. Five Battles Army, Terps Meet Navy Today

G. W. Quintet Holds Local Stage

Meets Davis-Elkins in Capital's Only College Game of Day.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S game with Davis-Elkins is the lone collegiate basket ball attraction available to local fans today, but both Maryland and Georgetown will be in action on foreign courts. The Terrapins invade Annapolis for their annual battle with the Middies this afternoon while Georgetown opens its second Northern trip against Army at West Point.

Tonight's game ushers in the hardest portion of G. W.'s schedule, although the West Virginians do not appear to be as capable as some of the teams Coach Logan's men encounter later. Friday, G. W. faces an undefeated Villanova quintet at Villanova, but the real fireworks do not begin until next week when the team meets Long Island U. and St. John's, of Brooklyn, in New York.

Moe Berg, guard, is limpig around with a sprained toe and probably will not start tonight. Milt Schonfeld, a half-pint of mercury will assume his role.

Maryland G. U. Underdogs.

Maryland and Georgetown face the services teams in the roles of underdogs—but vicious underdogs. Of the two Georgetown apparently has the better chance of winning. Saturday night's victory over Carnegie Tech has put the Hoyas on edge, given them renewed confidence.

Should Don Gibeau go on another scoring spree with Capt. Ed. Hargaden at his usual form, Georgetown will be as tough as a two-bit steak for the Cadets. On a basis of past performances, however, Army still rules the favorite.

Terps End Idle Week.

Maryland pits its zone defense against Navy's man-for-man game; its long-passing attack against Navy's short-passing; its five-man team against Navy's "Buzz" Borries and Bob Dornim, and Navy is expected to win. The Terps may be stale after a week of idleness because of examinations, while Navy showed that it has reached its peak by its 25-22 win over Penn last Saturday.

Maryland will line-up with Al Waters and Bill Guckeyson at forwards; Vic Willis, center; Bill Andorka and Bernie Buscher, guards—a team that can wreak havoc upon an opponent if clicking on all cylinders.

Episcopal Host To Roosevelt Five Today

Faces John Marshall on Saturday; Twins to Take Road Trip.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School faces two tough engagements this week and has been hard at work yesterday and today practicing for them.

Roosevelt High School of Washington invades the Episcopal gym tomorrow afternoon. John Marshall High, leaders in Richmond scholastic circles, plays here Saturday afternoon.

After laying off since last Saturday night, because of mid-year examinations, Alexandria High School plays two games in as many days this week-end.

Friday, the Twins travel to Waynesboro, Pa., to engage the high school of that town. Saturday night, Occuquan High School invades the local Armory for a game with the Twins.

Lee Jackson High will be fighting to remain in the running for the Fairfax County championship Friday night, when the boys and girls travel to Falls Church to engage the high school of that town.

The basket ball schedule for the local senior loop for February has been announced by Theodore Beach, chairman of the league.

The schedule:

February 5, Central vs. Post, A. L. I. vs. St. Rita's; 6, DeMolay vs. O. D. B. C.; 15, St. Rita's vs. Central, O. D. B. C. vs. A. L. I.; 26, Central vs. DeMolay, Temple vs. A. L. I.; 27, Del Ray vs. Post, O. D. B. C. vs. St. Rita's.

Jones Named Chairman Of Congressional Golf

William W. Jones, well known in District golfing circles, yesterday was appointed chairman of the golf committee at Congressional Country Club, suceeding Theodore Grape.

Cooper C. Lightbown, newly elected president, also announced the chairmen of the following other committees:

Grounds, Maj. Frank Mackenzie Davidson; finance, Edward F. Colladay; house, Claude W. Dudley; swimming pool, Bancroft Foley; sanitation, Robert A. Keilty; maintenance, Frank Mitchell; entertainment, John F. Maury.

Elected as secretary was Thomas J. Groom, while named as the vice presidents are Edward C. Graham, Gen. Hines, Joseph H. Himes and William Montgomery.

Games Are Postponed.

Two Montgomery County league battles were postponed yesterday. The Silver Spring-Poolesville game was put off due to heating trouble in the latter's school and the Gaithersburg-Sherwood game was scheduled for February 27, as a result of a last-minute change in schedule.

National Back Stroke Champion to Defend Title in Capital

Miss Jean Kolinski, 16-year-old Milwaukee lass, pictured in action. She will defend her national junior back-stroke championship in the District A. A. U. open meet Friday night at the Shoreham pool.

V. M. I. Teams Play on Road This Week

LEXINGTON, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Four V. M. I. teams will be on the road next week-end, and for the only time during the season no home contest is carded. The varsity and freshman wrestlers and freshman boxers will all meet Navy teams at Annapolis, while the varsity basket ball team heads South to play Duke on Friday and South Carolina on Saturday.

Tomorrow the varsity and freshman quintets will entertain Virginia Tech's cagers in '94 hall.

Coach Al Martin's varsity boxers, after coming from behind to tie Virginia Tech last week, will have a week's rest before entering the ring with a strong Catholic University team. The Cardinals were originally scheduled to come to Lexington this week, but the meeting was postponed at the request of the C. U. management.

Three Men Unbeaten.

Three well balanced teams will carry V. M. I. colors against the Navy Saturday. The varsity matmen lost only one bout in trimming Duke and shared the eight bouts four apiece with North Carolina State, though losing by an 18-to-14 score. Undefeated this season are Capt. Ward Currence, 155-pound conference champion now wrestling at 165 pounds; Bill Riley, 118; Joe Sherrand, 126, and Jim Farley, unlimited. All except Currence are sophomores.

The freshmen wrestlers have won both their meets, losing only one bout to Augusta Military Academy and two to Woodberry Forest.

V. M. I.'s first year boxers have broken even in two meets, winning from Virginia and losing to Virginia Tech by 5-to-3 scores.

Virginia Gridmen Practice in Snow

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 29 (AP). Thirty-four prospective members of the 1935 University of Virginia football squad worked out in the snow here today in the first of what will be a series of midwinter early practice sessions.

Coaches Gus Tebell and Dutch Slaughter supervised the preliminary drill today, but Tebell will have little to do with future sessions. Varsity coaching contracts have not yet been announced and will not be until a meeting of the athletic council in February. Until then the practice will be on the rudiments of the grid game such as will fit into the system of whoever pilots the Cavaliers next season.

Mt. Rainier Swamps Maryland Park, 36-18

Mount Rainier High doubled the score on Maryland Park High on the Mount Rainier floor yesterday afternoon, winning, 36 to 18. The home team had only a 12-10 lead at the half, but finished strongly to win easily.

In a preliminary, the Mount Rainier girls' team evened the count for the season with Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, winning, 45 to 25.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Both boys' and girls' basket ball teams of the Hagerstown High School will go to Martinsburg Friday night for regular Cumberland Valley League games.

Twin Alpine Villages Looking For 100,000 Olympic Visitors

By Paul Gallico.

GARMISCH - PARTENKIRCHEN, Bavaria, (by mail)—This date-line may not mean much to you now, but a year from today it will be news. For in these twin Bavarian Alpine villages of Garmisch and Partenkirchen, the winter sports competition of the 1936 Olympic games will be taking place.

Garmisch is the Lake Placid of Germany, an hour and 40 minutes by express train out of Munich and south in the direction of that terrible barrier of rock that lies between Italy and the rest of Europe. However, there is a difference between this charming Bavarian village and Lake Placid. To the Adirondacks resort go annually a handful of wealthy American winter sportsmen, people who can afford the trip and the special clothing and the social life that goes with it.

It is a luxury center for those who can afford it. But it is nothing unusual for 20 or 30,000 visitors from Munich to descend upon Garmisch on a fine Sunday with their skis and ice skates to spend the day amidst the snow and ice of the Bavarian Alps. They come up in the third class carriages with their black bread sandwiches and knapsacks. They haven't much money. But they have boundless enthusiam for winter sports. Winter sports in America are a drop in the bucket compared to what they are over here.

Interviews Director

Today I interviewed Herr Max Werneck, director of the Olympic winter sports program, sort of a Zack Farmer of the Olympic winter contests, in his office in the Olympic headquarters in the old Kurhaus at Partenkirchen. I rode over in a horse-drawn sled. It was snowing. The Alps were quite blotted out by the storm. The Herr Direcktor then told me of the plans, still a year away from completion, to receive crowds of from 100,000 to 125,000 on the days of the ski-jumping, and take care of them.

More than 50,000 persons a day will come pouring in from Munich in the morning, and depart again at night. From 7 to 10 special trains each day will come winding over the Alps from Italy, where winter sport enthusiasm is just beginning to hit. Others will come from Innsbruck and other places in the Austrian Tyrol, provided the border is open, which it isn't now.

Preparations Stupendous.

The stadium that the German Olympic committee is building at the ski jump at Partenkirchen will accommodate more than 100,000 persons. Wind, weather and politics permitting, there will be that many and more present to see the sport of the man snowbirds, who leap 80 and 90 meters through the air. The preparations being made for them are stupendous.

I wanted to know what possible arrangements could be made to accommodate and feed such a crowd, even if it remained but for the day. The people certainly would want lunch. It is impossible to set up tents here. One snowfall such as is going on outside my window as I write, and any large tent structure would collapse over night. Here the famous Bavarian motor relief trains will be called into action, a huge organization, not unlike the Red Cross, of trains of great motor lorries containing field kitchens, hospital stations, beds, first aid and whatever is needed. These will camp around the town and near the stadia, and too, all over the town there will be small huts and stations and little field kitchens set up.

Famous One Dish Day.

The food problem will be solved by means of the famous "one dish day," which the Government instituted for the relief of the poor during the winter months. One Sunday every month, during the winter, when you go into hotel or restaurant, you pay full price for a meal, but they serve you but one dish, either a thick barley soup, with large pieces of beef floating in it, or two slices of pork and stewed potatoes and carrots, or mixed vegetables. It is filling, cheap and wholesome. Let us say that you pay $1 for it. The restaurant puts it out for 15 or 20 cents. The other 80 cents goes to the relief of the poor and needy.

And incidentally, as you eat your one dish, it does give you a little pause to consider how many people there are in the world who can dine on only one dish, and sometimes not that. However, without the charity angle, the committee proposes to dispose of the food problem by means of the one dish, a soup, or a goulash, or something like that full of potatoes, dumplings, meat, etc., warming and filling. If they all make the same thing, the field kitchens, as in war time, will easily be able to turn out vast quantities.

G. W. Seeks Logan's Return as Trainer

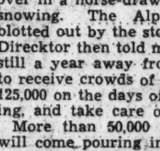

Jim Pixlee, head coach of the George Washington football team, is endeavoring to make arrangements whereby Trainer Roland Logan can return to the school after the next baseball season, it was learned last night.

Logan recently signed as trainer for the Boston Red Sox. Ordinarily his duties at Boston would end October 1, but Logan does not believe he would be available until October 10, inasmuch as he counts on the Red Sox winning the pennant.

If the services of a satisfactory trainer could be obtained for the football team until Logan is able to report for duty, the stocky Kansan would be welcomed with open arms by George Washington.

Post Mortems . . .

BOZIE BERGER, former three-letter man at the University of Maryland, now the property of the Cleveland Indians, coaches the Fort Myer basket ball team . . . Berger was turned back to the New Orleans Club by Cleveland last spring because he couldn't hit . . . and then became the second leading batter among Southern Association infielders with a .313 average . . . After 13 years as a football player, Stumpy Thomason, former Georgia Tech star, has quit the game . . . he played with the Brooklyn Pros during the last five years but has taken a job with a shoe manufacturing concern as traveling salesman . . . If Coach Jim Pixlee had not expressed the desire that his back field star be spared the responsibilities of the job, Tuffy Leemans would have been elected captain of the 1935 G. W. football team . . . Bicycle manufacturers are putting on the market a new bike that is supposed to be self-locomotive . . . the rider's weight in the saddle is supposed to provide the power . . . Assistant Trainer Frankie Baxter suffered a badly mangled hand the other day at Griffith Stadium . . . it was his pinochle hand, an unbeatable one, which was caught between the cross-fire of the cards of Mike Martin and Earl Griffith . . . Ski manufacturers have been unable to supply the demand this season . . . particularly in Washington where sports goods dealers have dispensed more winter equipment in two weeks than they sold in the past half dozen years . . . Fox hunters in Virginia are required by law to pay for all fowl killed by their dogs . . . Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the District of Columbia Crime Committee, first visited Washington as press agent for the Davis-Elkins College basket ball team.

Virginia Tech Plays V. M. I. Tonight

Contests in Three Sports Are Slated Saturday for Gobblers.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Jan. 29 (Spl.).—Two midweek court battles with V. M. I. at Lexington and four Saturday contests in three sports mark the turning point of the current indoor season at Virginia Tech.

Tech's varsity basket ball team is ready to launch a desperate bid for victory over the Keydets tomorrow night. Improving steadily during the last fortnight, the Gobblers have made strong though futile bids for victory in games with several of the strongest quintets in the Southern Conference. They are certain to put on a spirited attack in V. M. I.'s Ninety-Four Hall.

The Tech freshmen will meet the V. M. I. yearlings in a preliminary game. The young Techs will seek their seventh straight victory.

Wrestlers to Vie.

The quartet of Saturday contests will pit the varsity quintet against William and Mary and the varsity wrestlers against North Carolina State at home, and the varsity and freshman boxers against strong Virginia ring teams at Charlottesville.

Tech's varsity cagemen returned at noon today from Carolina after hard-fought games with N. C. State, Duke and University of North Carolina. Coach Monk Younger indicated that he plans to keep his line-up intact for tomorrow's game, though he plans to use Herman Haga more as a reserve forward. His all-sophomore team shows Scrapper Day and Max Snead at forward, Foots Dickerson or Frank Evans at center, and Louis Fittro and Joe Mottola at guard.

The Tech yearlings will probably face the Keydets without Frank Walkauskas, forward, who is one of their leading scorers. The blonde phantom has been suffering from a boil on his leg. In case Walkauskas is not ready, Sonny Powers will most likely replace him. Mel Henry will be in one forward, Carol Shockey in center, and C. T. Southern and Earl Lake in guard.

Western Defeats W.-L. High, 50-29

Western High rang up its ninth victory of the season yesterday at Ballston, Va., defeating Washington-Lee High, 50 to 29. The Georgetowners were hard-pressed in the third quarter after taking a 24-to-10 lead in the first half, but snapped into action to make it a runaway in the last quarter.

At one time in the third period, Washington-Lee drew up to 29-24. Capt. Phil Maloney led the Red offensive, tallying 14 points, while Burns and Allen chalked up 11 and 10 points apiece, respectively.

Northern Virginia Loop To Be Formed Friday

The Northern Virginia Basket Ball League will be formed at a meeting to be held at 8 p. m. Friday at the offices of the Moncure Insurance Agency, Masonic Temple Building, East Falls Church, Va.

Teams from McLean, Manassas, Olney, Warrenton, Clarendon and Falls Church are expected to send representatives as well as the Lee-Jackson High School Alumni Association. Other towns interested in the league are invited to be represented. Furtner information may be obtained from Richard Moncure at Falls Church 318 between 6 and 7 p. m.

Cumberland Knights Trim Cloakers, 34-28

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 29 (Spl.). Before the largest crowd of the Interstate League season, the Cumberland Knights of Pythias defeated the Cumberland Cloakers at State Armory, 34 to 28, and gained undisputed possession of first place in the seven-club circuit.

St. Peter and Paul Club, of Cumberland, crashed the win column in the league at Lonaconing by defeating the Goodwill Firemen, 26 to 22.

$6,500 Coast Golf Opens Today

Half of Field of 200 Will Tee Off in Opening Round of Play.

GLENDALE, Calif, Jan. 29 (AP). Veteran fairway fortune seekers shunted into the background by a bunch of youngsters, had their eyes on the richest stake of the California winter golf season tonight—the Oakmont $8,500 open and Nassau event starting here to morrow.

Winners of only one event in six, the old guard will seek, in 72 holes of medal play and four rounds of match competition which will be concluded Tuesday to catch up with Harold McSpaden, Vic Ghezzi, John Revolta and the rest.

McSpaden, of Kansas City, Kans., set the pace going into this golfing innovation, with the Pasadena, Sacramento and San Francisco tournament titles in his possession, along with more than $3,000 in prize money. Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., was victor in the Los Angeles open, while Horton Smith, of the veterans, was the closest competitor because of his California open triumph.

100 Tee Off Today.

Half the field of more than 200 players will go to the first tee tomorrow, with the remainder playing its first round Thursday. The low 70 and ties will continue in the second round Friday with 100 professionals and 20 amateurs continuing through the last 36 holes.

Four thousand dollars in prize money will be distributed to the 30 leaders at the end of 72 holes of play, with the nine leading pros and as many amateurs competing Monday and Tuesday in Nassau championships of four rounds.

Under this system, each player will meet the eight others on a match-play basis with the one collecting the most points among the pay-for-play gentry getting the championship along with the major share of $2,500 additional money. It is possible under this plan for the champion to collect as much as $1,500.

Maryland Open Enlargement Is Sought

Committee Meets Tonight to Consider Plan for $2,000 Event.

THE Maryland State Golf Association's executive committee, meeting in Baltimore tonight, will attempt to enlarge the Maryland Open so as to make it the outstanding professional event in the Middle Atlantic section.

Nathan Kaufman, of Suburban, association president; Bill Waxter and Emmett Gary, of Baltimore, and Emmons, Smith, of Chevy Chase, will set in motion plans for a $2,000 or $2,500 championship which would be conducted by the Maryland Association, but sponsored by either a Baltimore or Washington club, preferably the latter.

Kenwood Golf and Country Club, it is understood, is not particularly anxious to stage another National Capital Open Tournament, as a result of the loss suffered on the 1934 event.

Frowns on Idea.

The Maryland Association would like to have Kenwood continue sponsoring such a tournament under the title of "Maryland Open," but Kenwood doesn't like the idea. Members of the association will attend the meeting of the District association Monday with the view of interesting them in such a proposition.

Some $500 in cash prizes was awarded at last season's Maryland Open which followed the National Capital and was won for the third time by Al Houghton.

The Maryland Association probably would be glad to put up $500 and then let the sponsoring club stake the rest—say $2,000. Indian Spring might consider such a proposition, if the association went 50-50 on the financial backing, or even Congressional.

Tanforan Owner Plans Track in Los Angeles

San Francisco, Jan. 29 (AP).—J. W. Marchbank, owner of the Tanforan Track near here, said today he had applied to the California horse racing commission to build a racing plant near the center of Los Angeles.

The action was taken on behalf of a group of southern California breeders and sportsmen and for himself, Marchbank said. "As soon as the permit is granted, which I anticipate will not take long, preliminary steps will be put forward for the building of the race park," he added.

C. U. Five to Tour West Indies in '36

A three-week trip to the West Indies next season for Catholic University's basket ball team has been tentatively arranged by Arthur J. Bergman, director of athletics, The Post learned last night.

The Redbirds were invited to make the jaunt this season, but Bergman declined the invitation.

Five games will be played, although the identity of the teams was not disclosed.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

BIGGEST news of the day is the President's Birthday Ball. Radio publicity folk have written more words about it than about anything else in a long time. Out of the words, these facts are assembled:

Both CBS and NBC will pick up the President's address from the White House shortly after 11:30 tonight. The rest of the time will be devoted to spotting festivities in other cities. Eight big name bands will be heard.

Admiral Byrd and company will carry on typical ballroom chatter with Elisa Ford, model, on a 10,000-mile short wave circuit. A two-way broadcast for CBS. At 10:00 WJSV.

Eddie Cantor will be present at the big ball at the Shoreham tonight. Rubinoff and violin will accompany him. Phil Baker and Radio Revue will be featured; Phil acting as master of ceremonies.

A tribute to the President will be made by Henry Morgenthau, sr., former Ambassador to Turkey, on WRC at 7 p. m. Immediately after his talk, Mr. Morgenthau will go to the National Democratic Club and repeat the tribute to guests there.

More radio news from the White House. Mrs. Roosevelt has signed for a 10-week series of talks under a sponsor, the Selby Shoe Co. The first of her talks will be "It's a Woman's World," on February 15 C. B. S. Sixty-two radio stations are lined up for the series; the amount paid per program is $4,000, which will immediately be turned over to charity.

OTHER high spots: Dorothy Thompson, the writer, wife of Sinclair Lewis, is guest of the "Little House" program, WJSV, 4 p. m. . . . Secretary Dern speaks before the Women's Patriotic Conference on WMAL, 10:30 p. m. . . . An all-Mozart program is featured by the Curtis Institute today . . . David Gujon, composer, will be guest of Lanny Ross's program and will lead the orchestra in a special arrangement of "Home on the Range."

Mary Pickford and company dramatize Owen Davis' "Forever After" . . . Lily Pons is heard with Kostelanetz on C. B. S. . . . Everett Marshall's Variety Program is the spot for Gus Edwards tonight . . . Jimmy Fidler's Hollywood Gossip is just what it sounds like . . .

Discussions on the New Deal take a cross-ocean hop on Sunday when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is heard from New York, and Walter B. Cittine, secretary of Trade Union Conference of England, will speak from London.

Dorsey Brothers have been taking to the air in a different way. Tom hopped to Florida, returned from a brief vacation just in time for "Let's Dance," Saturday night. Jimmy flew to California to visit relatives.

FLASH about the President's ball: Eddie Cantor will hop a train in New York to roll his eyes at the guests gathered at the Shoreham, and possibly, crack a quip or two into the mike. Rubinoff and fiddle will back him up in making the party a success. This was mostly WJSV's doings.

N. B. C. news: Starting Friday a hill-billy troup, the Hayshakers, goes on the air from WRC at 7:45 a. m. each week . . . One Man's Family fills in the Wednesday spots until Ray Nobel's debut, on February 6 and 13. WRC . . .

It seems that the story about the kittens on the "Promenade" program yesterday created a lot of interest. Calls flooded the studio. "Where can we get one of those kittens?" So Shannon Allen went to work, rounded up all the felines of grocery stores and distributed as many as he could.

N. Y. Boxing Chiefs In Fiery Session

Change Recommended.

Then Phelan assured the reporters, who had been delighted spectators during the battle, that all would be well in the future because the commission's annual report had recommended to the Legislature that the boxing law be changed so that the three ring officials at a fight would vote at once and the majority would rule.

Now, only the two judges vote and if they disagree, their votes are thrown out and the referee alone decides the match.

Maxey Waxman, Dundee's manager, apologized to the commission for his words to Chairman Phelan, after Friday's first decision which gave the decision to Risko. Waxman had told Phelan, "That's the second time my boy got the works here in New York. What are your connections with the underworld?" Phelan was insulted.

Would Welcome Quiz, Asserts Gen. Phelan

New York, Jan. 29 (U.P.).—The New York Boxing Commission avoided mention of the proposed legislative investigation of its office during today's commission meeting. However, Chairman John J. Phelan, when pressed by reporters, said the commission would welcome such an investigation, as it had nothing to conceal. The proposal was made at Albany yesterday by Assemblyman Herbert Brownell, New York City Republican. Observers doubt that Brownell's resolution will pass because the Democrats hold a majority in both houses.

Boxing Bout Fatal.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 29 (AP).—As the result of injuries suffered in a semifinal bout of an amateur boxing tournament here last night, Frank de Young, 21, a contestant in the open welterweight class, died this afternoon in Foote Hospital.

Wheat Values Slump Under Money Fears

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Increasing uncertainty as to the monetary situation with approach of the date of an expected Supreme Court decision on validity of gold clause abrogation befogged the grain market again today and prices continued in a downward trend.

A tendency to rise, manifest in a midsession rally, was checked to some extent by weakness in securities and at the close wheat and corn prices sank to the day's bottom levels, new low prices since early in November.

Wheat finished nervous and weak, ½ to ¾ cent below Monday's close; May, 95 to 95⅛ cents, and corn was also ½ to ¾ off; May, 82⅜ to 82½. Oats lost ¾ to 1⅝; rye was ⅝ to 1⅜ down and barley unchanged to ½ off.

Accumulated selling orders in the wheat pit caused a fractional decline at the opening, but at around 95 cents for May buying support appeared. Milling interests sponsored some orders and there was evidence of short covering, but the presence of general pessimism discouraged aggressive buying.

However, the wheat market rallied more than a cent to fractionally above the previous close and clung near this level until liquidation was renewed during the final half hour. Eastern houses were conspicuous sellers of July wheat on the recession.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—An opening decline was followed by partial rallies in cotton today. May contracts after selling off to 12.35 at the start rallied to 12.41, but eased slightly in the late trading, closing at 12.38. The general market closed steady at a net decline of 1 to 5 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 6 to 9 points under overnight selling and a renewal of the selling through houses with foreign connections. After the call the market showed evidences of an improved technical position following the liquidation of the last two or three days and prices steadied on covering by recent sellers. March sold up from 12.30 to 12.36, while October advanced from 12.24 to 12.32 in a comparatively narrow market.

This carried prices back to about yesterday's closing quotations with July selling a couple of points higher during the early afternoon, but buyers showed little disposition to follow up the advances and closing quotations were a few points off from the best under a little Southern selling and liquidation.

Exports today, 26,442 bales, making 2,925,487 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 7,341 bales. United States port stocks, 2,893,412 bales.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was easy early today, reacting 2 to 3 points on the setback in lard, but rallied later on the recovery in lard and Wall Street and Southern buying. Final prices were 1 point higher to 1 net lower. Sales, 56 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; March closed 10.88; May, 10.93; July, 10.96; September, 11.02.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

In London the dollar dropped to 4.87⅝ to the pound sterling, and in New York the British unit rose 1⅛ cents to $4.87⅝.

The dollar declined to the equivalent of 6.507 cents to the French franc in Paris and in the American market the franc lifted .03¼ of a cent to 6.55¼ cents.

Other gold currencies were strong in New York, with the guilder up .27 of a cent at 67.17 cents; Swiss francs, .14 of a cent higher at 32.14 cents, and belgas, .10 of a cent up at 23.17 cents.

Legislation Now Proposed to Restrict Commodity Markets Trading Is Regarded by Many as Typical New Deal Measure Vesting Commission With Power.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York, Jan. 29.—Distractions such as the gold clause litigation have served to turn the attention of the financial district from the renewed efforts in Congress to enact legislation severely restricting commodity futures trading. Normally, keen interest would be displayed in such bills as that recently introduced by Representative Jones in the House.

The fact that the futures markets are already severely hampered by conditions created by the Agricultural Adjustment program, making for reduced activity and an uncertain outlook, likewise makes for an attitude bordering on indifference to new regulatory proposals while they are yet in the preliminary discussion stage.

The more alert people in the markets affected will doubtless be heard from, however, when the questions involved are ready for active debate in Congress, and possibly before that time. There is little doubt that every effort will be made later to prevent the passage of such bills as that of Mr. Jones, and failing that, to obtain far-reaching amendments. The recent aggressive attitude of the Grain Futures Administration, evidenced by proceedings against leading speculators in the grain trade, will render the commodity exchanges of the country even more reluctant to have additional regulatory legislation adopted than they were last year, when almost identical bills were actively before Congress.

Legislation Proposed Charged With Some Regulatory Dangers.

The legislation now propsed is, as viewed by many in the trades directly affected, a typical New Deal measure in that it would vest almost limitless regulatory power in a "commission," to be composed of the Secretaries of Agriculture and Commerce and the Attorney General. This commission, as well as the Secretary of Agriculture separately, are given broad discretionary powers. The provisions of the bill, moreover, are held to reflect hostility in Congress to commodity speculation in general, and to show none too much consideration even for hedging operations, by which manufacturers and merchants seek to protect themselves from fluctuations in prices of the raw materials with which they are concerned. Specifically, the measure, a series of amendments to the grain futures act, after expressing the opinion that large speculative operations deeply injure markets for agricultural products, ten of which are specifically, listed in the bill, proceeds to give the new cabinet commission the authority to fix limits beyond which no trader may assume commitments in any of the specified futures markets. Hedging operations are excepted from such limitation of individual short and long positions. However, proof satisfactory to the commission is required that exempted trades are really hedges. At least so far as speculative commitments are concerned, such limits on the size of individual positions give a very large measure of control over market conditions on commodity exchanges to the authorities at Washington, especially through reductions in the limits that they may order.

Restrictions on Markets Seen Handicapping Hedging Needs.

It is emphatically argued by those familiar with the futures markets, and with justice, that reasonably free speculative trading is a "sine qua non" of a commodity market in which hedging operations are feasible. The many restrictions already placed upon spot and some future markets, and arbitrary operations by governmental agencies in various commodities, particularly cotton, have already vastly increased the difficulties of those who wish to use these exchanges as places in which to effect indispensible hedging in connection with their spot transactions. There are well-informed men, whose motives are rarely questioned, who earnestly assert that such interferences have already, on more than one occasion, undermined rather than stabilized agricultural prices, especially over a longer period. If to all this is now added a measure that some believe may virtually drive the speculator out of the commodity markets, it is an open question in many minds whether hedging will longer be feasible at all. If the manufacturer and merchant are deprived of the opportunity to hedge their risks, they must perforce seek a substantially larger margin for their services in order to continue to do business.

The views just described are not universally held among commodity brokerage houses. However, they may be taken as the majority reaction to the Jones bill among those most intimately concerned with markets for the ten agricultural products mentioned in the act.

With this legislative situation threatening, it was particularly unfortunate that the recent squeeze in December futures in the sugar market should have occurred just at this time, even though the difficulty originally arose from governmental restrictions upon imports of Cuban sugar. The settlement of the dispute by fixing a compromise settlement price for the shorts satisfied no one, and the disgruntled "longs" who wanted the squeezed shorts to pay a higher price have appealed for redress directly to Washington.

Bond Market Follows Rails In Price Sags

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Renewed pressure against secondary loans unsettled the entire bond market today and most types of securities sold lower, including United States Government obligations.

Low-priced issues of railroads were the worst sufferers, and the relative weakness of this group was attributed in investment circles partly to the December earnings statements of roads thus far reporting, which revealed that operating profits were still far from satisfactory.

Among the more active issues selling 1 to 2 points or more lower were Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4½s at 53, St. Paul 4½s at 58½, Katy 5s at 71, and New Haven 6s at 45½.

Standard Investments Off.

Smaller declines, mostly of the fractional variety, occurred in such standard investment loans as Norfolk & Western 4s, Pennsylvania general 5s, and Louisville & Nashville 4½s. The Associated Press average for 20 rails declined .48 of a point to 86.02.

While utility and industrial bonds were more resistant than rails, there were many losers of minor fractions to a point, including Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, Inland Steel 4½s, International Telephone 4½s, Lackawanna Steel 5s, Otis Steel 6s, St. Joseph Lead 5½s and United Biscuit 6s. The Associated Press averages for 10 industrials yielded .48 of a point at 94.99 and that for 10 utilities declined .38 of a point to 87.62.

Federal Issues Lag.

With the exception of a fair turnover in a few Treasury issues and Home Owners Loan 2¾s, there was little activity in the Federal section where losses ranged from 3-32ds to ¼ of a point.

Further declines were recorded by most Central and South American issues listed in the Foreign Department, and German obligations were soft.

Transfers aggregated $11,208,000, par value, compared with $10,919,000 on Monday.

Exports Drop In December Imports Down

(Associated Press.)

American exports were shown by Department of Commerce figures yesterday to have declined in December, as compared with the previous month and the same month of 1933.

Exports in December, 1934, were $170,673,000, against $194,909,000 in November, 1934, and $192,638,000 in December, 1933.

Imports in December.

Imports in December, 1934, were $132,252,000, compared with $150,-919,000 in November, 1934, and $133,-518,000 in December, 1933. In 1933 imports were greater in December than in the previous month.

The Nation continued to have a favorable balance of trade for December, 1934, then it was $38,421,000 and in December, 1933, it was $59,-120,000.

Exports for entire 1934 were $2,133,414,000 compared with $1,674,-994,000 for 1933.

There was a favorable balance for 1934 of $478,365,000. For 1933 it was $225,435,000.

Curtailment of Exports.

Price increases were said by officials to have accounted for all of the increase over 1933 in the 1934 value of general imports.

Foreign Markets.

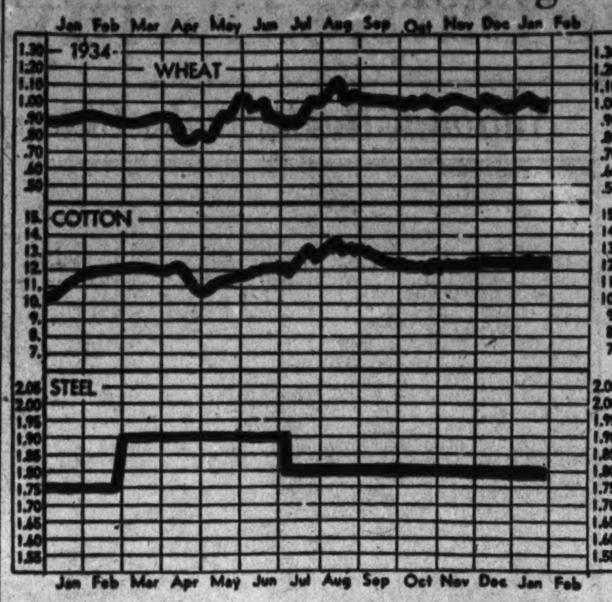

(Associated Press.)

London—Business on the stock exchange today was dull, and prices were easy, due to the uncertainty of the foreign exchange market. Competition between new issues and gilt-edged securities caused the latter to ease, while foreign bonds and rail issues were also lower. West Australian gold-mining shares and a few industrials were supported. The market closed undecided.

Paris—Prices were firmer on the bourse today following the recent long and short covering operations in preparation of a bigger money market. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Trading on the boerse opened lively today, and developed firmness later in the session. North German Lloyd advanced 2 points. The market closed firm.

U. S. Steel Votes 50 Cent Return On Preferred

Deficit in Last Quarter of 1934 Mounts to $10,234,413.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—The usual dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock was ordered today by directors of the United States Steel Corporation. Dividends of this amount have been paid quarterly since the corporation abandoned the regular $7 annual rate on the senior shares in January, 1933.

For the year 1934 the corporation had net operating income exclusive of depreciation allowance, of $22,884,871, against $7,083,376 in 1933. Total reduction in surplus after preferred stock dividens and depreciation reserves amounted to $28,906,526, against $43,706,745 in 1933.

Slight Drop in Quarter.

The corporation reported total earnings of $3,761,716 for the final quarter of 1934 after ordinary operating expenses, against $3,768,-863 for the September quarter and $5,537,084 for the last quarter of 1933.

After interest, depreciation, depletion, overhead expenses on iron ore properties, etc., deficit for the quarter was $10,234,413 against deficits of $9,826,767 for the September quarter and $7,945,445 for the December quarter in the previous year.

After provision for the preferred dividend, the total deduction from surplus for the December quarter was $12,035,818 compared with $11,-628,172 for the three months ended September 30 and $9,746,850 for the final quarter of 1933.

Preferred Dividend.

The dividend on the preferred shares is payable February 27 to stock of record February 1. With this payment dividend accumulations on the preferred stock, which is entitled to $7 annually, will amount to $11.25 a share.

Shipments of finished steel products for the three months ended December 31 amounted to 1,128,711 tons, against 1,118,267 tons in the September quarter, and 1,603,894 tons for the corresponding quarter a year ago.

Devoe & Raynolds Co.

Devoe & Raynolds Co., Inc., and subsidiaries report for the year ended November 30 net income of $459,513, equivalent after dividends on the preferred stocks to $2.36 a share on the combined class A and B common stocks. For the year ended November 30, 1933, net income amounted to $656,336, or $3.78 a share on the combined common stocks.

Canada Dry.

Canada Dry Ginger Ale, Inc., reports for the quarter ended December 31 net profit of $35,579, equivalent to 7 cents a share on the capital stock, against $156,474, or 30 cents a share in the 1933 December quarter.

Cord Corporation.

Cord Corporation subsidiaries report for the fiscal year ended November 30 consolidated net income of $75,321, equivalent to 3 cents a share on the capital stock, against $1,380,007, or 61 cents a share, in the previous year.

Savage Arms Co.

In a preliminary report, Savage Arms Co. for the year ended December 31 shows net profit of $27,-468, equivalent, after dividend requirements on the 6 per cent second preferred stock, to 10 cents a common share, against net loss of $236,-325 in the previous year.

Jewel Tea.

Jewel Tea Co. declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock, payable April 15 to stock of record April 1.

Hercules Powder Co.

Hercules Powder Co. reports for the year 1934 net income of $3,038,-406 after charges, depreciation, etc., equal, after preferred dividends, to $3.94 a share on the common, excluding shares held in the treasury. This compares with $2,353,055, or $2.79 a share, in the preceding year.

Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 29 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Ohio and similar wools were receiving some call, but the demand was mostly limited. Fair quantities of fine Ohio Delaine or strictly combing 64s and finer Ohio fleeces were bringing mostly 28 cents in the grease. Strictly combing 56s, ⅜-blood Ohio and similar fleeces sold at 28@28½ cents in the grease, while strictly combing 48s, 50s, ¼-blood wools were reported to have brought 26@26½ cents.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

Stocks—Mild price recessions featured a day of dull trading. Leaders in the market were off a point or more, others lost fractionally. Closing Associated Press averages were down 0.3 of a point. The day's sales decreased to 574,890 shares.

Bonds—Renewed pressure against secondary loans unsettled the bond market. Federals joined rails in fractional losses. Transfers advanced to $11,208,000.

Wheat—Continued money fears sent corn and wheat prices to the lowest levels since early in November. May wheat sold at 95, while July closed at 87⅝. May corn sold at 82⅜ and July at 78⅛.

Cotton—Opening declines were mediated in a midsession rally, but sustained in late declines. March closed at 12.32; May, at 12.38.

Coffee—Spot coffee was quiet; Rio No. 7 sold at 9¾ and Santos No. 4 closed at 11.

Gold—Bar gold advanced in London 2½ pence to 141 shillings 8½ pence. (U. S. equivalent $34.43.)

Dollar—The United States dollar was firm in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies $4.87⅝ to the English pound, 6.55⅝ cents to the French franc, and 39.90 cents to the German mark.

Stocks Recede Mildly While Sales Slacken

A few leaders in the stock market got down a point or more, and the lower-priced rail and industrial bonds were in fairly free supply at times at a point or so concession. Higher grade industrial loans were steady.

A few Treasury issues and Home Owners Loan, 2¾s, gave ground on small volume, but most Federal obligations held their own.

Preferreds Decline.

Some of the ordinary inactive preferreds, which have attracted a following in recent sessions, appeared to give ground readily, but transactions were mostly small, as they had been during the advance.

A few declined by 4 to 6 points or so, including Barker Bros., at 37; Interstate Department Stores, at 75; Jones & Laughlin, at 63; McCrory, at 59; United Stores, at 60½, and Worthington Pump, at 28.

Directors of United States Steel, acting after the close of the market, declared a 50-cent dividend on the preferred, the same rate paid since the regular $7 disbursement was abandoned in January, 1933. There had been predictions in some quarters that the 50-cent payment might be raised at this time. The preferred stock closed ¾ of a point lower at 89¼, and the common lost a similar amount at 36.

Most Stocks Off Fractions.

The majority of stocks were only fractionally lower at the close, with the Associated Press average for 60 selected issues down .3 of a point at 38.26. Turnover aggregated 574,890 shares.

A few leaders extended their declines to a point or so, including Allied Chemical, at 135½, American Tobacco at 81, Santa Fe at 45¼ and Union Pacific at 100¾. Losses of fractions appeared in such trading favorites as American Can at 112½, Bethlehem Steel at 29⅜, Chrysler at 35¾, Consolidated Gas at 19⅝, General Electric at 22¾, General Motors at 30⅝, New York Central at 17⅛, Standard Oil of New Jersey at 40¾ and Southern Pacific at 15⅛.

Food Begins Upward Trend

Rise of 6 Cents Wipes Out Last Week's Drop; Peak Since '30.

New York, Jan. 29.—After the temporary check of the last week, the Weekly Food Index, compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., resumed its upward course to establish a new peak for the current movement. A gain of 6 cents more than wiped out the loss of 4 cents last week and brought the index for January 22 to $2.67, the highest since November 6, 1930. Compared with the like week of last year, when it stood at $2, the latest figure shows a rise of 33.5 per cent.

The hesitation of last week, due to monetary uncertainties, was carried into the forepart of the current period, but the general rally which set in later erased all losses with the result that net price changes were all on the up side. The list of advances embraced all of the grains, live stock, bellies, lard, butter, sugar, cottonseed oil, cocoa, peas, peanuts and eggs.

The Dun & Bradstreet Weekly Food Index of wholesale prices (the sum total of the price per pound of 31 articles in common use) compared with preceding weeks and years is given herewith:

Labor's Share Of Production Falls to 16.8

Per Capita Earnings in 1933 for Workers Cut to $869.

(Associated Press.)

The 1933 census of manufactures just issued by the Census Bureau shows that the proportionate share received by labor from the total value of the American manufacturing industry's output fell from 17.5 per cent in 1931 to 16.8 per cent in 1933.

In 1929, a period of prosperity, the proportion was 16.6, giving support to economists who argue that the wage earner did not receive his share in 1929.

Wages apparently started their major fall in 1931. The figures do not necessarily show labor was disproportionately cut, however, because some manufacturers maintained employment in the face of declining business.

Levels of Costs.

While labor costs were moving in this fashion, the cost of materials, containers, fuel and purchased electric energy were shown to have remained near 53 per cent in both 1931 and 1933.

In 1929 these costs were higher, and this may indicate higher prices, for materials going into the product showed prices were a depressing factor of wages because they were too high.

The figures further show that 8,821,757 wage earners were employed in manufacturing industry in 1929; 6,506,701 in 1931, and 6,055,736 in 1933. Salaried employes numbered 1,353,908 in 1929, and 802,474 in 1933.

Decline of Salaries.

The decline among salaried employes was thus some 41 per cent, as compared to 31 per cent for wage earners in 1933, as compared to 1929.

Per capita earnings of wage earners fell from $1,316 in 1929 to $869 in 1933, this being the average for both full-time and part-time workers, while salaried employes suffered a loss from $2,646 to $1,690. The 1933 figures for salaries, however, do not include salaries for corporation officers, whereas these sums are given for 1929.

The employment decline in 1933 from 1931 was not entirely representative of the situation, the bureau said, because improvement began in 1933.

Canada's January New Bond Issues Cut to $13,730,000

New York, Jan. 29.—Total sales of new Canadian issues in January, 1935, amounted to $13,730,000, as compared with $45,799,000 in January, 1934, according to Dominion Securities Corporation. The sales represented only one issue, an offering of Province of Quebec 2½ per cent bonds due January 2, 1940, which were purchased from the province at 100.78, or a 2.33 per cent basis. As in the case of several other recent borrowers, Quebec received its money at the lowest cost in many years.

The bond market in Canada continues to show the same firm tendency which has characterized it for many months. The great improvement in Canadian finances, which has been one of the contributory causes to the recovery in Canada has resulted in the refunding of many issues at substantial savings to the various municipalities and provinces.

Recently, a number of corporate issues with 5½ per cent and 5 per cent coupons have been called and replaced by new issues with 4½ per cent coupons.

Argentina Central Bank Bill Sponsor Opposes Inflation

Buenos Aires, Jan. 29.—Argentina's monetary policy in connection with the new Central Bank, the bill for the creation of which is now before congress, was briefly explained by Dr. Federico Pinedo, the minister of finance, in a newspaper interview.

In essence, the outline given by Dr. Pinedo reveals that there will be no currency inflation, no increase in circulation, and that the physical volume of gold, as taken over by the new Central Bank from the Caja de Conversion, will remain unchanged. The amount of Argentina's gold stocks is 246,000,000 gold pesos, corresponding to $334,000,000 (at the present devalued gold dollar), and this gold will be revalued at around the official rate of exchange.

This fact came somewhat as a surprise, as most observers had expected that revaluation would be made at the free rate of exchange rather than the official rate.

Auto Industry Plants to Take Peaks in 1935

New York, Jan. 29.—The expansion of automobile sales, which started gradually in 1933 and gained momentum rapidly in 1934 has become more accentuated at the start of 1935.

New records have been established for the attendance at the various automobile shows, with orders in many cities totalling twice those of a year ago, and insistence on immediate delivery general.

After attaining the most phenomenal recovery registered for any industry in 1934, with volume 45 per cent higher than that of 1933, and nearly 100 per cent in excess of the 1932 figures, conservative estimates place sales for 1935 at 20 to 25 per cent larger than last year's.

Outlook For Sales.

This would bring sales of passenger cars and trucks in the United States and Canada in 1935 somewhat higher than 3,500,000 units, which would surpass all totals back to 1929, the peak year for the industry.

When cognizance is taken of the fact, however, that of the 5,621,715 units produced in that year nearly 1,000,000 were carried over into 1930, actual sales in 1935 may approach that record, as of the 1934 production the carry-over into the current year was inconsequential.

Figures May Be Exceeded.

In fact, this preliminary figure may be exceeded by a wider margin than now appears likely, as it is not possible to encompass with estimates the achievements of an industry whose leaders possess the resourceful merchandising intelligence and the expert technical knowledge of automobile manufacturers.

A tremendous market, which will tax productive capacity, undoubtedly lies ahead, and should expand progressively with the diminution of restraining economic factors, according to a survey of the automobile industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

Chamber Asks Business Aid For Home Drive

Lauds Program as Ideal Medium to Stimulate House Construction.

By Karl von Lewinski.

An appeal for business support of the Federal Housing Administration private housing construction program is made by the United States Chamber of Commerce in the Washington Review issued yesterday.

The chamber's construction and civic development committee, in a report made to the board of directors, asserted that the longevity and sound principles of the Federal Housing plan, were obvious.

The report lauded the program as ideally equipped to revive privately financed residential building by stabilizing the home mortgage structure.

It approved also the endeavors of the Housing Administration to set up sound structural standards and to properly enforce zoning restrictions that protect the value of residential neighborhoods.

Obstacles to Housing Program.

In the summary of the difficulties incident to carrying out the program, the report states:

"The chief present obstacles to the early revival of residential building in substantial volume are the levels of building costs compared with rentals, the mortgage moratoria and similar laws, and the possibility of Government competition.

The cooperation of business, labor, and Government is necessary to remove these retarding factors.

Once the way has been cleared for reasonably secure and profitable investment in homes and rental properties, including low-rental projects, a substantial volume of activity will invigorate the capital goods industries."

Bache & Co. Compiles Pamphlet.

Frank J. F. Thiel, resident manager of the Washington offices of J. C. Bache & Co., announces that his firm has compiled a pamphlet on the chances of recovery from present market levels. The book is available on request.

The text takes the view that there are more favorable than unfavorable factors at the present time and looks for early improvement on a progressive scale.

B. & O. Loads Down in Week.

Carloadings on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the week ended January 26 totaled 37,816 cars, of which 24,893 represented revenue freight loaded on the line, while 12,923 cars were received from connections.

The same week last year, there were 25,470 cars loaded on line and 12,319 received from connections, or a total of 37,789.

In the comparison of last week's total with the previous week there was a decrease of 374 cars.

Curb's Prices Close Lower In Most Groups

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Resuming the downward trend in late trading, the curb market closed with losses of fractions to around 2 points today. Virtually all groups shared in the lower price movement, with losses especially prominent among specialties.

The main selling move came around the start of the final hour. Forenoon trading was marked by dull and fairly steady dealings.

Pepperell, Dow Chemical, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Lake Shore, A. O. Smith, Parker Rust Proof and Greyhound Corporation lost around 1 to 2 points. Bunker Hill & Sullivan yielded 3½. Electric Bond & Share, Hiram Walker and American Cyanamid B receded small fractions, while American Gas & Electric, International Petroleum and Swift & Co. were resistant.

Grapefruit, 2.25@2.75 a standard box. Tomatoes (Cuban stock), 3.00@4.00 a standard lug about 30 lbs net. Virginia apples, 1.75@2.00 on No. 1 stock; Utilities and lower grades, 1.25@1.50. Lettuce, 3.75@4.00. Celery, 3.50@3.75 a standard crate.

EGGS—Rather light due to cold weather; small lots selling mostly at 30 to the trade and on commission basis. Dealers not anxious for large lots at over 27@28 a dozen as they expect heavy receipts with warmer weather and anticipate a lower market with heavier receipts.

POULTRY—Rather light; demand fairly good. Yesterday's advances practically unchanged. Leghorn hens mostly 15 lb.; colored hens, large and fat, bulk at 18; few small lots slightly above. Chickens, mostly 16@18, including broilers. Ducks and geese mostly 16. Turkeys, choice young hens, 25; few fancy slightly above. Choice young toms, 22 or slightly above; poor stock as to quality. Guineas, 25@40 each.

HOGS—So far this week rather light by truck due to cold weather; top so far 8.00 paid for choice butcher stock, 200 to 250 pounds average. Other classes as to weight and quality.

CATTLE—Light, steady; veal calves, practical top at 10.00; cows, 1.50@4.50 as to quality; bulls 3.00@4.50; heifers, 3.50 to 5.00; steers, grading common to good, 3.50@6.50.

SHEEP—Light; lambs quotable 4.00@6.00; ewes, 2.00@3.25 as to quality.

Chemical Price Trends Point Lower for Week

New York, Jan. 29.—Price changes were neither many nor of importante in the markets for heavy and fine chemicals last week, the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter will say in its January 28 issue. The general trend was downward. Business in all lines was extremely quiet. Buying was further restricted in most consuming circles; some of this curtailment, that in alkalies, for example, was a puzzle for sellers. Interest in imported chemicals was greatly reduced by the uncertainty of the exchange situation.

Small advances were made in quotations on domestic casein and Japanese sardine meal. Chicago quotations on organic fertilizer materials were reduced.

AIR STEWARDESS

By VIDA HURST

Irene Gardner is stunned when Dr. Bartlett Ralston breaks their engagement so that he may further his brilliant career by marrying Peggy Reagan, spoiled daughter of the eminent Dr. Stephen Reagan.

Irene obtains a job as air hostess and tries to forget her heartbreak. When Virginia Cathcart, another air stewardess, invites her to share an apartment with her and Eve Meadows, Irene gratefully moves in.

Though she resolves to wash her hands of men, Irene is interested to discover that one of the passengers is Stephen Reagan, jr. She encourages his friendship because through him she feels she can strike back at Bart. Steve is utterly charming himself, and Irene finds his eager attentions gratifying.

Steve introduces her to Peggy, and Irene is unimpressed, being only the more bitter to think that Bart prefers this petulant child to her. Steve realizes his sister's shortcomings, and asks Irene to invite Peggy to the apartment. He wishes his sister to observe Irene's sophistication.

TRUE to her promise Irene telephoned Peggy asking her to tea the following Tuesday, and to her surprise the girl accepted her invitation without the air of boredom she usually considered it necessary to assume.

"I'd love to, Irene," Peggy answered much as her own little sister Betty might have said it.

For the first time, Irene felt that there was something about her one might like if it were possible to see beyond her mask of affectations.

Closing the door upon the disorder of Eve's bedroom, Irene swept and dusted the rest of the apartment, and bought fresh flowers, amaryllis and gladioli. But when she had finished these preparations, she looked about her with skeptical eyes. The room was tidy and comfortable and lived in, but compared with the surgeon's palatial home it was undeniably shabby.

Peggy Was Curious.

Irene wondered again why Steve was so anxious for Peggy to see it and what he thought Irene could offer her in the way of entertainment.

Virginia was not at home but expected to come in from Los Angeles at four. Precisely at three-thirty, which was the hour Irene had mentioned, Peggy's smart little car dashed up to the door and Peggy herself, wearing the gayest of yellow sport clothes, jumped out and ran up the stairs. The cigarette she was smoking was stained with lip rouge and her creamy make-up was heavy enough for a woman of forty but otherwise she looked more her age than at any time since Irene had met her. There was frank curiosity in the smoky blue eyes which gazed about the apartment.

"This is terribly nice of you" she gushed in her movie star voice. "I've been simply dying to see how you live. Do all the air hostesses have apartments?"

She Liked Flying.

"No! Some of them live at the Inn but we can live any place we like so long as it's not too far from the airport."

"It must be absolutely fascinating," Peggy sighed. "I suppose you have all sorts of thrilling experiences."

"Not so many, but flying itself is thrilling. I'm perfectly happy so long as I'm in the air."

"I am, too! I came home in a plane, you know. Father wasn't very keen about it, but I simply insisted upon it. I stopped in New York for a few days first. Imagine leaving Newark at 8:30 at night, almost breaking my neck for a last glimpse of the lights, then zooming off in a big shining plane for California."

"It's too bad you can't do more of it if you enjoy it so much," she said sympathetically.

Bart Was Different.

"I like anything that is new and different," declared the other girl. "That's the reason I fell in love with Bart. He's so different from the silly boys I have known."

"Yes, he was different all right," Irene admitted with the old familiar twinge she always felt when his name was mentioned.

"If you'll excuse me a moment, I'll make the tea," she murmured, hoping to evade any further discussion, but Peggy, who appeared to feel quite at home, cried, "Oh, let me come with you! I want to see your kitchen."

"I think it would be lovely to keep house in a place like this. I wish Bart would take an apartment."

"Won't he?"

"Not for awhile. He says—and father agrees with him—that it will be easier for us to live at home, where he can have the use of the laboratory and library."

Bart Telephones.

Her voice sounded so wistful that Irene almost forgot that she was speaking of the man she, too, had expected to marry.

"I had hoped to be an inspiration to Bart in his work," Peggy said plaintively. "But he's so busy I scarcely ever see him."

Irene was busy with the toaster.

"Let's take the tray back in the living room and have our tea," she suggested.

It was while they were sipping the tea and eating the cinnamon toast Peggy had buttered that the telephone rang. Irene answering unsuspiciously, heard Bartlett's voice. Her first thought was that he was calling Peggy, but before he had finished his opening sentence she knew that she was wrong.

"Hello, darling!" Bart said.

Confused by the fact that he had at last telephoned her as well as by the knowledge that Peggy could hear every word she spoke, Irene stammered, "Oh, hello, there! How are you?"

Wanted a Date.

"You haven't forgotten the sound of my voice then?" Bart replied as if pleased.

"No, indeed."

"That's good. I suppose it can be considered something that I don't have to announce myself after a silence of two months."

Peggy was eyeing her calmly over the edge of a blue cup and Irene found herself utterly unable to think of an answer.

"I've called," Bart continued eagerly, "to ask if you will please do one thing for me."

She gripped the telephone tightly. "What is that?"

"Have just one more date with me before I leave the hospital," he pleaded, "for old-time's sake."

If only she dared accept his invitation, and why not? Why shouldn't she take everything which was offered to her? Hadn't he belonged to her first?

Wanted an Answer.

"What's the answer, dear?" Bart begged.

"I'm sorry," she said weakly. "I can't."

Her refusal seemed to make him more eager.

"Why can't you? Aren't we entitled to anything? All the rest of our lives," Bart said passionately, "we are going to be apart."

He spoke as if he himself had no choice in the matter.

"Please don't say anything more," she urged. "I can't talk about it now. I have company."

"Don't mind me," Peggy said brightly as Irene returned to her seat. "I don't tell Steve everything I know."

"Steve hasn't anything to do with it."

"With your not going out with this other man you mean?"

"Yes. He is a very old friend, but I don't want to see him any more. I mean it isn't convenient," Irene faltered, feeling herself more involved with every word.

Invited to Luncheon.

Peggy nodded.

"I see! Well, I must be going. It's been great seeing your apartment. Perhaps you'll have luncheon with me some day?"

"I should like to."

"I'll telephone then to know when you're going to be in town."

After she had gone, Irene sank upon the davenport feeling as if she would faint. What had possessed Bart to call her today? Of all the times he might have phoned he would select the one time Peggy was in her apartment.

She wondered if Peggy could possibly have suspected, but, of course she didn't. She couldn't hear Bart's end of the conversation. Her innocent assumption that Irene's refusal was because she didn't want Steve to know was proof that she had no idea it was her own fiance begging the air hostess to go out with him.

She was lying on the davenport deep in thought when Virginia entered. Dressed in her uniform she came into the room and sank into a chair.

"What do you suppose has happened now?" she demanded.

"You're sweet," Bart murmured. "And I'm in love with you."

"Be careful, Bart! Peggy is watching you."

"Let her!" the doctor retorted.

"I'm disappointed in you," she said. "You might at least play the game, now that you've started it."

"I'm going to marry her," he said sulkily.

"And what a husband you'll make," she cried scornfully. "If Peggy had any idea how you feel, she wouldn't want you."

Bart shrugged.

"Please don't lecture me! I'm not in the mood for it."

His face above hers was grim and unhappy. How different from the old hospital days when he had seemed to her like a god. He had changed since then to a cynical, ambition-ridden man. Or was it she who had changed?

In any case, she had no sympathy for him tonight. After coldbloodedly planning to marry Peggy for his own advantage, the least he could do was to let the other girl alone. But he couldn't. The sight of her with Stephen roused all his masculine vanity. He didn't want to marry her himself, but he couldn't bear seeing her with someone else.

Before the evening was over Irene made up her mind not to see Stephen again after she had kept the engagement they had for the following day. If she couldn't control Bart's actions, she could remove herself from the situation, even if it meant forfeiting her pleasant friendship with Stephen.

But she had not taken Stephen's feelings into consideration, as she was to discover. They were lunching at Lakeside and the quiet clubhouse with its shady veranda and landscaped background was restful and charming. They sat by a window in the dining room where only one other table was occupied. Stephen had ordered cocktails and as they touched glasses Stephen said, "To my sweetheart!"

AUCTION SALES

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 30, 1935—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers, 1431 Eye Street Northwest.

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE BEING A TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING CONTAINING SIX ROOMS AND BATH, ALSO BUILT-IN GARAGE, KNOWN AS 2037 ROSEMONT AVENUE NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 4886 at folio 368 of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned will sell at public auction in front of the premises on WEDNESDAY, THE THIRTIETH DAY OF JANUARY, 1935, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following described land and premises situate in the District of Columbia, and being lot numbered One hundred and twenty-six (126) in Jacob S. Gruver's subdivision of lots in square numbered Twenty-six hundred and eighteen (2618), as per plat recorded in Liber No. 68, folio 77 of the records of the office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia.

TERMS OF SALE: Purchaser to pay one-fourth of the purchase price in cash, the balance in three installments in one, two and three years, respectively, with interest at the rate of six (6) per centum per annum, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser; taxes paid or adjusted to the date of sale; purchaser to pay interest on purchase price from date of sale to date of settlement at six (6) per centum per annum; all conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at the cost of the purchaser; good title or no sale. A deposit of $250.00 will be required at the time of sale and settlement to be within thirty (30) days of the date of sale or deposit forfeited and the property resold at the cost and risk of the defaulting purchaser, after five (5) days' previous advertisement of said resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

MEN—ATTENTION

Many men in and around Washington are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work but want something that is easy to do for a mere existence.

To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability, with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families, my company presents a splendid opportunity. We have a new machine, and those who can within 1 or 2 weeks learn to operate it successfully will earn $30 per week and up. Do not confuse this with the ordinary run of ads; come in and see for yourself. This presents a rare opportunity to men who can qualify for this work who want and need a substantial income. We prefer neat-appearing men between ages of 25 and 45, who have ability to accept the responsibility to do an honest day's work. Apply 738, Investment Building, Wednesday, 10 A. M. ONLY

Late applicants will not be interviewed.

Auto Fatalities.

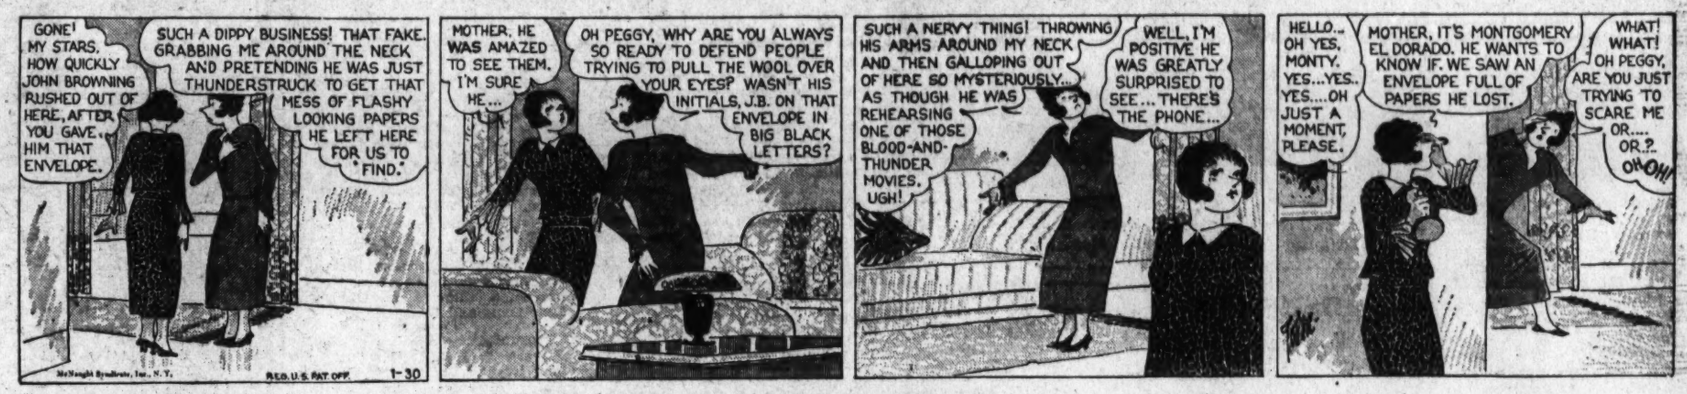

Whene'er the town clock strikes the hour, someone is killed by motor power, some auto climb's a mortal's frame, and ends for him life's pleasant game. Someone intent on kindly deeds leaves women wearing widow's weeds. Someone who goes to pay a bill falls victim to the speed fan's skill. Someone who goes to buy a duck to feed his kids, falls 'neath a truck. Someone who'd aid his fellowman is butchered by a cheap sedan. One who abhors the base and mean is slaughtered by a limousine. Someone who goes to sell his pup is by a roadster mangled up. No man can say, on leaving home, around familiar blocks to roam, that he won't shortly reappear, spread-eagled on a cheap-john bier. Man whispers to his maiden aunt, "I guess downtown I'll gallivant; but I'll come home before it's late, so, dearie, keep your smile on straight." The loving aunt sits up till 10, and then the man comes home again, with undertakers in his train, and coroners who sigh in vain. A speeding car climbed up his back, and left him crumpled in its track. Such tragedies as these take place at every hour, to our disgrace. For when we sit behind the wheel but small compunction do we feel. We have to whiz along the street, and cheap pedestrians we meet, must take their chance of being killed, with vast impatience we are filled to reach the roadhouse where we've planned to dance to music by the band. The reckless driver goes his way, and threatens people every day, and doesn't get the bitters due, until he's killed a jay or two.

Job Insurance Idea Is Sound, Peery Asserts

But Old Age Pension Presents Problem, Governor Adds.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Gov. Peery today expressed the opinion that "industry, which provides reserves for depreciation and obsolescence of machinery, should do something to enable the human element to readjust where unemployment occurs."

His statement was made in expressing the view that "the principle of unemployment insurance is sound," but the State executive said it would be difficult "under existing conditions" to work out a satisfactory old age pension bill.

The Governor indicated his interest in the pension problem, however, and said that while he is opposed to the bill now before Congress he expects to appoint a commission to study it when the legislation is sufficiently advanced to give a better idea of what it may involve.

The personnel of this commission has not been chosen, but it will include representatives of employers, employes and the public will be asked to make a thorough study of application of a national pension plan in this State.

Previously the Governor said he opposed the proposed pension plan because of its "prohibitive" cost to Virginia, which he estimated at $10,000,000 annually. Today he pointed out that this estimate was based on a $30-per-month pension for eligible persons over 65 years of age. Several million dollars a year more would be added to the cost, he said, if Congress should accept the suggestion of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to increase the payment to $50 and reduce the age limit to 60 years.

Homes!

Subsistence Houses Made Available to Veterans.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—Subsistence homesteads will be made available to Virginia veterans, Raymond E. Maxie, veterans' placement officer for the State, announced today.

The Veterans' Administration and the emergency relief administration have worked out a plan under which tracts of from three to ten acres may be acquired and houses of from three to five rooms, equipped with water and electricity, built. These would be sold at cost, ranging from $1,800 to $2,500, and might be paid for by the veterans out of their compensation over a period of 15 or 20 years.

FDIC Settling Deposit Claims At Herndon

Bradshaw Refuses Bond; RFC Offers to Buy Into New Bank.

Officials of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation continued yesterday to pay off claims of depositors in the Herndon (Va.) National Bank, which closed several weeks ago after irregularities had been discovered.

Monday, the first day on which claims were paid, officials paid out $24,000. The total amount paid yesterday has not been totaled. Accounts under $50 are being paid in cash, the larger ones by check as depositors present their claims. Several hundred persons milled about the bank building yesterday as they waited their turn at the money-windows.

It was reported that one man yesterday presented a passbook calling for $6,000, and that no record of his account could be found. A further search for his record is being made. Of the $350,000 in deposits in the bank, about $300,000 will be paid by the Government. This amount represents all the individual deposits up to $5,000 each.

Asa Bradshaw, who was arrested after the bank closed, is still in the Alexandria jail. A neighbor offered to go his bond, but he declined on the ground that the time he served in jail would be deducted from his sentence when it is pronounced.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has indicated it will buy $25,000 in preferred stock of the proposed new Citizens Bank of Herndon to enable it to open. Residents of the community have already bought $25,000 worth of common stock in the proposed bank, and paid prices enough above par to give the bank the surplus of $5,000 it will need to open. It is reported that John B. McDaniel, cashier of the Vienna (Va.) Trust Co., has been chosen cashier of the new Herndon bank.

Taxi Test at Lynchburg.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 29 (AP).—A test of the city's right to regulate taxi cabs and automobiles for hire was started here today when an operator admitted violation of the ordinance and was fined $25 in municipal court in order that he might appeal to higher tribunals.

Maryland Briefs

(Associated Press.)

Cumberland—Judge Albert A. Doub yesterday sentences Robert Lawrence to five years in the Maryland Penitentiary for slaying his uncle, Victor Smith, last August. Lawrence was convicted of manslaughter but the sentence was suspended. He since had been arrested on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Baltimore—Appointment of an assistant welfare director was asked by Thomas J. S. Waxter, municipal welfare director, in a letter yesterday to the board of estimates. He also asked for a social investigator, four senior stenographers and a junior clerk.

Greensboro—W. Byrone Poore has been elected chief of the Greensboro Volunteer Fire Company for the ensuing year. Arthur W. Brumbaugh was named president of the company.

Easton—Fred Gross, colored, was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction by Police Justice John C. North on a charge of hitting former County Commissioner Harry T. Slaughter on the back of the head with a stick of wood.

Chestertown—A jump in the prices of muskrat pelts was reported over the week-end because of scarcity of hides. Heavy snow prevented hunters from visiting their traps and the markets.

Westminster—The Westminster Players, a theatrical group, will hold its first anniversary party tonight. A report of the growth of the organization in the last year is to be made.

Federalsburg—Postponed because of the heavy snowfall last week, the fourth quarterly conference of the Union Methodist Episcopal Church will be held here February 10. District Superintendent W. E. Habbert will preside.
